Bonus Bill Test Won by Patman; Final Vote Today

House in Uproar at End as Inflation Plan Wins, 202-191.

'Let's Pass It Now!' Enthusiasts Shout

Vinson Backers Promise Reversal; Byrns on Losers' Side.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Turmoil shook the House yesterday after an inconclusive roll call gave the Patman bonus bill an eleven-vote margin over the Vinson measure.

The final test will come today. Representative Wright Patman, aggressive Texas Democrat, has an advantage, but Representative Fred M. Vinson, hard-hitting Kentuckian, still has a fighting chance.

A surprise vote yesterday to substitute the Patman printing press money bill for the Vinson bond issue plan gave Patman 202 and Vinson 191.

The roll was called in the committee of the whole. A moment later the committee dissolved and Speaker Byrns, perspiring freely from the excitement, pounded his gavel for order in the House proper.

Patman Agrees to Delay.

Then elderly Representative Taylor, Colorado, acting majority leader, moved for adjournment. Patman's forces, anxious to definitely kill the Vinson bill while certain of the votes, shouted down the adjournment motion.

With a dozen members clamoring for recognition, Patman gained the floor. He explained party leaders had announced there would not be a vote on passage until today and some two score members were absent. He agreed to adjournment.

"I don't want to deprive any member of his right to vote, although I had no part in the agreement," he shouted.

Adjournment followed. American Legion officers resumed their efforts to win support for the Vinson proposal, while the Veterans of Foreign Wars sought to strengthen the Patman lines.

Vinson was undisturbed by the first record vote.

"We'll win tomorrow," he told reporters. "Did you notice how we cut down their lead on every one of the three votes? Many of our men weren't here today because they didn't expect a roll call."

Patman won by 183 to 142 on the first standing vote to decide whether his measure should be substituted for the Vinson bill. A tellers' vote gave Patman 180 and Vinson 157. The roll call followed.

Warns of Veto.

Party lines were smashed as both Speaker Byrns and Snell lined up with Vinson.

Earlier several compromise suggestions were brushed aside without record votes. One of the proposals defeated by an overwhelming voice vote—the Cochran amendment—probably will be heard of again when the bonus issue reaches the Senate because it originated with Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland.

Representative Cochran (Democrat), Missouri, explained his amendment would provide for immediate payment of 79 per cent of the face value of the service certificates in negotiable bonds of small denomination.

"The President," he warned, "will veto the Vinson or the Patman bill. The only thing to do is to compromise. The President has been compromising for the last two years and it's reasonable to assume that he would compromise now.

"What the veteran wants is the money and not your vote for a bill that will get nowhere."

Patman insisted a veteran who had borrowed $500 on a $1,000 certificate would get negotiable bonds

10 Votes Avert Doom of NRA In Senate Fight

By Robert C. Albright.

The complex NRA code structure barely escaped a paralyzing stroke yesterday, when the Senate defeated by 10 votes an amendment restoring the antitrust laws. The vote followed stormy debate and a violent bipartisan attaek on the whole recovery set-up.

Offered as a "rider" to the works bill by Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, the amendment took the Senate completely by surprise. Its 43-to-33 defeat shattered party lines and split the usually intact Senate progressive bloc.

Eighteen Democrats voted with 14 Republicans and 1 Farmer-Laborite for the Borah proposal, while 7 Republicans and 1 Progressive joined 35 Administration Democrats to defeat it.

Managing debate on the bill, Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, nevertheless, refused to oppose the amendment. In fact, he took the floor in support of the Idahoan, arraigned NRA tyranny, and cast his vote for the change.

With Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson out of the city, Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, feverishly marshaled the opposition, and pleaded with the Senate to await the outcome of his own committee's NRA inquiry. After an anxious two hours, he was sustained.

It was the Administration's second success of the day in its fight to hold the works bill unchanged. The first victory came easily. An amendment by Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin, to increase the work relief appropriation to $9,000,000,000 was beaten, 78 to 8.

Specifically, the Borah amendment would have repealed that provision of the recovery act which suspends the antitrust laws, destroying at one fell stroke all price-fixing and production control agreements now written into codes.

The proposal subsequently was amended by Senator Hugo L. Black

To Head 7-Man Board; Labor Given Equal Footing.

U. S. Reports 200,000 Cut in Unemployed in Month.

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt yesterday named Donald R. Richberg head of the NRA.

Richberg will be chairman of a seven-man board, including, besides himself, two representatives of labor, two representatives of industry and two college professors.

The reorganization gave rise to unconfirmed reports that the President had agreed to the Wagner labor disputes bill in a new "rapprochement" with organized labor.

In addition to Richberg, the President appointed the following two new board members:

William P. Witherow, Pittsburgh steel manufacturer and at present a member of the industrial board of NRA.

A. D. Whiteside, president of Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

Walton H. Hamilton, formerly of Yale University.

L. C. Marshall, formerly of Johns Hopkins University.

Whiteside Resigns.

At the time he announced the new appointments, President Roosevelt revealed that Whiteside had submitted his resignation. He announced that Whiteside would be replaced by "a member similarly representative of the industrial point of view."

The President made it clear that the Richberg appointment is temporary, and that he was appointed "for a period prior to the passage of legislation now pending before the Congress for the extension of Title I of the national industrial recovery act."

At the same time it was indicated that Leon Henderson and Blackwell Smith will remain ex-officio members of the board. Henderson is economic adviser and Smith is acting legal adviser. Smith has been acting in the place of Richberg, who will continue as executive director of the National Emergency Council. It also was indicated that A. W. Harriman, who has been frequently mentioned as a possible board chairman, will remain as executive officer.

Confers With Labor Chiefs.

President Roosevelt's announcement followed a conference with three men who are perhaps the most influential labor leaders in America—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and Hillman.

The change in organization was looked upon as a move to meet opposition to the NRA and as a concession to labor. Labor organiza-

Howe's Condition Is 'Unchanged'

Physicians Fear Resistance May Be Weakening.

Louis McHenry Howe, the President's chief secretary, continued yesterday in the twilight zone between life and death, with a turn for the worse expected at any time.

His condition last night was pronounced "unchanged," but physicians feared the remarkable resistance which has sustained him so far may be weakening.

The President, Mrs. Roosevelt and members of the Howe family continue to remain close to the bedside. Besides Mrs. Howe, others now here are Mr. Howe's two children—Hartley, of Boston, and Mrs. Mary Baker, of Urbana, Ill.

Maine House Passes Pension Lottery Bill

By the Associated Press.

Augusta, Me., March 21.—A State lottery bill to finance old-age pensions won a surprising three-vote victory today in the House, but legislative leaders predicted its demise in the Senate.

The measure, providing for a referendum, apportioned 55 per cent of the lottery receipts to supply funds for the $15-a-month pension for persons 65 years or over which was enacted by the Legislature two years ago, but for which no money was appropriated.

Thirty-five per cent of the income would be paid in prizes and 10 per cent would be set aside for administration costs.

Proponents argued the bill would "keep money in Maine for the use of Maine people that is now going into other lotteries."

Estimates were that the bill would bring in $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 annually, while old-age pensions would cost approximately $500,000 to $1,000,000 a year.

D. C. Invaded By Dust Storm From Midwest

Federal Buildings Veiled; Government to Fight Soil Erosion.

Creeping halfway across the Nation in a murky cloud extending 10,000 feet into the sky, the great dust storm of the Southwest and Midwest invaded the East yesterday, bringing grime and discomfort on the first day of spring.

Even as the Administration determined upon a combined drive by seven Government agencies to fasten the Midwest's rich farm soil against the destructive dust storms, the swirling particles of earth from Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas sifted into the District and dirtied the windows of Federal buildings.

To a large extent the storm, which traveled at an estimated speed of 35 miles and hour, passed to the north of the Capital, but by late afternoon it was distinctly visible here. A clay-colored veil hung before the Washington Monument, the Lincoln Memorial, the Capitol and the Library of Congress.

The Weather Bureau said last night that much of the dust would move to the north of the District, falling chiefly in the Northeast areas.

As the Southwest enjoyed part relief from the storm, which moved eastward, Cleveland, on the Great Lakes; Dayton and Cincinnati, Ohio; and St. Louis, on the Mississippi, suffered heavily.

Over Ohio Valley.

The dust clouds hovered above these cities and generally over the Ohio Valley and pushed into the Appalachian Mountains, where visibility was reduced to less than a mile.

Operating jointly, Secretaries Ickes and Wallace determined to transfer the Soil Erosion Service of the Interior Department and a portion of the Civilian Conservation Corps working on soil erosion to the Agriculture Department.

They will form part of an entirely new organization, it was explained, which will include those parts of the AAA, Forest Service, Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, Bureau of Agricultural Engineering and Bureau of Plant Industry, which now are concerned with various phases of the soil erosion problem.

It is unlikely that a Bureau of Soil Erosion will be organized, Department of Agriculture officials said, pointing out that such a move probably would require legislative action.

Crop Damage Great.

Stifling conditions Wednesday abated in most of the Western area yesterday. Damage done in the Nation's "bread basket," the great wheat country of the West and Southwest, was beyond estimation by crop experts.

In Kansas churches farmers knelt and prayed for rain, while Gov. Landon appealed to Washington for assistance to stop soil blowing.

What really is happening, the Soil Erosion Service here said, is the migration of much rich, fertile soil to the Eastern seaboard.

Dr. Charles E. Kellogg, acting chief of the soil survey of the Bureau of Chemistry, recommended

Conspiracy Alleged in $4,853,000 Allotment for Irrigation Unit.

The District's special grand jury, called into being especially to inquire into alleged graft in the PWA, yesterday returned an indictment charging six Texans and one Washingtonian with conspiring to defraud the Government.

Those indicted were Charles R. Olberg, an engineer examiner in charge of irrigation with the PWA in Washington; Perry A. Welty, formerly an engineer examiner with the PWA State office at Fort Worth, Tex.; Harry W. Cole, president of the California Redwood Association and vice president of the Hammond & Little River Redwood Co., Ltd.; Leonard S. Hammond, vice president of the Hammond Lumber Co., San Francisco, Calif; James P. Barry, an engineer with the Hammond & Little River Co.; Frank P. McElwrath, Corsicana, Tex., a contractor and builder; and William A. Harding, Raymondville, Tex., a director of the Willacy County Water Control and Improvement District, of Willacy, Tex.

Tracing the history of the alleged conspiracy, John W. Fihelly, assistant United States attorney, said that the Willacy County district applied for a loan from the PWA for an irrigation project in 1934. The original plans were approved and were passed by Olberg, though modifications were later permitted. When these changes were submitted to Welty, an engineer examiner, the "conspiracy began," Mr. Fihelly said.

Objects to Plans.

Welty objected to the plans and sought to have them changed so that a "high and low pressure pipe system" might be substituted for the "open canal and gravity system."

Shortly after he recommended the change Welty is alleged to have changed positions to become a member of the Willacy County board as an engineer, having, it is alleged, been offered the position by William A. Harding, a director of the board.

The Government charged that Welty joined with the other defendants and "entered into a conspiracy" to have only redwood used in the pipe pressure system for its 250 miles of length. Barry and Welty, is was alleged, wrote the specifications so that they "would be burdensome and onerous" to bidders not using redwood.

After the plans were completed, they were sent to Washington, where Olberg, it was alleged, was supposed to approve them. It was charged that he had passed on the original plans and had corresponded with others of the alleged conspiracy by telegram.

The Government also charged that Olberg had agreed to take a position with the board, the offer having been made to him many months before the irrigation project neared final shape. His pay was to jump from $6,000 to $10,000.

Mr. Fihelly, in summing up the alleged conspiracy, said that it consisted of an attempt to defraud the United States of its right to have the national industrial recovery act administered in a fair and effective manner; of its right to have the contracts let by competitive bidding; of its right to freely and fully contract in all matters concerning its property and moneys, and of the conspiracy to deprive the Government of the faithful, honest and conscientious service of Charles R. Olberg.

$4,853,000 Allotment.

An allotment of $4,853,000 was made by Secretary Ickes for the project. The allotment never got beyond the embryo stage, being cut short when the investigation began. None of the money ever was actually expended, and the Willacy project, so far as the Government is concerned, still is in the blue-print stage.

Leslie C. Garnett, United States attorney, said that he would wait a reasonable time before he would force arraignment of the defendants. He intimated that all would be tried in the local courts, the offense, if any there was, being committed in the District.

Unofficial word from Mr. Garnett's office was that a profit of

Hitler Rejects Protests From Paris and Rome; General Parley Slated

Ex-Allied Powers and Germany May Join a Security Conference

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

London, March 21.—Strong possibility that the proposed meeting of French, British and Italian statesmen in Italy next month may be turned into a more general conference on a "new deal" to replace the Versailles Treaty was widely discussed in well-informed quarters here tonight.

A hint by Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, in the House of Commons that Germany would be welcomed to this parley of the former allied powers on Adolf Hitler's rearmament schemes, was seen as presaging a general European conference to consider the current crisis.

Diplomats considered it more than likely that the conference will include Russia, Poland, members of the Little Entente—Rumania, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia—and other interested powers.

The whole skein of interlocking security treaties, air pacts and other peace moves being pushed by France, Italy and England would be gone over with the possibility of evolving a new alignment that would in effect take the place of the Versailles pact.

A British spokesman said the three-power conference, to be held in northern Italy, might be enlarged to include Germany—and he hinted "others" possibly would be asked to attend.

The French of course still oppose outright treaty revision, and prefer action through the League of Nations, to which she has appealed.

Roosevelt to Keep Out of 'Witches' Cauldron;' Our Pact a Makeshift.

By Elliott Thurston.

The United States will make no representations to Germany unless better reasons appear for doing so than are now evident.

For while Hitler's conscription edict infringed our separate treaty of peace as well as the Versailles Treaty, the Administration sees nothing to be gained, and much to be hazarded, by raising an issue over it—especially in the face of Hitler's contemptuous treatment of French and Italian protests.

Moreover, the Roosevelt Administration is the less inclined to make an issue over our treaty because of its nature and origin. It originated with the Harding Administration which was committed against the Versailles Treaty because of the league. That Administration came into office to find that we were still technically at war with Germany because we had signed no peace with her, having refused to ratify the Versailles Treaty.

Accordingly a substitute and separate treaty had to be drafted. It was put together by taking the Versailles Treaty, cutting out the league sections, and then lumping into a sort of catch-all clause, language ostensibly designed to protect such "rights and advantages" as might have accrued to us under the Versailles document had we signed it. Into this catch-all clause went mention, among other things, of Part V

Mass Slayings Of Spies Laid To Nazi Army

French War Chief Tells 'Deputies the Frontier Is Well Manned.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 21.—Louis Felix Maurin, war minister, told the Chamber of Deputies army committee today that the general staff has its plans all ready in case of a war which he said, however, was not expected.

The cabinet member's statement, outlining the nation's plans in case of a conflict, came on the heels of his government's protest to Germany on the rearming of the Reich and an appeal to Geneva to examine Germany's alleged violation of the Versailles Treaty.

Maurin assured questioners that adequate garrisons were assembled at forts near the Rhine, that troops from other frontiers had been moved to strategic points to facilitate quick movement and that the manning of vital places was assured.

The minister declared that there had been mass executions of spies in Germany in recent weeks, that Germany was feverishly engaged in the production of war materials and that large stocks of foodstuffs had been purchased abroad and stored for army use.

France accused Hitler's Reich of attempting to sabotage efforts to guarantee the peace of Europe and cited Germany to answer before the League of Nations.

The European Crisis

Hitler refused to accept French and Italian protests against re-armament but left a door open to discussion.

A conference of powers on European security, Germany included, to replace the Versailles Treaty was foreseen in London as Parliament re-echoed to warnings of war.

France, irritated by Germany's blunt response to her protest, pushed league action.

League of Nations planned to convene first week of April for crucial session.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Berlin, March 21.—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler tonight curtly spurned protests from Italy and France against his re-armament program. He refused to accept their arguments that Germany was guilty of violating the Treaty of Versailles.

The German chancellor ignored united action of the former allied powers, and calmly awaited arrival Sunday of a British diplomatic mission to discuss the next step in Europe's greatest crisis since the World War.

Through his foreign minister, Baron Konstantin von Neurath, der Fuehrer accepted the Italian and French notes—practically identical in wording—and then told the envoys who relayed them to Wilhelmstrasse that "the motivation given by the French (and Italian) government for its protest did not do justice to the actual situation."

Rejected the Note.

An official communique on the French note said that Von Neurath then declared:

"Therefore, on the part of Germany it must be rejected."

Developments in the storm provoked by Hitler's announcement he plans to disregard the treaty and build a 500,000-man conscript army for Germany, included:

Baron von Neurath told both envoys their protests could not be accepted as valid, holding the former allies had abrogated the military clauses of the Versailles Treaty by failing to disarm.

In London, Parliament was told Europe is "heading for war," but

Truck Kills Boy; Driver Arrested

Son of Justice Department Attorney Is Victim.

Struck by a bakery truck near his home, Joseph Hill Zimmerman, 3½-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Milfrod Zimmerman, of Sligo Park, Md., was killed yesterday.

The body was picked up by Denzel Sanchez, of Silver Spring, driver of the truck and carried into the Zimmerman home. Physicians said the boy died of a broken neck.

Shortly after the accident Sanchez was arrested and charged with manslaughter. He was released after posting $500 bond.

Surviving Joseph are his mother and father, who is an attorney with the Department of Justice, and a brother, Stanley, 14 months old. His body will be taken to Kansas City today for burial.

Sulphuric Acid Sears 2 Pupils

Roosevelt High Boy Drops Bottle; He and Girl Are Burned.

Spattered with sulphuric acid when a bottle of the chemical was dropped on the laboratory floor at Roosevelt High School during class, two 17-year-old students were severely burned yesterday.

Miss Elinor Galleher, of the 5500 block of Ninth street northwest, and Christopher Smith, of the 900 block of Farragut street, were treated by Dr. James A. O'Keefe, of the 5400 block of Thirteenth street, and taken to Emergency Hospital.

Physicians said Miss Galleher's burns were serious. She remained at Emergency.

Smith was given first aid, and then was taken to Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, where he was treated for burns about his eyes.

Officials at the school said young Smith was holding the bottle of acid and it slipped from his hands.

375,000 Midwest Farmers Sign For AAA's Corn-Hog Program

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, March 21.—The Government's vast corn-hog reduction program, although bitterly attacked, has enlisted approximately 375,000 farmers in five Midwestern States for 1935, and tonight millions of dollars in AAA payments under last year's contracts still are pouring in.

The number of signatures on new contracts is described as fully up to AAA expectations in Iowa and Nebraska. Signing is lagging in Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma.

In Iowa, 127,500 farmers have signed for this year, somewhat under last year's total of 176,000. Farmers, however, are taking a larger percentage of land out of production, and it is expected approximately as much land will be under contract in Iowa this year as last.

So far 76,808 have signed contracts in Nebraska—a larger number than on the corresponding date last year.

In Missouri, approximately 80,000 have signed. Although 95,000 are expected, J. W. Burch, State corn-hog administrator for Missouri, said there is little opposition.

"The reduction," he said, "is largely the result of consolidation and the dropping out of small producers who have too limited an acreage to benefit much from the program."

However, Dan D. Casement, Manhattan, Kans., livestock breeder and rancher, wired Secretary of Agriculture Wallace today, criticizing production control plans generally and adding:

"You say this (the lifting yesterday of restrictions on spring wheat planting) is for the benefit of the consumer. How about consumer of pork? His resentment of your tax has slumped hog prices $1.10 in ten days.

"Why not confess failure of entire cock-eyed scheme * * *?"

The number signed in Kansas is 55,286, about 15,000 less than expected, while 33,607 Oklahomans, or 5,501 under the number expected, have signed.

The final article in a series giving a Catholic viewpoint, written by Frederick Vincent Williams, appeared in The Post yesterday. An opposing opinion—the opinion of official Mexico—will be put forth in a series of articles by Dr. Luis Quintanilla, of the Mexican Foreign Service, beginning today.

Together, these uncensored articles comprise the first complete close-up presented of the most serious crisis between church and state in many years. You can not afford to miss them.

Dozen Indicted in Harlem Riot; Reds Accused, Face Deporting

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 21.—Twelve persons were indicted today on charges growing out of the Harlem riot as the grand judy plunged into an investigation of District Attorney William C. Dodge's charge that Communists were responsible for the outbreak.

Threatening them with deportation, the prosecutor said:

"The Reds have been boring into our institutions for a long time, but when they incite to riot it is time to stop them."

The indictments against a dozen of the 120 prisoners rounded up during the wild disorders which began Tuesday night and continued through part of yesterday, charged them with assault, burglary, rioting and unlawful assembly.

A denial that Communists inflamed the mobs that were set in motion by false reports that a Negro youth had been beaten to death was voiced by Harry Gannes, acting editor of the Daily Worker, Communist organ.

Declaring Communists had been specifically warned against rioting and looting, Gannes said the outbreak could be traced to economic causes.

Dodge declared, however, that he had been studying Communist activity in Harlem for some time and had gathered evidence indicating they were entirely responsible for the trouble.

"Half of the trouble in the labor unions is caused by reds," he said. "They have been safe because we are sticklers for free speech, but when that free speech undermines our laws and causes riots, drastic action must be taken."

With tension still high in the vast Negro quarter, more than 400 policemen patrolled the area where stores were wrecked and approximately 100 persons injured in the furious fighting.

The 16-year-old Negro youth who started the original trouble was placed under police guard today when he received a postcard saying: "Get out of the city or we will burn you alive."

Senators Hear Van Sweringen Deals Attacked

Jones DeniesBrothers Have Applied for Loan of $75,000,000.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Plans of O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen, the Cleveland railroad operators, to reorganize the Missouri Pacific with the help of RFC money yesterday came under fire before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, which is considering an investigation of railroad financing.

As the representative of an independent bondholders committee, Maxwell Brandwen, New York attorney, charged that the Van Sweringens have approached the RFC for $75,000,000 with which to retain control of the Missouri Pacific, now in receivership.

This figure was disputed later in the day by Chairman Jesse H. Jones, of the RFC, who declared that no specific sum had been applied for, but that he "understood" the Van Sweringens are proposing a $175,000,000 bond issue as the basis for a reorganization.

Questioned further as to the amount the RFC would be asked to put up, Mr. Jones replied guardedly, "I don't think they've put a limit to it." He added that the RFC will make a detailed examination of estimates submitted by the Van Sweringens before making any commitments.

Bondholders' Contention.

The Missouri Pacific already has obtained more than $23,000,000 from the RFC, none of which has been paid back, and a new loan of $75,000,000 would swell to almost $100,000,000 the amount the Government corporation has in this road.

It is the contention of the bondholders committee, as set forth yesterday by Mr. Brandwen and the day before by Dr. Charles A. Beard, the historian and economist, that such a loan would return the railroad to the Van Sweringens and a group of bankers headed by J. P. Morgan & Co.

The Morgan group has advanced $48,000,000 to the Van Sweringens, it is contended, and would be the first to be protected by a continuance of the Cleveland brothers' control. The latter obtained the Missouri Pacific in the first place, it is charged, without the payment of a cent in cash.

"Instead of granting this loan they ought to put the Van Sweringens in jail," Senator James Couzens (Republican), of Michigan, hotly declared at the hearing.

"Belongs to Bondholders."

"And if Mr. Jones has under consideration any plans with the Van Sweringens," he added later, "he, too, ought to be put in jail. The Van Sweringens are out; the railroad belongs to the bondholders."

Under plans of the committee, which is headed by Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, the RFC chairman, together with officials of the Interstate Commerce Commission, will be questioned about loans to railroads.

Asked about Senator Wheeler's resolution for an investigation of railroad financing, Mr. Jones asserted he had no "objection" to such an inquiry. He declined to go into details about his recent conferences with the Van Sweringens, further than to say their reorganization plan calls for a part payment to bondholders.

Checking on Road.

"They've made no application, or anything like an application, for $75,000,000," he said. "They may hope they can get that much here—or part here and the rest somewhere else. We are checking on the paying ability of the Missouri Pacific and until we get that done we can't talk intelligently on any plan."

The RFC also has under consideration a plan for the reorganization of the Denver & Rio Grande Western, a half interest in which is held by the Missouri Pacific. Under the proposal, according to Mr. Jones, fixed charges of this road would be scaled down by two-thirds.

The chairman announced, meantime, that former Senator Hubert D. Stephens, of Mississippi, has been sworn in as an RFC director, and that Charles T. Fisher, jr., will take over his duties on the board Monday. He added that Earl B. Schwulst, of the RFC staff, has been named president of the new RFC Mortgage Co.

Roosevelt Names Jefferson Group

As Presidential members of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission, which will formulate plans for a permanent memorial to the memory of the third President on the "apex" block, President Roosevelt yesterday named the following:

Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, Undersecretary of the Treasury; Joseph P. Tumulty, former secretary to President Wilson, and Hollins N. Randolph, all of Washington. Both Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Randolph are descendants of Thomas Jefferson.

The appointments were made under a joint resolution of Congress, authorizing creation of a memorial commission. Three members were to be named by the President, three Senators were to be appointed by the Vice President, three Representatives were to be chosen by the Speaker, and three others were to be named by the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation.

Inflationists in the House; Doughton for Governor? The Belligerent Maverick.

—By Raymond Clapper—

The significant thing about the House action on bonus legislation is the factor that inflationist sentiment is playing. It had a good deal to do with the preliminary victory of the Patman bonus bill over the rival Vinson bill.

In the closing argument for his bill which would pay the bonus by issue of $2,000,000,000 in greenbacks, Patman's trump card was a letter of indorsement from Senator Elmer Thomas, leader of the inflationists in Congress. As he closed his final plea, Patman read the Thomas letter praising the currency expansion feature of the Patman bill.

If paying the veterans were the only object, the Vinson bill would do just as well. It leaves the raising of the money to the Treasury, which probably would mean a bond issue. Most of the Administration leaders voted for this plan. But inflationist sentiment tipped the balance in favor of Patman's greenback plan.

No sooner had the cloakroom doors swung behind the departing majority leader than Senator Borah threw in an amendment to the works relief bill proposing to restore antitrust provisions which had been suspended by NIRA.

Senator Glass was in charge of the works bill for the Administration, but he found the Borah amendment so in accord with his own anti-NRA ideas that he welcomed it with open arms.

Glass told the Senate about a small printing shop proprietor who had been stood up for an assessment by an NRA code authority and asked him what should be done about it.

"I advised him to tell them to go to blank," said Senator Glass, who hardly ever swears in Senate debate.

Senators Harrison and J. Ham Lewis, Robinson's lieutenants, became alarmed as Ashurst and other Democrats indicated they would vote for the Borah amendment.

The question the lieutenant leaders had to decide was mether to chance a vote at once or prolong the debate until Senator Robinson returned today. To wait would further delay final disposition of the works bill and the Administration Senators are trying to get it through before Huey Long returns from Louisiana Monday. After a half hour of busy cloakroom work, enough votes were rounded up to beat the Borah amendment and the acting leaders let it go to the immediate roll call. The unsung hero of the brief storm was Leslie Biffle, Democratic pair clerk in the Senate. He was chasing around in and out of cloakrooms like a fox terrier, but he delivered his votes.

Some in the galleries thought Senator Borah looked relieved when his amendment lost. During his service, the longest in the Senate, he has succeeded in raising more issues of major importance and having his name attached to less legisltaion than almost any other member.

Col Louis Howe fooled the doctors yesterday. To the amazement of every one around the sick room in the White House, who doubted if he would survive through the night, he sat up in bed, had his breakfast and talked about NRA.

Wild cattle were named after Representative Maury Maverick, of Texas, and he has been living up to the family name. Though a new member, he has talked on the floor almost as much as Blanton. When a fellow Representative referred disparagingly to the wild mavericks of the House, this particular Maverick looked him up in the cloak room and they almost had a fist fight. Maverick wears Texas clothes most of the time. But he was reported around the State Department the other day dressed up like a dude and carrying a cane. The man who saw him took a second look and says he couldn't have been mistaken.

Word from Arkansas is that Senator Robinson is expected to run for reelection and defy Huey Long to do his worst.

For two years there have been recurring rumors that the Senate majority leader would go in the Supreme Court. Long recently renewed his threats to go into Arkansas and prevent Robinson from returning to the Senate next year. It will be a distasteful fight, but Arkansas friends are of the opinion that Robinson would rather fight it through than go out by a side door.

When the League of Nations issue was before the Senate, most concern was expressed over the implications of article 10, which pledged members of the league to preserve the territorial integrity and political independence of members against external aggression.

In the present European crisis, however, it is article 11 that would have brought the United States directly into the situation. France has asked that the league council be summoned in accordance with article 11, which reads in part as follows:

"Any war or threat of war, whether immediately affecting any of the members of the league or not, is hereby declared a matter of concern to the whole league, and the league shall take any action that may be deemed wise and effectual to safeguard the peace of nations. In case any such emergency should arise the secretary general shall on the request of any member of the league forthwith summon a meeting of the council."

4-Year Terms Urged For Representatives

To keep Representatives from being regarded as "fly-by-night statesmen," former Representative James M. Beck, of Pennsylvania, advocated yesterday that their terms be extended from two years to four.

Beck was testifying before the House committee on the election of the President, Vice President and Representatives in Congress in behalf of a resolution by Representative Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, to increase the term by a constitutional amendment.

"The two-year term has been a contributing cause in the lowering of the prestige of the House," Beck asserted, and predicted opposition would come principally from the Senate because "they're jealous of what they believe to be their rightful prestige."

Missourian Hits Regime Before Women's Club.

Representative Dewey Short (Republican), Missouri, yesterday reminded an audience of nearly 200 women that he is "still a bachelor and a candidate for matrimony."

He accused the Administration of repudiating the Democratic platform, of fostering "the most tyrannical, goading and meddlesome bureaucracy the wrold has ever ever known" and of maintaining "usurpers and plotters that are substituting governmental reorganization for promised recovery."

Instead of giving the country a balanced budget, as promised, he said, the Administration has given it "two budgets—both unbalanced." He accused Congress of closing its eyes, holding its nose and voting for the work relief bill. He pictured the Nation as "on the bring of bankruptcy" and predicted that if something is not done to save it the voters will substitute for the alphabetical agencies "SOS PDQ and GOP" in 1936.

Getting Relief A Poker Game, Writer Holds

Dr. Breckinridge Charges FERA Distributions Are Without Logic.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 21.—Current methods of distributing Federal relief funds to the States were attacked as a "poker game" today by Prof. Sophonisba P. Breckinridge, University of Chicago social scientist, writing in the Social Service Review.

The publication is edited by Grace Abbott, former chief of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor. Dr. Breckinridge, a veteran welfare leader, was an American delegate to the 1933 Pan-American Conference at Montevideo.

"Does anyone," the magazine article inquired, "even the Federal Administrator himself, understand why such very large percentages of the relief burden of certain States are carried by FERA, while so much less is done for other States?"

Best Poker Face Wins.

Pointing out that Kansas, with 15 per cent of her population on relief, received only 67.8 per cent of her relief funds from the FERA, while North Carolina, with 8 per cent on relief, received 98.6 per cent, Dr. Breckinridge wrote:

"The Federal Emergency Relief act of 1933 gave the administrator a free hand except for the first half of the first $500,000,000 that he had for relief funds. That half was to be distributed to the different States on a statutory matching basis.

"Since then the administrator has depended entirely on his own discretion, and it would seem to outsiders as if he had been playing a game of poker with the Governors of the different States, and as if the Governors who were able to go to Washington with the best poker faces came back with the largest percentage grants."

The article cited other comparative figures as follows:

"Virginia, with only 7 per cent of the population on relief, gets 87 per cent of her relief expenditures from the Federal Government and West Virginia, with 22 per cent on relief, gets only 85.5 per cent.

Says No Logic Used.

"Drought-stricken South Dakota, with 35 per cent on relief, got 93.5 per cent of her relief expenditures from the Federal Administration; but Arkansas, with only 16 per cent on relief, got 95 per cent; similarly, Mississippi, with 13 per cent on relief, got 99.2 per cent of her expenditures; Louisiana, with only 13 per cent, got 98 per cent of her expenditures, and Tennessee, with only 11 per cent on relief, got 96 per cent. * * *

"There does not seem to be 'rhyme or reason' in a system that gives, for example, the State of Oregon, with 10 per cent of its population on relief, 93.4 per cent of its relief expenditures, and Washington, with 11 per cent on relief, only 81 per cent. * * *

"It is not easy to understand why Michigan, with 16 per cent of her people on relief, should get only 64.3 per cent of her expenditures while Wisconsin, with 14 per cent on relief, should get 77.9 per cent, and Indiana, with 13 per cent on relief, should get only 62.6 per cent of her expenditures."

Food Bill Foes In Final Fight On Plan Today

Move to Take Remaining Teeth From Tugwell Proposal Slated.

A final stand to romev the remaining teeth in the modified Copeland fod and drug bill will be made in the Senate Commerce Committee today, when that group meets for final action on the controversial measure, aldeady approved in principle by the President.

The meeting was called coincident with word from the White House that the President will send a message to Congress urging enactment of the legislation.

Broadly revised since the so-called "Tugwell pure food bill" provoked a tempest of bitter criticism at the last session of Congress, approval of the measure now pivots largely on one outstanding issue.

As the bill is now written, it would give the Agriculture Department's food and drug administration jurisdiction over cases of alleged false advertising of food, drugs and cosmetics. This generally is unacceptible to business.

Several of the more than 100 witnesses testifying on the measure before the Commerce committee insisted jurisdiction be shifted to the Federal Trade Commission, which, they argued, is more thoroughly versed in business problems.

Preliminary to today's meeting, Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, author of the bill, conferred at the White House with President Roosevelt, Undersecretary of Agriculture Rexford Guy Tugwell, and W. G. Campbell, head of the Food and Drug Administration.

Afterward, Senator Copeland said the President "was very sympathetic toward the legislation," but declined to commit the President as to details. Appearance of Tugwell at the White House with Copeland was the first time this session the Undersecretary of Agriculture has identified himself with the bill which formerly bore his name.

Strachey 'Trial' Brings Protest From Lawyer

Hays Clashes With U.S. Aid for Quizzing Author on Red Pamphlets.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 21.—Arthur Garfield Hays, veteran New York lawyer, vigorously objected today to the manner in which Evelyn John St. Loe Strachey's deportation hearing was conducted.

Hays, defending the young British economist, and William J. Zuker, immigration inspector presiding at the sessions, engaged in a heated clash after Zucker had summarized the evidence by which the Government seeks to expel Strachey from the country as an alien Communist.

Zuker's introduction of Communist pamphlets with the request that the defendant advance his opinions of them spurred Hays' outburst.

"On what theory," he demanded, "are you pulling out Communist materials and asking Strachey to state his views on them?"

"Put your objections in a brief," Zuker rejoined, "and they will be submitted to the Secretary of Labor for a final decision. I'm running this hearing."

"I don't like your attitude," the attorney shot back. "I never heard of an Anglo-Saxon hearing conducted along these lines."

Through most of the day Zuker read excerpts from Strachey's books and articles into the record.

The writer then endeavored to show that in each of them he had merely set down his analysis of current political movements, had limited his works to expressions of his point of view and statements of facts and that none of them could be interpreted as advocacy of the overthrow of the United States Government by violence.

Private Preview Of Art Arranged

Plans for a private preview of the 428 oil paintings in the Corcoran Gallery's fourteenth biennial exhibition, which will be opened to the public next Sunday, were announced yesterday. It will be held Saturday night. Among those expected to attend are Eugene Speicher, first prize winner, and several members of the jury on awards.

Arrangements are being made to accommodate several thousand invited guests. They will enter through the New York avenue doorway and signs will direct them to the several galleries which have been reserved for the show, one of the largest ever held at the Corcoran. A string orchestra has been engaged to play.

Speicher, whose "Red Moore" won the W. A. Clark first prize of $2,000 and the Corcoran gold medal, will be present, along with Jonas Lie, Victor Higgins and George Harding, who served on the jury.

Bobbed Hair May Lead Women to Baldness

Dallas, Tex. (U.P.).—Many women will be bald-headed in a few years if they persist in the desire to have bobbed hair, silver locks like Jean Harlow's, or continue to get cheap permanent waves, according to P. A. Thomas, Chicago scalp specialist, who visited here.

Thomas, who has treated 250,000 heads for scalp diseases, said blondes have a 25 per cent greater tendency toward baldness than brunettes or redheads. This is because they have more delicate hair and scalps, he says.

Mrs. Humphrey Chapin to Sue Mother-in-Law for $500,000

WomanWho Called Society 'Washtub' Aristocracy' Charges Alienation.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 21.—Mrs. Mary Alexander Dahlberg Chapin, who once left Chicago and the "400" she branded "washtub aristocracy," is planning to return from Mexico City, soon to file suits for a divorce from Humphrey Chapin and $500,000 for alienation of affections against her mother-in-law, Mrs. E. C. Green, of Buffalo, N. Y., her attorney, Samuel A. Rinella, announced today.

The former wife of Bror Dahlberg, president of the Celotex Co., resented efforts of her present husband and his mother, who is the wife of a vice president of a "Statler" group of hotels, to gain her consent to a Mexican divorce, said Rinella.

Mrs. Chapin will charge cruelty in her suit, Rinella said. She told him, he said, her husband and mother-in-law are virtual prisoners in Mexico City as a result of an order forbidding them to leave the Mexican capital without first paying her bills.

Since the order has been signed, Rinella said he was informed, Chapin and his mother have been besieged by collectors, process servers and lawyers. They have locked themselves in their home and disconnected the telephone.

Mrs. Chapin and Dahlberg were divorced when she refused to live longer in Chicago, where she said at the time she felt society had failed to accord her sufficient recognition. She settled in Europe and sometime later married Chapin, Yale graduate and grandson of a former president of the General Electric Co.

King Cites Need Of School Funds

Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, yesterday urged the District Commissioners to place the needs for public schools high on any list of projects they may submit to the PWA after passage of the $4,000,000 public works bill.

He also reiterated his interest in clearing the Potomac River of pollution and in obtaining funds to begin constructoin of the Municipal Center.

Whilt the sewage disposal plant will remove much of the pollution from the river, he said that Rock Creek and Anacostia River must be similarly cleared before the Potomac becomes sanitary.

The Senate District Committee is expected to report favorably next week on a bill to authorize the District Commissioners to borrow money from the PWA to construct the court units of the Municipal Center.

U. S. Attorney In Mellon Case Flays Tax Law

'Technical Constructions Defying Common Sense' Are Criticized.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, March 21.—Robert H. Jackson, chief counsel for the Government in the Andrew W. Mellon tax case, today charged "technical constructions that defy common sense" in the income tax laws have permitted stepping-up of wealth "under the disguise of nontaxable reorganizations."

The attorney made this assertion just before taking off by airplane for a Washington conference with his superiors. He left Fred R. Shearer, an assistant, in charge of the Government's case against Mellon to continue tedious cross-examination concerning bookkeeping technicalities of the McClintic-Marshall Corporation's merger with Bethlehem Steel in 1931.

The Government, at a hearing before the Board of Tax Appeals, is trying to collect $3,089,000 additional tax from Mellon on his 1931 income, claiming $1,000,000 of this is due as his share of alleged profits obtained from a 30 per cent interest in McClintic-Marshall.

Comment on Tax Law.

"The complicated nature of the McClintic-Marshall issue illustrates the regrettably technical state of the income tax law," said Jackson.

He asserted the issue is governed by the revenue law of 1928, and a Treasury regulation signed by Mellon himself as Secretary in 1929, and added that earlier income tax laws had been much more strict in relation to mergers.

"The Congress attempted to provide a way by which business could readjust itself and freely expand," said Jackson. "Those for whom these benefits were provided and their advisers have abused the privilege so extensively that they endanger the very continuance of the privilege.

Technical Constructions.

"The more liberal provisions have become involved in technical constructions that defy common sense and have been used to permit the stepping up of wealth into something essentially different and vastly more valuable under the disguise of nontaxable reorganizations."

The Mellon hearing is now in its fifth week. Frank J. Hogan, chief counsel for Mellon, disclosed today he had 29 more witnesses to call—about 20 of them living in New York. By agreement of counsel, it was decided to shift the hearing to New York to take their testimony upon completion of the hearing in Pittsburgh, now expected about two weeks hence.

L. M. McDonald Is Held at Southern Pines in Auto Tragedy.

By the Associated Press.

Southern Pines, N. C., March 21.—A coroner's inquest into the death of Mrs. William Quilter, of Newburgh, N. Y., wife of the general superintendent of the Erie Railroad, recessed today until 10 a. m. tomorrow after witnesses testified the woman, intoxicated, fell to her death from the automobile of L. M. McDonald, former Washington resident.

The recess was taken at the request of W. D. Matthews, counsel for Quilter, who was expected to reach here tonight.

McDonald, who said he had no permanent address since leaving Washington several years ago following his mother's death there, and who said he was a native of Mississippi, remained in jail without privilege of bail. He declined to discuss his occupation or to give any account of himself.

Youth Tells of Tragedy.

The coroner's jury had heard James Byrd, Southern Pines youth, recount how Mrs. Quilter fell from McDonald's car in front of a roadhouse near here, and how the machine continued on without slacking speed.

Mrs. Quilter died at Moore County Hospital about 1:30 a. m. of a fractured skull.

Prior to Byrd's testimony, McDonald took the stand to tell of the night's events. He said he was so drunk he did not remember anything after he and Mrs. Quilter, accompanied by her maid, Mrs. Adeline Grinder, formerly of Greenville, N. J., went to the roadhouse about two miles from here where Mrs. Quilter was fatally injured. He said Mrs. Quilter had taken more liquor than he had himself.

Says She Fell From Car.

Byrd said he saw McDonald put Mrs. Quilter in the car as they prepared to leave—in the front seat beside him. Mrs. Quilter fell out as McDonald went into second gear, he testified, and the car sped on without slackening speed. Byrd said he and a companion ran to Mrs. Quilter, to find her unconscious. They called an ambulance.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Quilter is survived by two children, aged 6 and 16, who had been spending the winter here.

McDonald said he had roomed at her leased home here for several weeks. After supper last night, he testified, "we went out to get some whisky. We drank one bottle and took another home. Mrs. Quilter was tight and I didn't want her to have any more and when we got home I tried to get her to go upstairs, but she refused.

"We left home about 11 p. m. to get something at the restaurant between Southern Pines and Aberdeen. That's as far as I remember until I got home and asked the maid where Mrs. Quilter was."

Maid Will Testify.

He was not allowed to give the maid's reply. Mrs. Grinder herself was to be a witness later.

McDonald said he returned to the restaurant and asked if anyone had seen Mrs. Quilter, to be told:

"'There she goes in that ambulance.'"

He added that he returned home, and slept in the car, "or at least that was where they found me this morning."

Asked about small cuts and blood on his hands, McDonald said he did not know where he got them, unless it was by handling the car doors.

He said Mrs. Quilter had tried to leap from his car twice before when she was drinking, and that once he caught her when the maid screamed she was trying to leap from a window at home.

'Baby Face' Pal's Guard Is Tripled

Plot for Desperate Break for Freedom Reported.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 21.—Information that John Paul Chase, companion of George (Baby Face) Nelson, planned a desperate break for freedom caused his guard to be tripled today in the courtroom where he is on trial for the slaying of Inspector Samuel P. Cowley, of the Department of Justice.

Chase was kept manacled to two deputies in the courtroom, two others sat in front of him, two behind him and about the doors and windows Federal men loitered. Chase was given new quarters in the county jail behind three additional steel doors.

Most of the session was spent in technical testimony as experts sought to show that bullets had been fired from the gangsters' automobile into the car occupied by Inspector Cowley and Agent Herman E. Hollis, also fatally shot as the agents attempted to apprehend Nelson, his companion, and Nelson's wife, diminutive Helen Gillis. Nelson was fatally wounded as the trio escaped last November 27.

Crazed Blacksmith Shoots Two Priests

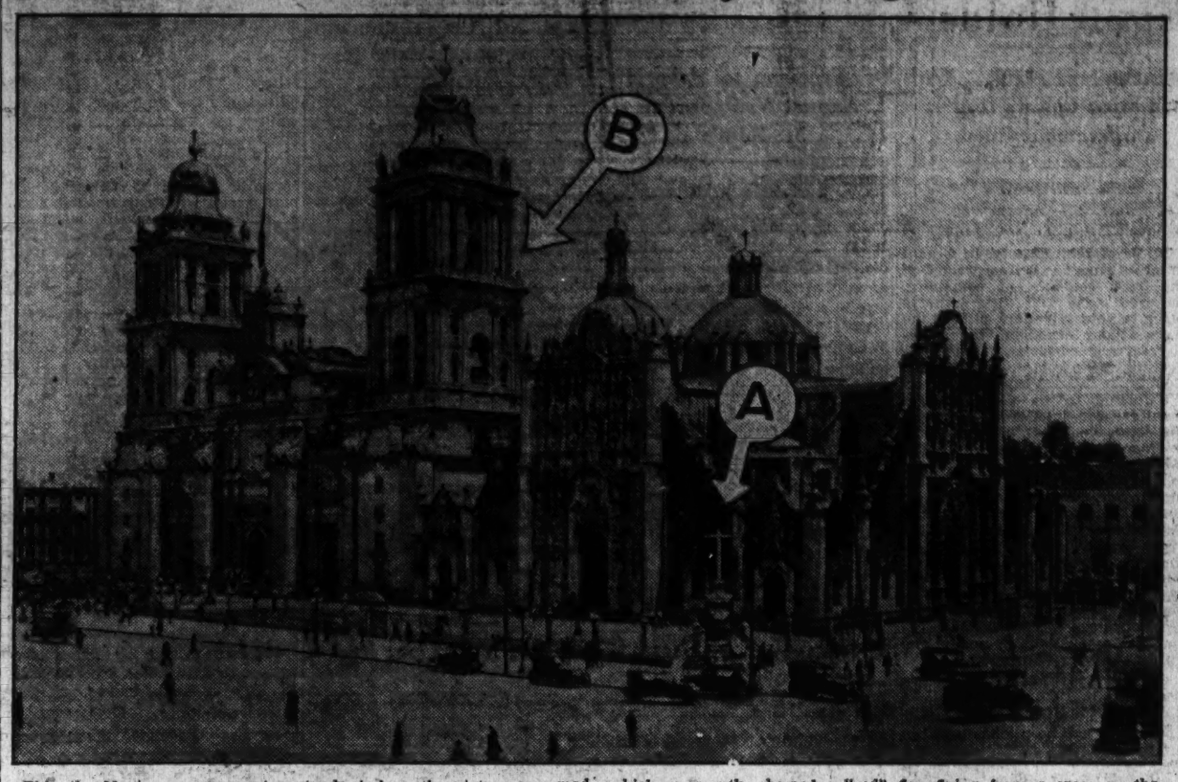
By the Associated Press.

Yorkton, Saskatchewan, March 21. One Greek Catholic priest lay dead and another apparently dying here tonight, victims of a sudden assault in a monastery by an apparently crazed blacksmith.

Steve Elash, the 35-year-old assailant, was not expected to recover from the revolver wound in his breast he inflicted as police were about to capture him.

Father Alver Delforge, 42, Belgian priest assisting at the monastery about a year, was instantly killed when shot through the skull. Father John Bala, 40, head of the mission for some years, was shot in the abdomen. He is not expected to live. Police could give no reason for the shooting.

Mexican Viewpoint on Church-State Clash As Given in First Article by Dr. Quintanilla



This, the Mexican government contends, is how the picture was made which apparently showed a "red" flag flying from a cross on the Mexico City Cathedral. "A" indicates the cross to which was lashed the flag, and "B" shows the tower on the cathedral on which the flag apparently was flying. The photographer stood below the cross and lined up the cross-decorated flag and the church tower and had a startling picture as a result. It received wide distribution.

Government Misrepresented by Certain Groups, Writer Holds; Calls Cristeros Religious Outlaws; Denies Statement Outbreak Is Near.

This is the first of a series of seven articles in reply to a series written for The Post by Frederick Vincent Williams. The Williams articles gave a Catholic viewpoint of conditions in Mexico. The article below and others in the present series reflect the official Mexican viewpoint. They are printed just as they were written. Where expressions appear in blacker type, the emphasis was indicated by the author. Dr. Quintanilla has been in the employ of the Mexican government for 15 years.

By Dr. Luis Quintanilla,

Of the Mexican Foreign Service.

The present Mexican conflict between the church and the state is a national affair and a chapter of history.

Mr. Frederick Vincent Williams, president of Serra General Assembly, fourth degree Knight of Columbus and author of the articles which have just been published by The Washington Post, strives to make it both a whimsical tale and an international issue.

In his hands, the conflict loses entirely its historical meaning and becomes a mere hair-raising serial of unauthenticated atrocity stories.

"The United States of America started its great career without an established church and with a determination never to have one. So vital did its people consider freedom from clerical domination that the first amendment to its Constitution stated that 'Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion.'

"Mexico, on the contrary, after its separation from Spain, started out with an established church and a provision in its constitution that 'No other religion should be taught but the Roman Catholic.' And the church was also the richest and most powerful organization in the country. Rich, not because of industry, but because it had exercised an influence which it had minted into millions of wealth . . .

It has not been a war against religion. Those who have led the forces in each generation against the temporal power of the Church have had nothing but respect for true religion. It has been a battle against those who have dared to use the cloak of the Christ to hide their greed for power and earthly riches. It has been a battle to improve the physical and mental conditions of the Mexican people, and thus to give their spiritual life an opportunity to flower. It has been a battle against the forces of darkness, whose chief allies were ignorance and intolerance. And this fight will go on until the forces of reaction are utterly routed.

"At this time the government of Mexico is being misrepresented in other countries by certain groups supporting the cause of the Church Hierarchy. And in no country is the propaganda directed against it more vigorously than in the United States."

Church-State Struggle Age-Old Issue.

These are the first and last paragraphs of a forward to "The Mexican People and the Church," published in 1927, during one of the many political clashes between the Mexican government and the Catholic hierarchy. They seem to have been written today. The same age-old issue is carried on at present, and may be carried on tomorrow. The "Forces of Darkness," however, are steadily losing ground. Nothing will stop your neighbors on the other side of the Rio Grande in their struggle to establish a real democracy.

History shows that in most cases, when a reactionary issue is lost, clerical policy is to seek foreign intervention. In Mexico, such was the case of the ill-fated Emperor Maximilian, in 1867. It is easier, indeed, to deceive strangers than people at home.

It is not enough, though, to knock at a neighbor's door. One must stir up his feelings, Mr. Williams, "director of public relations for various prelates and religious orders," knows psychology, but seems to ignore history. All his material pursues systematically one ultimate end: To horrify the reader!

Since the World War, however, it seems to me that atrocity campaigns have lost their emotional value. They are really much too easy to write. All that their author needs is a surplus of imagination.

It is perplexing to prove to a foreign public, not acquainted with Mexican reality, the falsity of such vague underhanded accusations. Systematic distortion of facts; incredible aversion to concise data, and even photographic trickery—whenever necessary—such are the weapons employed in a Nation-wide attempt to provoke America's indignation against Mexico.

Writer Calls Picture Of Flag "Phony."

Tourists coming from Mexico and all the inhabitants of Mexico City know, however, that this suggestive propaganda picture is "phony." Tourists and Mexicans could not be fooled by these photographs. They know very well that the red flag of the "commune"—whatever is meant by this French word—does not unfurl over the old cathedral of Mexico City, as it is pathetically affirmed. Everyone over there knows that the cathedral, like any other church in Mexico, bears no flag of any color except on national holidays, when the Mexican flag is hoisted on the top of every public building, including the churches.

In spite of photographic "evidence,' 'the flag is not actually unfurling over the "old cathedral." It is lashed to a solitary cross monument which does not even belong to the Church, although it is erected near the cathedral. Moreover, this monument stands, of course, on a lower level, on the ground, and there is no such stone cross between the high towers of the church. Any amateur protographer who would take the trouble to compare the two pictures—the one published by Mr. Williams and the one that is reproduced above—can explain the childish artifice. The photograph of the stone cross erected on the ground was taken from a certain angle, allowing the towers of the cathedral—at a distance—to appear at the background and thus give the impression that stone cross and cathedral are but one, and that the former is actually placed high above and on the cathedral.

The use of fake photographs by the hierarchy is not new. Such photographs were used during their controversy with the Mexican government between 1926 and 1928. I sincerely regret the necessity of being compelled to use the columns of The Post to unmask such low artifices used by an intolerant minority in an effort to pervert public opinion. The Mexican government has no objection to criticism. Like any human organization it is liable to err. But it is striving to work out its own problems in a spirit of sincerity which no one can doubt. That is why propaganda such as this must be denounced.

I would like, before taking up the text of these atrocity series, to say just a few more words concerning all of Mr. Williams' pictorial evidence.

Says Police Never Fire Into Crowd.

In his second and seventh articles Mr. Williams gives two pictures of mounted police "charging" rioters. These documents prove absolutely nothing, except that in Mexico City, as in any other large city of the world, mounted police, whose duty it is to maintain public order, disband street demonstrations when the crowds become unruly.

However, it is well right here to stress the fact, which is of record, that Mexican police have never fired into a crowd. A fact which Mr. Williams' photographs would help to prove.

You may rest assured that if any outrage had been committed Mr. Williams could have secured more conclusive evidence. Were it not for Mr. Williams' captions, these unimportant photographs prove nothing in themselves to the eyes of any intelligent reader.

The first of the two bears, however, the following explanation: "Mounted police charge Catholic rioters in Mexico City in one of the numerous demonstrations against closing of churches, exiling of priests and enforcement of socialistic and sex education." The second one reads: "A riot takes place in front of the old St. Dominic Church, in Mexico City, in the religious war which is tearing Mexico asunder."

The illustration appearing on the third article shows "A band of notorious Red Shirts of Garrido Canabal, of Tobasco, carry a dead turkey buzzard on a pole, labeled 'The Archbishop of Mexico.'" No one would have to say anything to that. On the contrary, the document would tend to prove that the Archbishop of Mexico is actually quite unpopular in his own diocese. This, of course, Mr. Williams would never admit. So, he adds to this document the following words: "Some of the band are charged with the murder of Catholic worshipers in a recent riot against the church." Thus, the attackers of the archbishop's popularity become, through the sentimental magic of Mr. Williams, automatically repulsive to any civilized reader.

The rest of the pictures have still less significance. The one in article fourth shows a handful of women and children kneeling at the grave of Father Pro, in spite of the fact that Mr. Williams says right there that "the government has forbidden anyone to kneel at that place." The reader will better understand the real meaning of this picture when I refer, in my following articles, to the case of Father Pro, executed together with two civilians after Mexico City police found out that he and his accomplices were responsible for the first clerical attempt to murder, by bomb, President Obregon. The latter was finally shot to death by Leon Toral, another well-known fanatic.

Calls Cristeros Religious Outlaws.

The picture in Mr. Williams' fifth article, shows a priest holding mass at a "Cristeros' Camp." The Mexican government itself would use successfully this document to prove that the church is actually behind the religious outlaws rightly called Cristeros and not Christians or "Cristianos," by the Mexican people who are aware of this significant nuance.

The Mexican government, however, needs no added proof as to the active leadership of the hierarchy in past "Cristero" movements. These outlaws—called by the government and by the people Cristeros because their war cry when sacking villages and blowing up trains during the 1926-28 conflict was "Vive Cristo, Rey" (Long live Christ the King)—were then completely quelled by the government troops. . . . But their unofficial speaker in the United States writes these seven articles in The Post in an awkward attempt to bring them back to life and frighten tourists, hoping to thus prevent Americans from seeing with their own eyes the falsity of this scandalous propaganda. This preoccupation is so evident in Mr. Williams' mind that his persistent warnings sound, in fact, like threats.

This is not the first time, either, that Mr. Williams makes predictions regarding "Cristeros." Last year, in the San Francisco Chronicle and the San Francisco News, he referred to the "uprising," which he predicted, would then break out "within a few weeks." "I look for an uprising within the next few weeks" he said textually, in 1934. Now it is to happen "this spring" . . .

I can not help thinking of the old story about the barber who, in order to attract clients, kept a permanent sign outside his shop, reading: "Tomorrow I will shave gratis."

Government Did Not Issue Posters.

"You have here," says Mr. Williams under the last of his photographic "documents," "new communist posters used by the Mexican government in its war on religion." These are the new Communist posters used by the Mexican government in its war on religion. They were smuggled across the Mexican border by Frederick Vincent Williams, American writer, who made a secret survey of the religious war in Mexcio." This statement is also untrue. The Mexican government can not be held responsible for the distribution of this or any other poster coming from any political party, Communist or Clerical.

The Rivera pictures, moreover, whether anticlerical or not, have been profusely reproduced. They are even sold in most book shops in Mexico in attractive postal cards. Thousands of tourists buy them. Therefore, why write that these "posters" or any other similar pictures, classed by the writer as being Communistic had to be "smuggled across the border" when they can be openly mailed? * * *

"You can not judge a book by its cover," says an old American adage. And after seeing Mr. Williams' photographic material, one could add "But you can judge an article by its pictures."

College Given $300,000 Of Andrus Trust Fund

A gift of $300,000 to Wesleyan University to enlarge its department of government was announced in Yonkers, N. Y., yesterday by the Surdna Foundation.

Thus the "millionaire straphanger," John E. Andrus, former Representative in Congress and a leading realtor in New York State, came back to the news pages which he forsook last with his death just a few months ago. It was Andrus who endowed the Surdna Foundation. He had long been a trustee of Wesleyan, was for four years its treasurer, made many gifts to the school, and when he died was its oldest living alumnus.

Huey Long Plan Dishonest, Red, Says Robinson

Fools' Paradise Offered by Townsend, Kingfish, Charges Senator.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 21.—Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, tonight assailed the Townsend old-age pension bill and the Long share-the-wealth plan as "gilded gateways to economic paradise."

The Townsend measure he called a "wild scheme" that would cost upward of $19,200,000,000 a year to finance and Senator Long's plan he denounced as fundamentally communistic and "dishonest."

The Senate majority leader, addressing the Drug, Chemical and Allied Trades banquet, picked the two proposals apart, point by point, and said:

"Neither is consistent with reason, experience or sound argument. Both are violative of fundamental and generally accepted laws.

"Yet because of the distress in which so many of our people find themselves they are both looked upon with favor by many for the magic which they promise the improvident and the unfortunate."

Senator Robinson's speech was broadcast over the N. B. C. network.

Taking up the Townsend plan first, he said:

"To provide pensions for less than 7 per cent of our population, those who work and produce must bear a burden of taxation which, beyond doubt, would prove unbearable and crushing to a people already heavily loaded with Federal, State, municipal and improvement district taxes."

Explaining that a 2 per cent tax on business transactions was contemplated to defray the cost of the pensions, he continued:

"Tax authorities and other economists agree that a 2 per cent tax on the money value of all business, commercial and financial transactions would paralyze all business, or reduce it to such mean proportions that the revenues derived would diminish to the vanishing point."

Administration and enforcement of the plan would bring "deceit, fear, turmoil, hatred and jealousy" over the land, he said, concluding:

"Certainly, if the gilt which covers the framework of this gateway to a paradise of fools should be removed the decaying timbers would be exposed."

Before going on to Senator Long's plan to redistribute the Nation's wealth, Senator Robinson remarked:

"If we would repeal those provisions of law under which special privileges are enjoyed, income, estate, inheritance and other taxes could be relied upon to undo the evil that has been done through excessive tariffs and through private monopolies and other forms of favoritism which have contributed to the building up of many great fortunes."

Reviewing what he termed the "Utopian program on which Senator Long proposes to run for President," he said:

"Self-respecting citizens can not approve of any policy that denies or stifles their independence. The incentive to provide for themselves and their families, four walls and a roof above, is itself the very foundation of our present civilization.

"Take from our people this worthy influence and the enconomic and social system which we have builded * * * will totter and eventually disintegrate; and the only equality we will have will be the equality of misery."

The first result of the plan, which he described as "closely akin to sovietism," would be, he said, "the breaking up of the major industries and their management, the destruction of going concerns, the discontinuance of operations, and the increase in unemployment beyond the power of anyone to anticipate or overcome."

Suit Pictures Steffens, Wife As Capitalists

Radical Writers Holding Small Fortune, Claim in Bank Action.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, March 21.—Lincoln Steffens and his wife, Ella Winter, both noted writers and champions of radical political beliefs, were dragged into a decidedly capitalistic limelight today by a suit filed in Federal court.

The suit described Steffens as the holder of a $35,000 note signed by "Owen D. Young, of New York," and secured by a mortgage on Connecticut property.

It itemized figures indicating Steffens was the possessor of a moderate fortune.

Steffens long has been a critic of the capitalistic system and in his writings has shown sympathy for things socialistic or communistic. Miss Winter's name frequently has been linked with radical movements.

The suit was brought by H. W. Douglas, receiver for the California National Bank of Sacramento, which closed in 1933. It alleged Steffens had transferred title to valuable property to his wife in attempting to evade liability as a stockholder in the closed institution.

A restraining order was asked to prevent disposal of the Staffens property. It asked for the sale of sufficient Steffens assets to satisfy a judgment rendered against the couple February 5, 1934.

The court was asked to annul all property transfers by Steffens to his wife.

In his recently published autobiography Steffens, a one-time Wall street reporter, told of having made enough money to become economically independent by playing the securities markets.

Steffens wrote that while he did not believe in the capitalistic system, as long as he had to live under it he saw no reason for not taking advantage of the opportunities presented to him.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 21.—Judge F. G. Duvall, of the Civil and Police Court of Alexandria, had a shortage of $3,286.10 in his official accounts at the time of his recent death, L. Diver Who Rescued Him at Sea Found, Ill, by Maryland Officer Friends 11 Years Ago Are Friends Once More at Cumberland.

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., March 21.—A friendship which started with a sea rescue off the coast of Southern California 11 years ago was renewed in a hospital here today with a city policeman seeking to aid his rescuer.

Frank Crowley, a deep-sea diver, collapsed on the street yesterday of a heart ailment. Police Officer E. A. (Slim) Walsh, remembering he had been saved by a Frank Crowley after his boat, the U. S. Destroyer Dophin, had been wrecked in 1924, went to the hospital and found his friend.

Crowley was chief naval diver at the time at San Pedro, Calif., and reached the scene of the wreck eight hours after it had occurred. He found Walsh afloat in the water, buoyed up only by a piece of wreckage.

Crowley was en route yesterday from Norfolk, Va., to Pittsburgh, Pa., with a companion to bid on a river job near McKees road. He became ill here and told his partner to go on to place the bid. A short time later he collapsed on the street.

Walsh, who said Crowley was suffering from a heart ailment common among divers, sought to have Crowley removed to the Naval Hospital in Washington.

West Virginia Group Makes Road Demand

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., March 21.—Thirty citizens of Berkeley Springs, W. Va., members of the Kiwanis Club of Morgan County, in a joint letter to Andrew Bell, secretary of the local chamber of commerce, declared today that they wish "to bring to your attention, with all the force at our command, the necessity for a hard-surfaced road connecting Winchester with Morgan County, in West Virginia."

Referring to an alleged agreement for construction of the road, the letter declared that "we folks in Morgan County have awaited a long time for the State of Virginia to carry out the gentlemen's agreement made some time ago, between certain officials of the State road department of Virginia with the West Virginia road commission, to the effect that if and when West Virginia built a hard-surface road to the Virginia line adjoinnig Morgan County the Virginia officials would connect thereto with a hard-surface road leading north and northwest from Winchester."

Will Appear at Hearing.

A few days ago it was announced here that an alleged "gentlemen's agreement" had been made between highway officials of this State and West Virginia for completion of Route 275 from Route 50 to the West Virginia line.

The letter from Berkeley Springs will be taken to Culpeper Monday by a delegation from Winchester and Frederick County to a hearing by the highway study commission, Andred Bell said today. State Senator T. Russell Cather and C. I. Brumback, chairman of the board of supervisors, with Mr. Bell, will head the group. Affidavits dealing with the "agreement" pertaining to Route 275 also will be taken to the meeting, it was said.

Road Payment Revealed.

Richmond, Va., March 21 (AP).—Informed that a Winchester delegation would protest at the highway hearing at Culpeper March 25 that Virginia had failed to carry out its promise to build a 4½-mile link to connect Route 50 with the West Virginia line, Highway Commissioner Shirley said today a search of the department's records revealed an agreement with West Virginia to pay part of the cost of a 16-mile stretch just over the line in that State, and said that Virginia had paid West Virginia $4,900 on the account. He said this was done because the road crossed the Virginia line at several points.

Roosevelt Revives Boundary Board

D. C.-Virginia Hearings to Resume Tuesday.

A stroke of the pen by President Roosevelt yesterday restored to life the Virginia-District of Columbia Boundary Commission which had been dead since March 1.

Soon after he signed the joint resolution continuing the commission for nine more months and authorizing $10,000 for its expenses, it was announced that hearings will be resumed next Tuesday after a month's lapse. Virgini and Arlington County, whose presentations of evidence was interrupted when the commission's life as prescribed by Congress came to an end, will pick up where they left off in their argument that the low water mark of the Potomac river is the proper boundary between the District and Virginia.

When the Virginians complete their case, the United States Government will offer rebuttal evidence, following which a number of private claimants are scheduled to be heard. The hearings will continue to be held in the Internal Revenue building. Tuesdays' session will begin at 10 a. m.

1,100 Students Are Rehearsing For Apple Festival Pageant

Work of Superintendent of Schools Will Be Presented Twice.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, March 21.—Rehearsals are being held by 1,100 students in the Handley schools of Winchester for the pageant written by Garland R. Quarles, superintendent of schools, entitled "The Bounties of Nature Are the Gifts of God," which will be presented twice during the Apple Blossom Festival early in May.

The pageant is the fifth to be produced by the educator, and the scenes, which will represent the spirit of dawn in various sections of the world, will be original.

Dances and pantomime groups will portray "Dawn in the Spring," which will be followed by a drama of the "Dawns of Yesterday." Five famous episodes will be portrayed.

The "Dawn of Discovery" will show Columbus at the Spanish court appealing to Queen Isabella for aid in a voyage across the seas. The "Dawn of Settlement" will follow. "The Dawn of Freedom" will depict the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown and "The Dawn of Peace" will show the reconciliation between North and South. The last episode will picture the "Dawn of Leisure." A hunt group with sportsmen in traditional red coats will be a feature of the scene. The "Dawn of Today" will bring the spectators from the realms of fancy and history to the festival which will be taking place.

Under the direction of Miss Virginia Boyd, the intricate drills and dances are being practiced daily. Miss Katherine Pannill and Miss Ruth Beery designed the costumes, all except 300 of which are being made at the Handley school. The remainder have been ordered. Prof. W. H. McIlwee, director of the Handley band, and Mrs. Madeline Riley, director of the chorus, also are busy with rehearsals.

Muskrats Bring Trappers Million

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, March 21.—The muskrat season contributed about $1,300,000 to Marylanders during its 3½ month duration.

E. Lee Lecompte, State game warden, said, "Every trapper I've talked with has said he was well satisfied."

Approximately 1,000,000 of the fur-bearing animals were trapped during the season, the official said. One unusual condition was reported; prices for the pelts dropped from $1.50 for black ones to about $1.30 at the end of the season, usually the price increases as the season draws to an end.

Surveys Made To Draw Future Virginia Bills

Director Shands Studies Matters to Come Up at January Session.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 21.—Though the next regular session of the General Assembly will not be held until January, Director William R. Shands, of the State division of legislative research and drafting, already is engaged in extensive studies of matters likely to be considered by the legislators.

Subjects being surveyed include social security, insurance, banking, highways, judiciary and county government.

Mr. Shands' research in social legislation includes studies of all existing State laws concerning old age pensions and unemployment insurance, "model bills" prepared by the President's committee in Washington and plans in effect among private industries in Virginia.

An effort probably will be made to simplify the State's insurance laws and to strengthen clauses of the banking laws that now have no penalties attached.

Data showing the amount of work being done by the various judicial circuits, with a view to redistricting, are being assembled.

The county government commission, a continuing body, with Mr. Shands as secretary, is seeking to aid counties in modernizing their administrative set-ups.

The legislative commission to study the primary highway system is holding a series of hearings over the State to obtain suggestions as to formulation of a long-range road program.

Gypsy Identified In Robbery Case

Virginian Accuses Woman in Fredericksburg Theft.

Jemacia Mitchell, 45, a gypsy, was yesterday identified in Arlington County by M. S. Dodd, of Hartwood, Va., as the woman who took $141 from his pocket Wednesday afternoon.

The Mitchell woman and four other gypsies were arrested by Arlington County police Wednesday night. Dodd told police that Jemacia Mitchell fumbled in his shirt pocket as she was pretending to tell his fortune. Later he missed $141, but found that another $139 had not been taken. The robbery happened in Dodd's store at Hartwood, in Stafford County.

Sheriff W. E. Curtis, of Stafford County, came to Arlington with Dodd and took the five gypsies back to face the charges. A hearing will be held today before Trial Justice R. H. L. Chichester. Homer Randolph Thomas has been retained as defense attorney.

Free Auto Plates Requested by 200

Drivers of Virginia State Cars to Benefit.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 21.—Director of the Budget J. H. Bradford said today he had received 200 applications from the operators of State-owned automobiles for free license tags from the motor vehicle division.

This is the first year the applications have had to be approved by the Governor. A law to this effect was passed by the last General Assemby.

In applying for the free licenses, the operators of State cars must make a statement giving the mileage traveled, the number of passengers taken and the purpose of each trip during the last 90 days.

There are about 550 State-owned cars in operation, Mr. Bradford said, and all applications must be filed and acted upon by April 1. Most of the cars are in the service of the highway, motor vehicle, health and agriculture departments.

that farmers make a study of their soils, use special types of plows and cultivators, plant shelter belts, plan crop rotation more carefully and develop better control of grazing.

As the dust cloud rolled eastward, scientists studied it carefully.

At Dayton, Ohio, it was estimated 246 tons of dust fell each hour. Dr. Paul Koller, of the department of geology and mineralogy at the University of Dayton, made the calculations while the storm was at average intensity.

Tests revealed, he added, that the weight of the particles which fell was ten tons an hour to the square mile.

Health Menace.

Out in Manhattan, Kan., Dr. A. C. Fay, bacteriologist at Kansas State College, pointed out dust storms carry a threat to health. He said a plate of glass exposed 10 minutes yesterday collected 70,000 dust particles per square foot during each moment of exposure. Of this number, he asserted, 24,000 carried bacteria.

Washingtonians took the dust storm calmly. Throngs of curious persons, leaving Government offices, swarmed down the Mall and to Potomac Park, where the dust was visible.

From the office of the National Capital Parks came the announcement the Japanese cherry blossoms around the Tidal Basin might be expected to bloom in two weeks. Prospects are for a bumper crop of the delicate pink buds, officials added.

Amateur baseball will begin on playgrounds and parks this afternoon, dust or no.

Woman Injured Badly by Train

Struck by Backing Freight at Hyattsville.

Struck by a backing freight train as she crossed the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks at Hyattsville, Miss Frances Hellin, 53, of Baltimore, was in a serious condition at Garfield Hospital last night. Her skull was believed fractured.

The accident occurred about noon yesterday. Prince Georges County Policeman Albert Anderson, who carried Miss Hellin to the hospital, said she was walking under the Hyattsville Viaduct.

Apparently the only witness was L. J. Boody, of Baltimore, conductor of the freight. He stopped the train immediately and called the Bladensburg Rescue Squad. The woman was taken first to the offices of Dr. Leonard Hayes at Hyattsville.

Court Is Asked To Give Homes To D.C. Tenants

Suit Asks Dying Wish of Landlord Disposing of Houses Be Upheld.

John Mark Burgan's dying wish that his tenants should be given the homes he had rented to them for years may be fulfilled if a suit in the District Supreme Court, filed yesterday, is sustained.

Burgan, a retired mail carrier, asked that his two-story homes at 328½, 330 and 330½ Thirteenth street northeast should go to the tenants who were living in them at the time of his death. He even drew up a purported will suggesting that they should be given the properties.

Because he neglected to have the proper number of witnesses attest his will, it was temporarily disallowed when filed in court. Julian Richards, a former assistant United States attorney, was named collector of the estate until the legal heirs could be determined.

Yesterday the tenants—Bradley H. Allen, jr., Barbara Allen, Clyde H., and H. Evelyn Covington; Charles V. Dougherty, and John E., and Julia Smith—filed a suit in the District Supreme Court alleging that they were told that if they rented the properties from Burgan, who died December 10, they would be given them on his death. They sued all the unknown heirs of the deceased, specifying that they had been unable to find any.

White Is Found Guilty in $1,217 Bank Robbery

Riggs Bandit First to Be Convicted Under New Federal Law.

The first conviction under the new Federal act designed to eliminate the robbing of banks of the Federal Reserve System was recorded in the District Supreme Court yesterday when Ernest Newton White was found guilty of the theft of $1,217 from the Riggs National Bank.

White, according to J. Edward Burroughs, assistant United States attorney, held up and robbed Frank M. LaPorte, clerk of the Riggs National Bank, in the Union Station Plaza, December 17, 1934.

LaPorte was robbed of a satchel containing the money and a large amount of checks. The bandit, according to police, shot LaPorte in the right leg. He was in a hospital for several weeks' treatment.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins deferred sentence until he has had a chance to study White's record.

U. S. Puts Gold On Sale in Bid To Gain Silver

Morgenthau Says Nation Is Ready to Split Up Its Huge Supply.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau yesterday announced he stood ready to consider any "attractive offer" from a foreign government for any part of this Nation's huge $8,554,000,000 gold stock.

As he worded the announcement, Mr. Morgenthau appeared to place no restrictions on the amount of gold which foreign governments may buy from the United States. But actually only a small part of the unprecedented pile of gold bullion can be purchased because payment must be made in silver.

Gold now may be exported to settle international trade balances unfavorable to the United States. But on the whole the balance of trade has continued favorable to this country—too favorable, some economists believe, for the Nation's own good.

Deal Open to China.

Consequently only silver-producing countries and China, if that country is still of a mind to try a gold standard, would be in a position to take advantage of the Morgenthau offer.

The Secretary of the Treasury made his offer on the heels of announcement that 32,000 ounces of gold had been sold to Mexico, in exchange for silver. The loss of gold in that transaction actually is insignificant. It brings slightly more than $1,000,000 of silver to the Treasury from the reserves of the Bank of Mexico.

Such a transaction is one way the Treasury has devised to make some progress in its silver purchase program and at the same time do the minimum amount of economic damage to China. Exchanging gold for silver with Mexico relieves the pressure which otherwise would be exerted on China by American purchases of the white metal abroad.

Move Toward Silver Goal.

The Mexican deal also has the advantage of accelerating the Treasury's progress toward the goal set for it by Congress when the latter decreed that silver should be bought until that metallic reserve approximates one-third of the country's gold stock.

The Treasury is believed to have been fighting a losing battle in trying to reach this objective. While it has accumulated a large volume of silver—how much has not been revealed—its gold stock likewise has been increasing. In the last year the country's gold stock has increased $914,000,000. This addition to the gold stock increased the total of silver that must be bought by over $300,000,000. If the Treasury has acquired that much silver—which is doubtful—it has not progressed at all.

This inflow of gold is due partly to the fact that the United States last year sold abroad approximately $478,000,000 more goods than it imported, partly to the return of capital here for investment purposes or for security from the vagaries of the European situation and partly to payments due on American debts abroad.

Gold Stock Increasing.

The country's gold stock grows weekly. The Federal Reserve Board yesterday reported an increment of $3,000,000 during the last week, with money in circulation remaining at $5,453,000,000. Outstanding Federal Reserve bank credit totaled $2,455,000,000, of which $2,430,000,000 represented Government bond holdings.

Meanwhile, Undersecretary of the Treasury T. Jefferson Coolidge indorsed the Eccles banking bill pending before the House Banking and Currency Committee. He made the point that "the gold in this country is in excess of any normal legal reserve requirements." That factor, plus the large amount of Government securities in existence, plus the lack of prime commercial paper, he argued, made necessary the concentration in the Reserve Board of greater powers to control credit.

He held that the board should have full power to change reserve requirements, since open-market operations may be found "insufficient to insure proper control."

Headley Will Explain Electric Rate Slash

Reduction of the rates of the Potomac Edison Co. to electric consumers in upper Montgomery County will be explained at a meeting of the Montgomery County Electric Light Improvement Association Monday at the Boyd Hall, Boyd, Md., by B. N. Headley, chairman of the organization.

The Maryland Public Service Commission recently ordered a reduction in the rates to take effect April 1. The purpose of the meeting Monday, Mr. Headley announced, is to determine whether or not the reduction is adequate. He also stated that a refund of approximately $5,000 already has been granted to members of the association for funds paid for original construction lines.

Veterans' Preference In State Jobs Urged

Legislation to give veterans of the World War preference in filling positions in the Maryland State Civil Service similar to the preference now given veterans in the Federal Government will be sought by the Takoma Park American Legion Post, as one of a number of measures the group will sponsor.

The post's program includes recommendations for deportation of alien agitators, requiring teachers to subscribe to an oath of allegiance to the United States, and opposition to further reductions in the appropriation for the University of Maryland. The program was indorsed by the post at its last meeting.

S. Brooke Fetty, commander of the post, announced that the membership now totals 113.

Harris & Ewing.

Labor on Equal Footing With Employers in Directing Group.

tion leaders have been insistent in their demands that the workers be given equal representation with employers. The new board is believed to meet with their approval. Murray has been associated for many years with Lewis and Green, who formerly was secretary of the miners' organization, and is looked upon to represent the A. F. of L. to the limit.

The A. F. of L. has been antagonistic to Richberg since the signing of the automobile code, which the labor organization said it could not accept. Yesterday, however, Green, Lewis and Hillman left the White House with Richberg. They shook hands with him and they were photographed together. There was every indication that the hatchet had been buried. Richberg, however, said he did not see the President at the same time as the labor leaders.

To Insist on Continuance.

The fact that the elevation of Richberg was not criticized by the American Federation of Labor, and that a spirit of harmony appeared to reign in the White House meeting, was the basis for the reports that Mr. Roosevelt told the labor leaders he would support the Wagner bill. On this point, however, the labor leaders were silent.

President Roosevelt's action was taken as an expression of his insistence that NRA be continued for two years. It also was taken to indicate that Richberg's views of the NRA would be pushed.

Richberg is for a rather modified set-up with a reduction in the number of codes from about 700 to about 180. He would combine numerous minor codes—those affecting industries with 10,000 or fewer employes—into one code.

Richberg also has indicated, in his testimony before the Senate Finance Committee, that he would eliminate service codes and those codes affecting business engaged in purely intrastate commerce. His definition of intrastate commerce, however, is sufficiently broad to include nearly all forms of industry. In this respect he will run into immediate opposition from Hillman, who has declared for further extension of NRA, including service codes.

Roosevelt Backs Program.

Richberg has urged some specific legislation to prevent conflict between antitrust laws and the NRA. His entire program is believed to meet with the approval of President Roosevelt and it is the basis of a tentative draft of a new NRA law being written for the Senate Committee.

By a queer twist, Richberg, in effect, succeeds Gen. Hugh S. Johnson as NRA boss. Johnson has been bitterly attacking Richberg in speeches and magazine articles. The President's appointment of Richberg would tend to disprove reports that there has been an understanding between Johnson and the White House.

"The President expects that the National Recovery Administration will carry on its present duties vigorously and effectively," the White House announcement said, "with due consideration of all interests involved while legislation is pending and shall assist in every way possible in the enactment of legislation urgently needed to retain and advance the industrial recovery program, as embodied in the present law, with the anticipation that by the action of the Congress the law will be materially improved and strengthened."

The announcement was expected to give new life to NRA, which has been coasting along in a state of uncertainty. It is expected also to have a tendency to speed consideration by Congress, which has been lagging during the Senate Finance Committee investigation.

To Back Recovery Law.

Green was chosen as spokesman for the labor representatives as they left the White House. Richberg stood beside him. All were smiling. There was no indication that there ever had been harsh words on the part of labor leaders in reference to Richberg.

Green said that the group had called at the White House to discuss the NRA and labor legislation generally. He said that they had assured the President of a "full measure of support for NIRA." He added that he and Lewis would appear before the Senate Committee next week in support of the recovery law.

His statement was in marked contrast to former utterances in which he had declared that NRA had failed, that labor must look elsewhere, and that big business had been favored.

Green added that his organization wanted extension of NRA, with equal labor representation on administrative boards, with minimum wages and maximum hours in codes, and with unfair trade practices outlawed. He added that he felt that the service industries "should have the full backing of the codes." In this he disagreed with recent views stated by Richberg.

Urges Reenactment of 7 (a).

Green said he believed Section 7 (a), giving labor the right of collective bargaining, should be reenacted and that it should be supplemented by the Wagner labor disputes bill. He added that labor still favors the 30-hour week bill. This measure recently was reported favorably to the Senate and was looked upon as labor's alternative to NRA.

"We came here because of the delay in getting a new NIRA before Congress," Green said. "There is a feeling in the country that there has been a let-down. We told the President that.

"My belief is that the President is insistent in his wish for re-enactment of the recovery law. The power of the Administration will be behind it. There has been no change in the President's attitude in that respect."

In his letter of resignation, Whiteside said that private obligations made it imperative that he be relieved. The President replied that he would appoint another member in his place as soon as he is able to complete the present organization.

Hillman Testifies.

Meanwhile, the Senate committee hearing continued with Hillman as a witness. He presented a great mass of statistics to show the success of NRA and declared that he believed it should be extended and strengthened rather than cut down.

Hillman was closely questioned by Senator King (Democrat), Utah, about his nationality. Hillman said he was born in Russia, had been naturalized 20 years ago, and had visited Russia three times since the war.

King, as questioning continued, insisted that Hillman answer questions "yes" or "no."

Senator Costigan (Democrat), Colorado, remarked that Hillman was not on trial and that he should be allowed to proceed as he wished.

The audience applauded loudly. Senator Hastings (Republican), Delaware, told the audience that it was there through courtesy of the committee and suggested that the police clear the room. Quiet was restored and the hearing went on.

Cites Production Gain.

Hillman said production in December was 63 per cent of the 1929 level, as compared with 48 per cent two years earlier. He said pay rolls had gone up from 38 per cent of the 1929 level to 57 per cent.

He added that failure to extend NRA would bring a reduction in wages and in employment.

Simultaneously, the Labor Department announced that employment had increased 200,000 in February over January. Weekly pay rolls, it reported, were $10,800,000 greater in February than in January. The February increase exceeded any similar previous increase during the last 16 years, except in 1934.

The increases, the announcement said, were particularly pronounced in the durable goods industries, where employment was up 4.8 per cent and pay rolls were up 11.6 per cent.

Employment Increases.

Numerical employment increases in various industries were listed as follows:

Transportation, 50,000; iron and steel, 24,000; machinery, 22,000; lumber products, 21,000; leather products, 10,000; nonferrous metals, 9,000; stone-clay-glass, 8,000; railroad repair shops, 6,000; paper and printing, 6,000; chemicals and allied products, 3,300; rubber products, 1,800; tobacco products, 1,100. The only industry showing a decrease was the food products industry, in which employment fell off 4,000.

While the NRA was being pushed at the White House and before the Senate Committee, the Senate Labor Committee heard James A. Emery, counsel for the National Association of Manufacturers, in opposition to the Wagner labor disputes bill.

Emery told the committee that the bill was "as plainly invalid in law as it is unsound in policy." He said it would "obstruct the conditions which it is intended to improve."

Senator Moore Raps Amendments to AAA

Opposition to the Agricultural Adjustment Act amendments pending in Congress was voiced last night by Senator A. Harry Moore (Democrat), New Jersey, in a radio speech.

Declaring that under the amendments the AAA would be able to license to the extent of prescribing prices and the quantity of goods that could be purchased from a farmer, the Senator repeated the criticism of one of his constituents that farmers would have to resign themselves "to becoming hired men on their own property."

now worth only $154 under the Cochran scheme.

Representative Kopplemann (Democrat), Connecticut, was voted down when he sought to provide for immediate payment to needy veterans only.

A vote was not reached on a plan of Representative Whittington (Democrat), Mississippi, to pay the bonus out of the pending $4,880,000,000 work relief appropriation.

An obvious move to win over House inflationists was made by Patman in his closing speech when he told of receiving a letter from Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, Senate leader of the currency expansionists, in which Thomas predicted the Patman bill would receive more Senate votes than any other bonus plan.

Despite the emphasis he laid on the Thomas endorsement, Patman cried:

"This is not an inflationary measure."

Warns of Exempted Bonds.

Patman said the only difference between his measure and the Vinson plan is in method of payment.

"The Vinson bill," he said, "means more tax exempt bonds, but you don't know where you will get tax money. We have a definite method of payment that does not involve a bond issue, new taxes or budget difficulties."

In his final thrust at the Patman bill Vinson assailed the Texan as an "inflationist."

"On January 25," he said, "my friend from Texas offered an amendment limiting the interest rate on Federal bonds to one-half of one per cent. Why, that would have prevented issuance of any Federal securities. Had it passed we would have had billions of dollars of currency inflation within a few months."

The White House was silent as the bonus battle waxed warmer. Senator Bulkley (Democrat), Ohio, after calling on the President, said:

"His attitude hasn't changed."

Mr. Roosevelt has indicated he would not approve either the Patman or the Vinson bill.

Cantrel Offers Plan to Amend Aviation Bill

Airports Assail Proposal Designed to Protect Property Owner.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., March 21.—An amendment to the State-wide aeronautical bill which would afford property owners protection against dangerous and annoying practices on the part of aviators was submitted to the House Aviation Committee by Delegate Joseph A. Cantrel, of Montgomery County during a hearing on the measure today.

Cantrel praised the bill for its provisions giving the State Aviation Commission powerful control over all flying fields, schools, clubs and air navigation facilities, but declared it is inadequate.

"It affords no protection for property owners who are annoyed on low flying or whose property is endangered by stunting," he declared.

He proposed the adoption of an amendment that would require a hearing on all applications for airport licenses when 15 property owners living near the airport petition for a hearing before such licenses are granted.

Representatives of several commercial airports, including Curtiss Wright and Logan Fields in Baltimore, however, appealed to the committee to reject Cantrel's proposal.

"Enactment of such an amendment would place airport investments representing millions of dollars in jeopardy by allowing such hearings," they declared.

They said that established airports should be exempt from any such hearings, but that they would raise no objection to making it applicable to new air fields.

Maj. C. A. Masson, secretary of the State aviation commission, also voiced opposition to Cantrel's proposal, saying the commission felt that the bill afforded aggrieved property owners emplae protection.

He explained that under the bill aggrieved property owners could go into a court of equity and seek an injunction restraining airports which they deem a nuisance from continuing operation.

Building Planned Fr Pacific Fairr

Fine Arts Commission to Select Design.

The Fine Arts Commission tomorrow will pass upon the proposed design for the Federal building that is to be erected at the California Pacific International Exposition, which opens in San Diego, Calif., May 29.

Although the first deficiency bill, which carries $350,000 appropriation for Federal participation in the fair, has not yet cleared Congress, it is expected that the building will be completed in time for the gala opening. JPoseph W. Hiscox, chief of exhibits in the Agriculture Department, took office this week as Federal commissioner of the exposition.

One of the outstanding features of the fairo, one of whose purposes is to commemorate the 400th anniversary of the discovery of the Pacific Southwest by Francisco Vasquez de Coronado, will be the two visits b ythe Pacific fleet at San Diego. Representative George Burnham (Republican), of San Diego, is the author of the resolution for Federal participation.

7 Indicted in Plot To Defraud PWA

Texans Deny Charge Of Plot to Defraud

By the Associated Press.

Raymondville, Tex., March 21.—Perry A. Welty, one of seven men accused of conspiracy to defraud the Government in a $4,583,000 Willacy County irrigation project, said tonight "none of us knows how they could make such charges."

"I was just doing my duty," declared Welty, former engineer examiner with the PWA office at Fort Worth, Tex.

Welty said no funds were appropriated or spent in Texas on the 75,000-acre project and that he still was due money for his work.

"That's what we are wondering about," he added.

Frank P. McElwrath, Corsicana, Tex., contractor and banker, also denied accusations in indictments by a District of Columbia grand jury that the seven plotted to make $400,000 profit through the use of redwood pipe for the 250 miles of the system.

"I am absolutely innocent of the charges preferred," he said.

William A. Harding, pioneer land man and director of the project named by the grand jury, declined to comment. Others charged were not available here.

The project, officially the Willacy County Water Control and Improvement District No. 1, came into existence December 11, 1928.

Uniform Narcotic Law Is Pushed by Cummings

Following closely upon the Treasury's drive on narcotic sellers and other criminals, Attorney General Homer Cummings last night urged enactment of the uniform narcotic drug law.

In a radio address he declared that addicts constitute an ever-present peril to public health, public morals and public safety. Pointing out that the narcotic laws of the States are in "a chaotic condition," he called uniform legislation "vitally necessary."

Spanish Revolt Plot Nipped With 50 Held

Madrid, March 21 (AP).—Fifty persons were arrested tonight in a widespread revolt plot in the Province of Jaen, the governor of the province announced.

His statement said ramifications of the attempted insurrection linked many towns throughout the province. Police seized quantities of documents.

'Queen' of Backet Shops And $1,500,000 Missin

Boston, March 21 (AP).—Seven witnesses and nearly $1,000,000 were listed as missing today as State and Federal investigators pressed their campaign against violations of the securities law in New England.

One missing witness, Beatrice Best, of Springfield, was characterized by John L. Flynn, New York, special attorney for the National Securities and Exchange Commission, as "the queen of the bucket shops."

Better Bus Service Asked By Sligo Park Citizens

Improved bus transportation between Silver Spring and downtown Washington was urged by the Sligo Park Hills Citizens Association at their monthly meeting last night. The association recommended an express bus service on Thirteenth street.

A committee composed of E. Francis McDevitt, chairman; Harry J. Trainor, Vernon Brewster, Stuart Lashley and Mrs. Louis A. Yost, sr., was appointed to draft a slate for the annual election next month.

10 Votes Avert Doom of NRA In Senate Fight

"Death Knell" of NRA.

Obviously concerned over the unexpected development, Senator Harrison warned it was sounding the "death knell" of NRA. Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, begged colleagues to avoid hasty action, but professed sympathy with Borah's argument that the Administration had gone beyond what Congress intended in the matter of price-fixing.

"This would carve out the heart of NRA," shouted Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts.

In the face of their admonitions, Senators Borah, Glass, Clark, of Missouri; Ashurst, of Arizona, and King, of Utah, led a slashing attack on antitrust law suspension.

"If anyone thinks I am going to rise on the floor of the Senate and repudiate my constant record against the suspension of the anti-trust laws merely because I am in charge of this measure, he is mistaken," said the Virginia chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Raps "Tyranny."

"I voted against that feature of the NIRA; in fact, I voted against the whole wretched bill from beginning to end. I do not think any species of tyranny ever was practiced in any civilized nation of the earth comparable to the tyranny which has been practiced upon the people of this country under the NIRA."

Introducing the amendment, Borah had declared $2,000,000,000 worth of Government supplies would be purchased under the $4,800,000,000 program at prices catapulted by anti-trust law suspension. He said 80 per cent of the building supplies to be purchased by the Government were controlled by trusts and combines.

"We are going into a market which is rigged against the United States Government," Borah added. "Standing between the Government and the poor of this country are those who are fixing the prices the Government will have to pay. * * * The Government stands helpless before organizations from which it will have to buy supplies."

Glass, who once before on the same bill took the floor against the Administration in an effort to scale down the $4,880,000,000 appropriation, attended in silence while Borah spoke and listened attentively as Wagner replied.

Agrees With Borah.

Then he told the Senate:

"I should have wished, if my advice had been asked, that a matter which on the face of it seems so irrelevant should not have been presented as an amendment to the pending joint resolution; but as I heard the Senator from Idaho speak it seemed to me it was quite relevant, that it is evident if we are going immediately into the market to purchase $2,000,000,000 of materials under the joint resolution, we ought to have a free market. Therefore, my mind has responded to the reasoning of the Senator from Idaho."

Senator Ashurst, whose Judiciary Committee recently voted a monopoly investigation of its own, joined the assault. He said "chiselers and grafters know they will not go to jail under NRA, but do respect the antitrust laws."

"Since word went out that the Government is going to spend $2,000,000,000 for relief supplies, a group of harpies has been hovering over every department of Government."

Harrison, backed by an Administration bodyguard, reminded the Senate his Finance Committee now is exploring every angle of NRA operation, and will report back to the Senate, giving members a chance then to propose any amendments they wish. To repeal the antitrust suspension now would be tantamount to "discharging" the Finance Committee, he argued.

McCarran Amendment.

Meantime, Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, offered an amendement providing a Federal works administrator for each State, to be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. The amendment promised to drag into Senate debate Relief Administrator Hopkins' clash with Ohio's Governor over relief administration, is sure to evoke the opposition of Administration leaders, and may bring on another prolonged controversy holding up approval of the bill until next week.

McCarran said he hopes his amendment "will end cases of political carpetbaggers descending upon the States." Anticipating floor airing of the Ohio dispute, leaders already are arming for the conflict. Hopkins disclosed yesterday he has received a letter from Senator Byrnes asking about the Ohio situation. Hopkins declared he is not going to permit politics in the relief administration.

Two More Hurdles.

Rumors that work relief money will not be used to finance municipal power plants, meanwhile, moved utility stocks upward. Word was passed around that New York had abandoned its plans for a power plant, but Mayor LaGuardia insisted an application for Federal funds will be filed for that purpose.

Despite the stock movement and persistent reports, Henry T. Hunt, PWA counsel, said he did not believe there will be any change in the policy of making loans for municipal plants. An amendment to the works bill by Senator Bone (Democrat), Washington, to authorize loans to States and municipalities to acquire privately owned power systems, was voted down in the Senate.

Besides the latest McCarran amendment, two other obstacles still remain in the path of works bill passage—a silver monetization amendment by Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, and a greenback inflation rider, by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana.

Hearing Holds Greif Violator Of Section 7(a)

Removal of Blue Eagle Is Recommended by Regional Board.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, March 21.—Complaints that L. Greif & Bros., Inc., had violated section 7a of the national industrial recovery act at its Staunton, Va., plants were referred today to the National Labor Relations Board in Washington with recommendations that the company's Blue Eagle be removed "or other appropriate action taken."

This action was taken by the Regional Labor Board of the Fifth District following a hearing here March 15 on complaints preferred by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America on behalf of 35 employes of the two plants of the Staunton Manufacturing Co., a Greif concern.

The regional board, saying the company declined to refute any of the statements made by the complainants at the hearing, asserted testimony was offered that the company did not take any action to stop nonunion picketing of the plants and took an active part in the affairs of the employes' organization.

The local NRA officials were restrained last year by an order signed by Federal Judge William C. Coleman from removing the Blue Eagle from the Greif Company on charges of code violations, but the order was later stricken out by an agreement of both parties.

Mrs. Gilman Will Speak.

Winchester, March 21.—Mrs. Robbins Gilman, motion picture chairman of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and president of the Federal Motion Picture Council of America, will speak at Christ Episcopal Church here at 8 p. m. Friday, under the auspices of the Winchester Ministerial Association, it was announced today.

An Obstacle To Trade Pacts.

If Belgium should devalue her currency, or if it should depreciate to any marked extent as a result of the modified embargo placed upon gold and foreign-exchange transactions, the trade agreement recently negotiated between that country and the United States would probably be abrogated without delay. Realizing the necessity of introducing safeguards against subsequent changes in currency values, the negotiators of the pact provided for its modification or termination within a period of 30 days in case of variations in exchange rates "so substantial as to prejudice the industries or the commerce" of either country.

Under the agreement negotiated by the State Department, for instance, various Belgian iron and steel products have been accorded lower duties. Obviously, depreciation or devaluation of the belga would further reduce the effective protection against importation of such goods from Belgium. It is significant that Great Britain has just announced an increase of 50 per cent in import duties on certain iron and steel products—an action interpreted as a first move to protect British industry against increased competition from Belgium in case of currency depreciation.

Devaluation of the belga would not only enable that country to sell more cheaply in the American market, but would also neutralize the advantage of counter-concessions obtained from Belgium. A lower purchasing power for the belga would tend to discourage American exports to that country. In short, Belgium, like the United States and every other country that has altered the gold value of its currency, whether unintentionally or by design, whether through depreciation or formal devaluation, would by such action virtually bring about a modification of the terms of exchange of goods, to the disadvantage of other countries.

If the United States should be compelled to terminate its agreement with Belgium, it would be a most unfortunate ending to this courageous initial effort of the State Department to conclude a reciprocal tariff pact with a European country whose exports compete directly with the products of American industry. Such an outcome would not indicate that attempts to increase the volume of foreign trade by negotiations of this sort are doomed to failure. It would, however, emphasize the necessity of international agreements to put an end to currency instability as a preliminary to successful attempts to lower international trading barriers.

The Orchestra's Appeal.

On top of all the correspondence on the subject which we have recently printed, may we add a word in support of the campaign to raise $100,000 for the National Symphony Orchestra? The desirability of fostering this organization is apparent to most of those who have regularly or even occasionally attended its concerts. For those who have not heard the orchestra, or who do not know of its part in the cultural life of the community, it is well to summarize the purposes of the present campaign.

With the funds now being solicited, the orchestra will, first of all, place the members of the organization on a weekly basis of pay, assuring them a living wage and opportunity to concentrate on improvement of their collective artistry. It will permit more concerts in Constitution Hall, though the need for this takes some demonstration. It will provide for more children's concerts in the public schools of the city, which is unquestionably desirable. It will allow the orchestra to play more frequently in neighboring communities, which is a pleasant rather than an essential aim from the viewpoint of Washingtonians. And it will provide for a series of summer concerts to be played on Thursday and Sunday evenings in Potomac Park. This is a wholly delightful prospect.

The issue, it is to be remembered, is not the state of technical perfection which the orchestra has at present attained, high though that seems. It is, rather, whether Washington is generous enough to show tangible appreciation of the unalloyed pleasure that Mr. Kindler's musicians have already brought to thousands; and whether Washington is far-sighted enough to maintain and improve this very vital asset in the recreational life of the community.

The Pool Program.

There is no Daniel to chronicle the fortitude of that legion of Shadrachs, Meshachs and Abednegos who annually brave the swirling heats of a summer in Washington. Failing such an advocate in the courts of whatever gods control the weather, it devolves upon the populace to take measures to save itself. By common agreement, water is the most effective palliative—water, that is, to swim in.

In this connection, the pool program proposed by Miss Sybil Baker meets with the heartiest enthusiasm. As supervisor of the District playgrounds, she is furthering a plan to provide 20 new public swimming and wading pools for the city. The Commissioners are lending their support to the idea and have suggested that the new tanks might be built with money that may become available to the District through the pending $4,880,000,000 works relief appropriation.

Few community projects will be able to command more popular support than the construction of an adequate number of municipal pools. It is reassuring that the recreation experts and the Commissioners think along these lines. For, regardless of airports or kiosks, court buildings or traffic snarls, there will be no one to deny that the comfort and pleasure of life in the National Capital can be greatly extended by convenient and sanitary swimming facilities.

The Position Of Russia.

Amid the diplomatic ferment into which the German overthrow of a central part of the Versailles Treaty has plunged Europe, the position of one nation stands out with singular insistence. Russia is doing her utmost to overcome her revolutionary isolation. Russia is actively courting the cooperation of the western powers. Russia is trying to throw her huge unwieldy weight behind the very settlement which a few years ago her leaders furiously denounced.

This shift in the character and direction of Russian diplomacy is one of the outstanding phenomena of the post-war period. Gone are the Trotskyite schemings for world revolution. Gone is the thesis that the proletarian state must stand uncompromising against a hostile world of capitalist imperialisms. Such argument may still be usable by American and other foreign communists, but it is severely frowned upon in Moscow. The diplomacy of Litvinoff has now exactly the same old-fashioned realistic quality as that of Bismarck.

And the reasons for this are essentially the same as those which prompted Bismarck in his successful effort, half a century ago, to make Germany the most powerful nation in Europe. The basis of Bismarck's policy was mistrust of France, on the west, and Russia, on the east. Just so the present policy of Soviet Russia is to insure her integrity against attack, concerted or separate, from her neighbors—Germany and Japan. For Germany, through her pact with Poland and her obvious eastern ambitions, is now again in effect a neighbor, and a dangerous neighbor, of Russia. And red Russia today fears the disciplined legions of German proletarians far more than she does the combined capitalists of all the world.

In this situation the diplomatists of Moscow are seeking to carry through two very rational lines of action. They are trying to reach an understanding with Japan in the east. And simultaneously they are trying to encourage a western European coalition which will guarantee their country against any repetition of the smashing blows with which Germany crumbled the Czarist regime.

This detachment of potential enemies is far more essential to Litvinoff than it was to Bismarck. The latter could count upon a German railroad system which would enable his generals to shuttle masses of troops back and forth between a French and a Russian front. But Litvinoff knows that his country, sprawling across two continents, could not possibly sustain a simultaneous attack in both the west and east. Therefore Russia has disposed of the Chinese Eastern Railway and offered to demilitarize the Russian side of the Manchurian frontier. Japan, as Mr. Kawakami points out on the page opposite today, views this conciliatory attitude with approval. Well she may, for Tokyo will be more maladroit than usual if it fails to get at least Russian recognition of Manchukuo out of the European crisis.

Concessions to Japan are in Russian eyes as nothing compared to the urgent necessity of reaching reliable agreements with the powers of western Europe. This is not a new conclusion for Moscow. It was in Litvinoff's mind when he took active membership in the League of Nations, so sharply derided and denounced in Soviet Russia when times were different. It was in his mind when he concluded a close understanding with the most "bourgeois" of all European countries—France. It is in his mind now that he seeks to convert this understanding into a reliable agreement whereby not merely France, but also Great Britain and Italy, shall act jointly with Russia, if possible under League auspices, if there is any German move of aggression.

The decision of the French Government to send Foreign Minister Laval on a special mission to Moscow, and the enthusiasm with which Russia has greeted the French request for League intervention on the issue of Germany's action, are current indications of the trend which is bringing Russia back to a leading position in the councils of western Europe. Perhaps a still more striking example is the freely expressed dissatisfaction of the Soviet government over the moderate attitude which the British are seeking to follow in this crisis. Russia is not yet leading a coalition of the former allies against Germany—her diplomacy is too shrewd to be obtrusive in the matter. But there is no doubt that her whole-souled objective is to forward the construction of a powerful anti-German alliance.

Of course the basic reason for this far-reaching maneuvering is justified fear that Germany, when she feels that the hour is ripe, will strike eastwards. All German diplomacy since the end of the war, particularly in recent months, encourages that fear. The bitter hatred of the Nazis for Bolshevism and all its works is another element in the picture. So is the whole jerry-built political structure in eastern Europe, for which no guarantees comparable to those of Locarno in the west have ever been established.

As compared with Russia, France has nothing to fear from Germany. But where the Germans are concerned, French clarity of thought is at a discount. Therefore the world sees something akin to another Franco-Russian alliance—unthinkable ten years ago—rapidly formulating. And unsatisfied with French support alone, Moscow seeks to make the combination even more far-reaching.

It is unquestionable that Russia is serving the interests of peace, as laid down at Versailles, in her present policy. That she is doing it from pure self-interest, rather than from any intrinsic faith in the permanence of a treaty which her present leaders not long ago loved to ridicule, is equally clear. It happens, ironically enough, that Russia's pressing need for tranquillity in which to consolidate the fruits of revolution coincides with French terror lest the whole structure of Versailles should now be thrown on the scrap-heap. Under the same stimulus of fear, both countries are reverting to pre-war diplomacy.

Whether this coincidence of acute Franco-Russian needs is a stable rallying point for other nations is for those others to decide. The British, evidently, wish to delay their decision until there is further evidence of German inability to follow a temperate and conciliatory policy, now that the Nazis have so defiantly upset the apples which were piled up precariously at Versailles.

Undermining The States.

When the Senate voted to earmark $40,000,000 from the public works fund for the operation of public schools during the remainder of this year it brought into the open an issue that had been smouldering ever since the depression became acute. How far can the Government go in financing State and municipal agencies without undermining the basis of local government?

Even in the heyday of prosperity Congress began appropriating funds to help the States build roads. When unemployment mounted Congress started to dole out money for public works and relief. Now—to mention only major incursions into fields of responsibility formerly reserved to the States—the Senate proposes to share the cost of education. In each case there is an inescapable tendency for Federal control to follow in the wake of Federal finance.

Plausible arguments have been presented to support every encroachment upon local functions of government. No one is disposed to question the States' needs for aid in building roads, supporting the unemployed or even preserving their educational standards. It is not, however, a question of need which now arises to dismay students of the American political system. It is a question of preserving the intimate relationship between the individual citizen and his community government, which in the past has minimized abuses and kept democracy on a workable plane.

Since the Government has taken over the financing of local functions the States are inclined to relinquish their own activities. That tendency is painfully evident in the adminstraton of relief. Divided responsibility encourages abuses, as shown by the Ohio imbroglio. Appropriation of funds by one government for expenditure by another results in extravagance and waste. Consequently, Federal officials are inclined to crack down on local agencies, and the latter are inclined to revolt, as indicated by the charges of "insolence" and "arrogance" recently hurled at the FERA from the Maryland Senate. Out of the confusion thus created an intolerable situation may easily arise.

Without question, the schools of the country could use several times $40,000,000 to good advantage. But such a gift from the Federal treasury would encourage improvident communities to expect similar grants every year. And some communities now struggling to maintain their schools would doubtless relinquish their efforts. Next year the demand for Federal funds would probably be accentuated. As Federal support for the schools gradually increased, it would be only logical to anticipate ultimatums from Secretary Ickes or Administrator Hopkins requiring the subordination of local authority.

The proposed diversion of job-creating funds to educational purposes must be regarded, therefore, as a direct threat to the independence of our educational institutions. The seriousness of permitting the camel of politics to push his nose under this tent should lead to a thoughtful reexamination of the basic relationship between the Federal Government and the States, before it is too late.

The chief difficulty in getting out of a depression lies in the fact that it's hard to fill up one hole without digging another.

A philosopher says it is an easy matter for one to be content with one's lot. And it probably is—if one has a lot.

Your conscience is something which hurts you when you gamble if you lose.

On Saint Patrick.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I fear that, in writing his recent article in The Post on "Saint Patrick," William Lyon Phelps failed to have adequate recourse to historical sources.

The noted historian, J. B. Bury, shows that Patrick was originally a Briton named Sucat, born probably in Glamorganshire, Wales, and as a youth was taken to Ireland as a prisoner aboard one of the vessels of the Scotti. His preparation for his subsequent work and his movements are of record in his own writings.

In all his writings no mention is made of any trip to Rome or of a Pope, since the papacy did not come into being and popes (priests) were not popes until long after the time of Patrick (c.389-461). Necessarily, therefore, the latter belonged to the whole Christian Church and not to any single denomination thereof, as affirmed by Charles Francis Potter in his book entitled "The Story of Religion," page 311. It is accordingly quite proper for all Christians, whether Protestants, Roman Catholics, or others, to honor him.

The early Christian Church of Ireland was wholly independent of that on the Continent and differed in form and government. Ireland was not a part of the Holy Roman Empire and its church denied that continental bishops had any jurisdiction beyond the limits of the empire until it was brought within the papacy by the English King Henry II and his Normans late in the twelfth century. Patrick was highly reverenced as the leader of the independent Irish Church, and, when the Bishop of Rome sent a bishop named Palladius (373-463) to Ireland to attempt to revise the form of that church, the Irish people would not recognize his authority and his efforts were in vain.

Patrick was not a saint except upon adoption by the Roman Catholic Church. The writings of later persons who would make him a sectarian are thus unsound historically. This is written in the interest of historical accuracy.

Citizens' Confusion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At the recent meeting of the Federation of Citizens Associations most of the delegates confessed they did not know what "character education" meant, although a resolution indorsing an appropriation for teaching it in the public schools was approved. They feared, and with some reason, perhaps, that Communism is being taught by many teachers in the public schools.

Glancing back at my own schooldays, which ended nearly 50 years ago, I see most vividly the kind of character education I got in the schoolroom. The principal, a man, inculcated it with a piece of wood, which was both cheap and efficacious. Often the treatment was supplemented by father.

As for Communism and its rainbow promise of a Utopia, it might be cited that George Washington did not find it necessary to kill literally 100,000 men and women, English tories, after the surrender at Yorktown.

If the teachers in the public schools were graded more on character education than on the three "R's," there would not be any communistic doctrines taught in the public schools. Each teacher should have to take a six months' postgraduate course somewhat similar to that given at West Point and Annapolis in character building, which, after all, means mental discipline in obeying and giving orders.

The Passing Of Cornelius Ford

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The passing of Cornelius Ford, former Public Printer during the days of the Wilson Administration, brings real grief to many sorrowing friends who admired this simple, lovable man. He did not reach the pinnacle of prominence through ancestral halls, nor was he spoiled by the trumpet call of fame. Having known Con in the old days in New Jersey, as a tribute to the honor and integrity of the man, Woodrow Wilson made him the administrator of the largest governmental printing plant in the world.

In the early days of my life, I was associated with Con Ford as a member of the New Jersey Legislature in the session of 1907, where first we met and plighted our political troth. To the end we were devoted friends. When I became secretary to the President of the United States, I suggested the appointment of Con Ford. At that time he was working in an humble capacity as a printer in the office of the Hudson Observer, a hometown paper.

Early in 1913 he came to Washington, where he was intimately associated with President Wilson, Franklin Roosevelt and leading Democrats and Republicans of Washington, and though the post of Public Printer is a highly influential one, where large expenditures of public money are made, Con Ford showed himself to be what he really was in the very depths of his fine nature—a solid rock of integrity and high purpose, loyal to the President and to his country in all things.

He was one of the finest men I have ever met, a real Christian father, possessing most likable and lovable qualities of manhood. Indeed, no one could stand in his presence without feeling clean and wholesome. You knew he was honorable and decent when you met him; you felt it in the air about him.

During the critical days of the war he personally handled the messages of the President to Congress. In this highly important matter he was the depositary of the President's confidence and he was so finely tempered that he would guard that confidence with his life. When the Wilson Administration passed from the stage, like Cincinnatus, he returned to the humble calling whence he had come.

Last night I visited his old-fashioned home to pay tribute to this old-fashioned man who lived on an old-fashioned street and who possessed the old-fashioned qualities of decency, loyalty and honor in all things.

Surely, when he passed over the line, the trumpets sounded for him on the Other Side.

Antiquated Economic System.

To The Editor of The Post.—Sir: If the McCarran amendment to the work relief bill is finally defeated through the influence of Administration wire-pulling, it will clearly indicate that the Administration is primarily concerned in preserving the status quo of an antiquated, ruthless, unjust economic system so far as human relations and welfare are concerned. It is willing to do this even at the cost of continued deprivation and suffering of the millions of unemployed and with a naive belief that private employers will voluntarily maintain their present wage levels and even take on more workers from relief rolls at their higher wage levels!

After nearly five years of depression, there are still, conservatively, 10,000,000 unemployed individuals and the peak number of over 20,000,000 on relief. Is this not sufficient, pragmatic proof in itself to show that something is fundamentally wrong with the American system of economics and of "doing things!" If this conclusion is shared, then it will take fundamental reconstruction of American methods and aims to cure the present failure.

There is still, in spite of almost insurmountable obstacles, a reserve of sane, humanitarian leadership in America, but to date it has not been given a fair hearing and above all has been denied any effective power.

To the Editor of The Post, Sir: May I congratulate you upon your recent wise and timely editorial entitled "The Armament Race"? 'Dixie' Goes To Yale.

Probably no more stirring tune has been produced in this country than the inimitable "Dixie." It has a thrilling, soul-searching quality that puts it on a parity with the other great music of the world. When we were small we learned to sing it in school. As we grew older the words and rhythm came to have a deeper meaning. "Dixie" is as Southern as corn pone and molasses; as American as Old Glory.

Shortly after it had been written in 1859 by Daniel Decatur Emmett, "Dixie" became the song of the Confederacy. It was inseparably woven by events into the warp and woof of Southern history. To its martial cadences the men of the South marched through four years of bitter warfare on behalf of a cause they deemed just. During the trying days of reconstruction "Dixie" helped the people of Dixie to forget their burdens. Since then it has won national recognition, and while it must remain forever essentially Southern, it is now a part of the pattern of the republic.

Thus the elation of Yale University over acquiring one of the three original manuscripts of the famous song is easily understandable. The manuscript, copied from the original score by the hand of its composer in 1902, just two years before his death, has been purchased for the library of Calhoun College by the associate fellows of that branch of the university. Well may Yale be proud of such a treasure.

The Post Impressionist

Pundit Blurbers

Post Office, Friday.

IT IS the fashion to scold the blurb-writers: those conscious optimists who manufacture paragraphs for the jackets of new books—and who announce each new book as a masterpiece. But there is another set of literary exploiters who shame the blurb-writers at their own specialty—and who are all the more annoying because, by withholding the manuscripts that they exploit, deny you a chance to confute them.

They do the same thing, and do it better, yet they don't belong to the union.

We refer to the pundits, the specialists in any sufficiently old field of literature, who, whenever a discovery is made on some forgotten library shelf, whenever a theretofore lost document is dug out of an attic, rush upon it, issue bulletins declaring that there was never anything to equal it—and then keep it strictly to themselves.

About once a month these press-agents of scholarship herald the discovery of a new treasure. They claim—and how they get it!—free advertising therefor. They quote just enough of it to make you long to read it.

But do you ever get a chance to read it?

You do not.

Take those "new Pepys diaries."

When they were found a while ago, there was a blast of applause. Then followed the inevitable suspense while the experts made their examination. And now comes the experts' blurb. Arthur Bryant, "eminent authority," becomes vocal.

He reminds us—what nobody ever forgot — that the already known journals of the sardonic Samuel were chiefly annoying because they stopped short at the moment when Pepys was about to play a part in history. The new discoveries, says Mr. Bryant, provide a pretty full record of Pepy's later life. They give his own version of the famous fight between the Big Navy people of his day and the Parliament; they contain his exposure of the scarecrow nature of the so-called "Popish Plot," and they tell a story "more like a John Buchan story of Chicago gangsters loose in England than like passages in the life of a respected British official."

It was in 1670 that the Parliamentary Commissioners of Accounts charged the Navy Office with irregularities. In the course of 120 folio pages written in longhand and evidently dictated to a confidential clerk, continues Mr. Bryant, the diarist shows how he defended the King against the Parliamentarians, and how this was the beginning of the friendship between Samuel and Charles II. "Charles came very well out of the microscopic scrutiny (of the Commissioners)," according to Mr. B. "Pepys' oratory convinced everyone, including the opposition."

Yet how much of the original record does Mr. Bryant permit us to read? Just this:

"The King did afterwards, at dinner, class me his Advocate and made much sport with my Lord Brereton's manner and dissatisfaction with my opposing him and his eight brethren in the construction of his own lesson."

A decade thereafter the republicans were frightening the country with the now notorious "Popish Plot." The level-headed Pepys was their sworn foe. So they bribed his butler, James, to accuse him before the Parliament.

James fell ill. Though able to move about, he knew that his end was near—sent word of a desire to confess his perjury to his former employer. But he was shadowed everywhere by those who had bought his testimony; he seems to have dared go nowhere without a bodyguard.

Concerning all this, says Mr. Bryant, Pepys goes into minute detail. And Mr. Bryant thereupon gives us a second quotation from the treasure-trove:

"Coming home at night (after I had carried my cosen Wine Houblon home from a play—'She Would If She Could') W. H. told me that A. H. had beene here to speake with me and said that he had the Person near hand whom he was bringing along with him and that he would go to a Coffee House hard by, and accordingly he by and by did come againe and brought James along with him, but before I could speak with the latter I sent for A. H. alone into the little Parlour to me, and told him that I should be loath to speake with James without somebody also with me."

Whereupon what? Whereupon nothing—except Mr. Bryant's mysterious assurance. "The full account includes one of the most thrilling stories I have ever come across."

If all this is not blurbing at its meanest, what is?

We'd like to know what eventually becomes of all these "finds" about which we hear so much that proves provocative, but of which nobody (except those experts) ever sees anything.

We are inclined to suspect that the discoveries are simply not discovered at all—that the treasure is invented by the experts for the sole purpose of bedeviling the public.

Litvinoff Hint Eases Tension In Far East

Move Towards Demilitarization of Manchukuo Border Greeted Optimistically.

By K. K. Kawakami.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

SHOULD Europe plunge into another war, one thing certain is that Japan would not be drawn into the maelstrom. When the German or Polish guns roar on Soviet Russia's western front, the guns of the Manchukuo-Japanese forces will be silent on the Siberian front—which, incidentally, will put to shame the "certain well-informed circles" (conveniently so called by the American press), which have been predicting Soviet-Japanese war these past few years, having set even the date of its beginning for May, 1934! Whoever thinks Japan secretly allied with Germany is addicted to seeing things at night.

Were Japan animated with what the French call la guerre absolue, a sinister idea of unlimited war, she could have no better opportunity to attack the Soviet union than when the Red army would be concentrated at the European scene of trouble. Such, unfortunately for the prophets of Russo-Japanese war, is not the Japanese idea. If Japan has seemed to envisage war across the Japan Sea and to be preparing for what foreign observers call "the inevitable," the reason is the concentration of Red forces east of Lake Baikal to the tune of 200,000 men and 500 bombing planes. Once those forces are removed from the Far East or reduced to conform to the normal requirements of defense, the Japanese fear will be alleviated and the tension along the Manchukuo-Siberian border will dissipate.

That the Soviet Union, at this critical time in Europe, is about to transfer to Manchukuo the ownership of the North Manchurian Railway is coincidental, but it is none the less significant. The event is epoch making. It writes a finis to the history of Russia's Manchurian misadventure immortalized by the Japanese victories and sacrifices at Port Arthur, at Mukden and in the Japan Sea and it promises to open a new chapter of better understanding between Tokyo and Moscow.

• • • •

ON March 14 Maxim Litvinoff, in an interview given Japanese correspondents at Moscow, was reported to have suggested "that nations interested in the Far Eastern situation start discussing withdrawal of armed forces from the vicinity of the Manchukuo-Siberian border." When I read these lines in the press, I could hardly believe my eyes, for Russia had, for some two years, persistently turned a deaf ear to the same suggestion advanced by Koki Hirota, the Japanese Minister of Foreign Affairs. While in Moscow last autumn, I took some pains to ascertain the Russian sentiment on the question of border demilitarization. None took the idea seriously. In fact, the idea was scoffed at not only by Russians themselves but by pro-Russian American journalists at Moscow.

Now comes Mr. Litvinoff suggesting demilitarization of the Manchukuo-Siberian border as if it were his original idea. Why this sudden change? The answer is the European crisis. No critical observer has failed to notice that the Soviet Union's diplomacy in the Far East has been influenced by its relations with its European neighbors and the United States, as well as by its domestic state. Whatever may have been America's motives in recognizing the Soviet Union in November, 1933, the latter read into the recognition, and exploited for diplomatic purposes, the alleged desire and intention of the United States to check Japan on the continent of Asia. Japan, naturally, took this Soviet interpretation, endorsed by Japanophobes in America, quite seriously, and looked askance at the United States, at least for a time.

When last summer it became evident that Washington rebuffed Moscow on the old-debt and new-credit question, Russia's star seemed to wane on the American horizon. At that juncture, however, the Soviet Union, through the good offices of Britain and France, was ushered into the League of Nations, and seemed, moreover, to be on the road to an eastern Locarno or an alliance with France, which compensated for the setback it had suffered in America.

• • • •

THROUGHOUT this period Russian diplomacy vis-a-vis Japan was exuberant and self-assertive. Its reflex was quite perceptible in the shifting attitudes of the Moscow Government in the course of the protracted negotiations for the sale of the North Manchurian Railway.

One may think it unfortunate that Russia's reported desire to subscribe to the Japanese thesis of border demilitarization seems to be motivated not so much by her genuine wish to establish friendly relations with Japan as by an expedient necessitated by the exigencies of the European situation. But the motives do not matter, for all's well that ends well. What matters much is the decidedly brighter outlook of peace in the Far East.

To the three nations concerned the benefits accruing from the change of ownership of the North Manchuria Railway are more moral than material. To Russia it means avoidance of war with Japan, with its inevitably disastrous consequences upon her domestic situation, and the opening of a new avenue of possibly lasting peace with that eastern empire. To Japan and Manchukuo it means the removal of the last vestige of the Czarist imperialism in Manchuria.

From the material standpoint, the transfer of the railway is not so important either to Russia or to Japan and Manchukuo. By its sale Russia lost nothing but gained much. One recalls that in 1919 Soviet Russsia unequivocally declared that it had "given up all the conquests made by the Czars," and that it would give up "without demanding any kind of compensation the Chinese Eastern (Manchurian) Railway as well as all mining concessions, factories, gold mines, etc., which were seized in Manchuria by the Czarist government." Instead of giving up the railway without compensation, Russia got 140,000,000 yen plus 30,000,000 yen for retiring the Soviet employes of the railway. Remember, all that Russia had to sell was not the railway itself, but only a half interest therein, and that even this half interest was to have lasted only 21 years, because the railway, under the agreement of 1924 between the Soviet government and the Manchuria ruler, Chang Tsolin, was to have reverted to Manchuria in 1956 with no compensation whatever.

WHEN the negotiations for the sale of the railway was opened at Tokyo in the summer of 1933, the price demanded by Russia was 625,000,000 yen. Of course she did not expect to get it. She knew well enough that the railway could be duplicated today for 170,000,000 yen, more or less, and that is the sum she has finally accepted.

To Japan and Manchukuo the acquisition of the railway will involve an expenditure of some 95,000,000 yen for repairs and replacements over and above the 170,000,000 yen which they are to pay Moscow for the latter's half interest in the railway. For the past 20 years the railway management has expended little for the upkeep of the road and the rolling stock. It is estimated that in order to modernize the line 40,000,000 yen will be required for the repair of the road bed and rails and 45,000,000 yen for new rolling stock.

In the program for peace with Russia, as mapped out by Foreign Minister Hirota, the solution of the railway question is only a step in the right direction. The next problem to be dealt with is that of border demilitarization. Still another problem is that of the perennially plaguing fishery concession. When such matters are amicably adjusted, a nonaggression pact between the two nations will become not only possible but probable.

According to the Japanese thesis, the solution of the outstanding questions must precede the conclusion of a nonaggression pact. Japan thinks a nonaggression pact of little value unless the parties concerned first give earnest of their genuine intent to be mutually friendly by solving the causes which have disturbed and will continue to disturb amicable relations between them. For this reason, Japan, no doubt, will welcome Mr. Litvinoff's overture to discuss borher knowledge of Russia's dealings strained to take this view from her own experiences with Russia and her knowledge of Russia's dealings with China. Such an overture, if made, means a reversal of the Soviet thesis of "nonaggression pact first, discussion of outstanding questions afterward."

Symphony to Close Students' Concerts

Stephen Foster, Edward MacDowell, Charles Skilton and Charles Vardell are the American composers represented on the program of the last students' concert of the season to be played tomorrow morning by the National Symphony Orchestra in Central High School, under the direction of Hans Kindler.

The students' concerts this year have been arranged in the form of a musical tour of various countries, and tomorrow's program visits the United States and Russia. Concertmaster Frank Gittelson will play Rimski-Korsakov's "Hymn to the Sun" as a violin solo, and compositions by Chaikowski and Musorgski are featured.

A large attendance is expected at this final concert of the series. In addition to the many schools which hold season tickets, Wheatley School will send 67 children chaperoned by Miss Gerrritt, and 20 children from Manassas, chaperoned by Miss Virginia Speiden, will be present.

Church Youths Give Barry Play Tonight

"The Youngest," a three-act comedy, by Philip Barry, will be presented by the young people's department of Foundry Methodist Church tonight. Howard Sanders, fourth vice president of the Dramatic League of the department, is directing the play.

Along The Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

Brain-Truster Tom.

ONE of the many delightful things about living in the Nation's Capital, of course, is the many interesting people one meets. It is such a cosmopolitan place. There are the lawmakers from all parts of the country and one has only to sit in the galleries and watch them work to realize just what this country is. And then there are our diplomats from foreign shores, our scientists, our men of letters. Really, one can't, or perhaps I should say cawn't, begin to describe the charm of a dinner party where one's hostess is a person of broad tastes and has invited to break bread with her men and women of diversified minds and pursuits, men and women who are doing things, though it is sometimes difficult to tell just what are the things they are doing.

BARGERON.

Such dinners are far more interesting than the old-fashioned Paul Jones dances, say, and goodness knows the gamble as to whom one is likely to get when the whistle blows certainly makes the Paul Joneses of the Nation's Capital livelier than those of other places because one is liable to catch a girl from Dubuque or from Panama or the Philippines.

In what other place, I ask you, could one run into such a collection of brain trusters as we have had in the last two years? Out in the hinterlands one could go to see one of them at a lecture, but never more than one at the time. Here one is likely to encounter as many as three at a dinner party; not that I mean to say the brain trusters turn out in greater force for dinner parties than lectures, but it just works out that way. For one thing, no lecture club can support more than one at a time, while it is a comparatively easy matter to feed three.

The fascination of living here is dulled, of course, by virtue of the fact that we can't return oftener to our home towns to tell of the interesting people we meet and to make use of the knowledge we have absorbed. I suppose it is for this reason that Representative Tom Blanton decided to reveal immediately and right here in our midst what the brain trust contamination has done for him.

• • • •

We had always looked upon Tom as a man of considerable ability, but, so help me goodness, we had never looked upon him as a brain truster or as having any of their attributes. But Tom has unquestionably been dining with them or associating with them in some way. And, being a fellow quickly to catch on, he has observed their way of uttering epigrams and devastating remarks, as well as the response they get every time they utter one.

I recall on one occasion, one of the Brain Trusters commenting on rugged individualism said "We must retain the right to starve," and although it was pretty old by that time, the very first wave of Brain Trusters having brought it to town, all of the diners simply roared, and looked at the Brain Trusters most admiringly. He got four more dinner invitations that very night.

• • • •

Now, of course, no one knows how long Tom, after listening to these fellows, has been practicing on little epigrams or witty sayings himself. But believe me, he has come to have the business down pat. After his sally in the House against the House Committee investigating crime conditions in the District I recommend him for any dinner table, particularly when a Brain Truster is uavailable or has called up at the last minute and said he couldn't come.

In such a contingency don't hesitate to call Tom. He can with little or no preparation utter the most apt remark you can possibly imagine, some witty little something of but a few words but which hits the nail right on the head. Hearing it you will first be startled and then you will break out laughing in the realization of how in so few witty words he has told the whole truth. For example, Tom referred to the investigating committee which has been after him as the "Tin Can Committee."

Well, there certainly isn't any doubt that this committee has made Tom yelp.

"I told you not to smoke that cigar during the act!"

Naive and Charming Diary of Lester Ward, Our Pioneer Sociologist, in His Twenties.

By Theodore Hall.

"TODAY the girl and I walked to Marg's and along the stream, enjoying ourselves thoroughly. I forgot to say that I bought a box of blacking last Monday morning ($.06). My heart burns with pure love, so that I an not write. New Orleans is taken."

There, in this entry for May 4, 1862, you have the artless, solemn, incongruous, and altogether appealing quality of "Young Ward's Diary" (Putman, $3)—a diary kept between the years 1860 and 1870 by the young man in his twenties who was to become America's first great sociologist. Lester Frank Ward, 1841-1913, left a body of work in that field, in botany, geology, paleontology, and philosophy, which has been somewhat forgotten now. Other names have grown more fashionable to remember. But Ward's influence was greater than we realize. His arguments that woman is primary in the scheme of nature, and his pleas for her political, educational, and social equality with man, gave depth and force to the woman's suffrage movement. His belief that environment was a greater factor than heredity, and his consequent strong advocacy of education had weight in fostering universal public schools. He even foresaw a planned economy within capitalism, a train of thought which preceded and influenced Thorstein Veblen.

And in all his thinking, Ward hewed to the line of his chief aim: greater opportunities for the common man—a purpose whose reason for being is well brought out by Bernhard J. Stern's able editing of this diary of a poor, intensely ambitious, and hard-working young man.

• • • •

YOUNG WARD was 19 when he started this diary in French, for practice sake. He was living in Towanda, Pa., working for his brother in an unsuccessful wagon-hub business. All the time, with very little schooling behind him, he was reading and studying incessantly—physiology, Greek, Latin, German and French, and so on—with the hunger of a young man who has to forge his education himself.

Occasionally he taught school, at $17 a month. His valedictory address to his class and the citizens of Standing Stone—he was 21 at the time—has an air about it which you might relish. Let me clip a sentence or two from it.

"Dear scholars: Events follow events and circumstances materially change. Three months ago Fortune led me suddenly into your midst—a stranger. The honor of imparting knowledge to some 46 juniors of the Anglo-Saxon race has been conferred upon me . . . To the citizens of Standing Stone my eulogies must be short. But I must say that I find around your hearthstones all that elsewhere so universally characterizes the people of our land, sociability, frankness, and hospitality. In short, I find you Americans." Mr. Micawber had appeared in the world 12 years before, I might add.

• • • •

ALL through the first part of his diary runs his impassioned courtship of Lizzie Vought—always referred to, as in the entry with which I led off today, as "the girl." The items are very naive and very moving, and sometimes amusing as well, as in this 1861 version of an approach to What Every Young Couple Should Know: "I left her among kisses and sweet emotions of love Sunday, leaving also with her Hollick's 'Physiology,' which she in her purity and her virtue took with much hesitation."

Money got around very little in that small country town. Ward will note the sale of 4 cents worth of chestnuts and the purchase of a pair of felt shoes for 31 cents. This item has its point: "I have just done a terrible thing. It will cost me 60 cents, because I just broke a thermometer. It puts me in horrible misery. I shall have no money after this. Where I can borrow a little money I do not know. Everything else is all right. But I must hope."

Nevertheless, with "the girl" teaching school also, Ward found himself able to marry. Five days after, at the age of 21, he enlisted and went off to the war.

• • • •

THE DIARY gives a vivid picture of the life of a private and sergeant in the Union Army. Ward was wounded several times and mustered out honorably. Writing for a job to Secretary of War Stanton, and to Lincoln—"I am aware of the boldness of this step, but I can not believe you deaf to the appeal of a young aspirant to wisdom and usefulness through just and honorable labor!"—he succeeded in gaining a Government clerkship.

The war was still going on. Ward's impression of its justice, by no means as valid and impartial as we might expect from a young man building the stature of a great scholar, shows in this note: "Monday morning, the third of April, 1865, the Capital of the Confederacy found itself in the hands and under the banner of the majestic and starry flag of the Union! The army of Gen. Lee has been put to rout, or taken, and the Kingdom of Satan is falling in ruins."

This diary is not one in which we may expect brilliant snapshots of great contemporary events or ideas. To be sure, there are illuminating passages on the agrarian life of the time, on early movements in temperance, woman's suffrage, spiritualism, and such.

But even within his own range, Ward deals more with little personal happenings than with any conscious stress of his growth in thought. It is the flavor of these which gives genuine charm to this literary discovery—a breath of that old, lost America which Thomas Wolfe and many others delight to remember.

Spring Song

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

March 21-22 is the astronomical beginning of spring, though as a boy at school I was always taught that the first day of March was the first day of spring, and I never heard any American say anything else until I was 38 years old.

Vernal and equinox are from the Latin, spring is from the old English, or Anglo-Saxon. Ver is Latin for spring. Equinox comes from aequus, meaning equal, and nox meaning night, and as nox is feminine, one would pronounce the two Latin words very much as we pronounce the one English word—aequa nox, if you pronounced them as I was taught when a schoolboy.

Spring means something leaping up; thus a spring of water and the spring of the year are really the same word, because spring is the season when plants spring up, and everything gets a fresh start.

Not only do plants spring up in the spring of the year, but so do all the poets. Spring is the signal for the poets and romantic writers to break loose. When we were children, we became rather weary of long descriptions of the flowers that bloom in the spring and the birds that sing, so when my brother, Arthur, at the age of 8, wrote a short novel which he intended to crowd with murders and other modes of violent behavior, he cleaned up spring in one sentence as follows:

CHAPTER SECOND.

Spring was now coming with its birds, etc.

This method seems to me not without merit.

Of the poems and pictures and music dealing with spring (Botticelli's "Primavera") Mendelssohn's "Spring Song," I think the most beautiful thing ever written is in the song of Solomon in the Bible. For it combines words, pictures and music.

My beloved spake, and said unto me, Rise up, my love, my fair one, and come away.

For lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone;

The flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land:

The fig tree putteth forth her green figs, and the vines with the tender grape give a good smell. Arise, my love, my fair one, and come away.

A Ship's Return.

("The Morro Castle, floated at last, has been towed to New York harbor, where she will be examined and, if not worth salvaging, taken to sea and sunk."—News item.)

Idle she lies like a spectral ship—
A carcass of twisted steel;
Finished at last is her autumn trip,
Death at the blackened wheel.

Seared by the flames in a night of hell,
Swept by a winter's tides;
Desolate, battered and broken shell,
Back into port she rides.

Gruesome and bleak in the blinding day,
Ghostly and weird by night—
Deathly and still in the teeming bay,
Scorned by the gulls in flight.

Once she was queen of a pleasure fleet—
Laughter she knew, and song...
Orchestras strumming their music sweet . . .
Happy she was, and strong.

Into the sun as the music played,
Gay with her wind-whipped flags;
Vibrant and eager and unafraid...
Home like a corpse in rags!

Cutting the blue like a living thing,
Buoyant and gay and proud—
Now for a spell in her grief she'll swing,
Mists and the fogs her shroud.

Broken and torn is her body now,
Gone is her spirit, too;
Skeleton ship from her stern to prow,
Scattered afar her crew.

Memories horrible sweep her deck,
There in the bay, forlorn;
Rattling, rusty and ravished wreck,
What did you see that morn?

Skipper a corpse ere the flames burst out . . .
Death! Did you see it leer?
Saw you the doom that was all about?
Sensed you a fate so drear?

Flames and the gale and the awful cries . . .
Panic by night at sea . . .
Horror as seen in a woman's eyes...
These your stark memory.

• • • •

Ghost of a ship that had queenly grace,
Beauty and form so fair,
Why can't they find you a resting place
Ending your anguish there?

Salvagers tramp through your gutted hull
Talking of costs and fees;
God bring you rest like a stricken gull
Out on the open seas!

Only Die-Hards Decry Rearmament Of Nazis

Fear In Europe Has Provoked Arms Race Placing France In Dilemma.

This article, written before Hitler's recent denunciation of the disarmament clauses of the Versailles Treaty, indicates that such a move had been generally anticipated throughout Europe, particularly in France.

By Andre Vulliet.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris, March 12 (By Mail).

OF greater concern to most European nations than the Greek revolution, the Italo-Ethiopian tension or any Balkan trouble, is the pace of Germany's rearmament. This cause of worry has been taken so seriously by Europe's Big Three that, in the short space of the past three weeks, it has been publicly expressed, either in the spoken or the written form, overtly or implicitly, by Italy, France and Great Britain.

In a communication issued last month by Count Ciano, son-in-law of Premier Mussolini and Italian Undersecretary for Propaganda, the Italian government called attention to the fact that it can count on a total of seven to eight million men available in case of emergency. It was rumored in Rome official circles that such an announcement made at this time was also meant as a warning against the possibility of a Nazi putsch in Austria.

On February 3, in a "White Paper" now famous, the British Government, in turn, justified Britain's need of a more adequate defence by Germany's military preparation.

And the French Parliament, a few days ago, passed a series of measures meant to strengthen the French army and to maintain its effective force on its present level through the next four years. Even small, neutral Switzerland, in a popular vote last month, decided to increase its military training periods from two to three months, as a measure against a so-called German military plan calling for invasion of the French territory via Switzerland.

• • • •

THE fact that so many nations, whose policies have hitherto been so different, suddenly evince a common fear and seem ready to act accordingly, is one of the most remarkable developments of the past few months.

That Germany is rearming on a large scale is no longer a matter of conjecture. That she has a right to do it is no longer contested by anybody, except by French diehards. But the consequences of such rearming are a matter of grave anxiety to European diplomats.

"This re-armament," the British White Paper of February 3 read, "if continued at its present rate, unabated and uncontrolled, will aggravate the existing anxieties of the neighbors of Germany, and may consequently produce a situation where peace will be in peril. His majesty's government have noted and welcomed the declarations of the leaders of Germany that they desire peace. They can not, however, fail to recognize that not only the forces but the spirit in which the population, and especially the youth of the country, are being organized lend color to, and substantiate, the general feeling of insecurity which has already been incontestably generated."

• • • •

ON the other hand, if nobody believes the Nazi government embarked upon its rearmament policy just to help millions get work instead of relief, it is most generally felt that to slow down Germany's armament industry at this time would throw hundreds of thousands of people back among the unemployed.

There were some 6,000,000 jobless in Germany when Adolf Hitler seized the power, about two years ago. This figure, German statistics claim, has been cut down to 2,200,000.

Since it is almost impossible to determine where an armament industry begins and where it ends, it seems reasonably safe to say at least that a large proportion of those 3,800,000 who have been given a job during the past two years have made their living on armaments. How would they accept to drop their tools and starve again? Men will not always die quietly, as John Meynard Keynes, the British economist put it.

So, the leaders of Germany may, some day, be faced with this more or less ghastly alternative—a war or social troubles. If the economic structure of the Reich does not collapse before its war equipment is completed, a European conflict might well break out. But Germany's neighbors are doing their best to confront her with such a formidable display of united forces that social troubles will look to her like the better solution.

• • • •

CONTRARY to the opinion expressed in the House of Commons by Laborite Maj. C. R. Attlee, it does not seem that the adoption of the White Paper policy and a strengthening of armaments mean repudiation of the League of Nations.

It may be of interest to recall that the League of Nations itself, whose definite object is "the collective organization of peace," never gave up the idea of resorting to strength, should the need arise. Article 16 of the League of Nations Convenant actually calls for sanctions to be applied against an agressor.

This article was embodied in the Little Entente and the Balkan pacts both of which provided for mutual military assistance and, to a lesser extent, in the Locarno treaty. None of these agreements, so far, has been condemned by the League of Nations as contrary to its spirit.

The strengthening of a nation's military equipment, it seems, is not in opposition with that spirit, provided such an equipment can be integrated in the League framework or in a system of mutual assistance pacts. The characteristics which make such accords essentially different from the military alliances of pre-war fame to which they are often compared, is that the name of the possible aggressor is left in blank and that each signatory can either attack, or be attacked by, any of his co-signatories. This should make it exceedingly dangerous for a party to the agreement to be the aggressor as, should the other parties be equally well armed, it would meet with overwhelming superiority.

• • • •

FACED with a deficiency in France's recruiting power due to the lower birth rate during the four war years, the French government has obtained from Parliament an authorization to extend the military period from one to two years during the next four years.

The question had been up in the air for some time. It was a source of political disputes and bitter fights between right and left parties, "the demagogy of the right speculating on the people's fear, the demagogy of the left speculating on their selfishness and their desire not to be bothered," as Emmanuel Berl, noted political observer, wrote in the leftist organ, Marianne.

So, according to whether they are in one or the other of those two contradictory moods, the French keep asking themselves one of the two questions: "Must we defend ourselves?" or "How must we best defend ourselves?"

"But if military strength and adequate defense is a question of men, France, it seems, had better call quits, as 40 million Frenchmen will never make as many soldiers as 65 million Germans.

Armies of Italy Add 500,000 In War Threat

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Rome, March 21.—Premier Benito Mussolini answered Adolf Hitler's rearmament threat tonight with an order designed to hold two full military classes in service simultaneously, adding 500,000 men to the Italian forces at home and in the colonies.

Il Duce, following France's lead in extending at least temporarily the period of service for conscripts during the present emergency, announced his government has decided to retain two classes under the colors, including one that ordinarily would have been demobilized on April 1.

The announcement was made through Gen. Federico Baistrocchi, undersecretary for war, in the Chamber of Deputies tonight. The general said on account of the political situation the government considered it necessary to retain the present class under the colors, despite the fact the first class of 1914 was reporting for duty in April.

Year's Term Ignored.

"While the actual term of military service remains one year," Baistrocchi said, "the political and military situation will not permit us to adhere to that limit at present."

The drastic order means that all classes of 1913-14, totaling 440,000 men, will be under the colors simultaneously. Most of them will be in service on the mainland of Italy.

The remainder of the 500,000 new troops will be those recruited from the class of 1911, of which two divisions already are in or on the way to East Africa for duty in the Abyssinian dispute.

The increased military service order came shortly after Italy dispatched a note of protest to Germany against Der Fuehrer's plan to build an army of 500,000 men in the Reich, in violation of the treaties.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, March 21.—Italy's military machine is functioning at top speed and she is ready for war, Undersecretary of War Federico Baistrocchi told the Chamber of Deputies today.

Although he referred specifically to the Italo-Ethiopian conflict in East Africa, informed and authoritative quarters regarded his statement as an answer to Germany's military conscription decree.

It was learned on the best authority that the paragraph in Baistrocchi's address referring to Italy's military preparedness was inserted after the German military development. It was not in the original text.

"War of Movement."

In any case, Baistrocchi was fully aware that the Italian envoy in Berlin had just delivered an energetic protest against the Reich's rearmament, saying the Rome government "can not accept a situation determined by a unilateral decision annulling obligations of international character," and that the German government had refused to entertain the Italian objections.

The undersecretary said Italy is ready for a "war of movement," referring to fast moving conflict as opposed to static trench warfare.

For such fighting Italy would employ her famed "celerity corps" which she had been busy developing. Italian military experts believed that much of the trench warfare such as marked the World War would be eliminated with the aid of tanks, fast moving troops mounted on motorcycles and bicycles and armored cars.

Abyssinians Told To Stand Ready

By the United Press.

Addis Ababa, Abyssinia, March 21. Emperor Haile Selassie I tonight ordered all provincial governors to return to their posts in readiness for "any possible emergency" arising from the recurrent frontier dispute with Italy.

The emergency order to all governors went out following Abyssinia's renewed appeal to the League of Nations to intervene in the dispute, which the emperor fears may result in war.

However, no formal troop mobilization has been ordered.

Abyssinia is determined to act solely under direction of the league, a spokesman reiterated.

Nevertheless, an increasing feeling of alarm is spreading in the country as a result of Italy's mobilization of two divisions and her constant pouring of thousands of men fully equipped for a hard field campaign in the African hinterland into Somaliland, adjoining this country.

Fears are openly expressed that Rome has territorial acquisition in mind, and the Abyssinians are determined to fight before permitting such action to go unchallenged.

Miss Tufverson, New York and Detroit attorney, has been missing since she married the former army officer in December, 1933, at the Little Church Around the Corner.

declaration from the floor, but Lansbury insisted that the people of Great Britain and other countries are "now living in a war mentality." He demanded that European statesmen act to preserve peace.

"Never have I observed such a feeling of dread expectation," Lansbury cried, "or a feeling that something dreadful is going to happen, since the last week-end."

Lansbury said Germany had flung down the challenge to the world by not only demanding arms equality, but also the privilege of tearing up the Versailles Treaty to embark on a policy ultimately plunging civilization into destruction.

Would Ban Air Warfare.

The explosive Laborite demanded that Britain reply by flinging down a counter challenge on the conference table, proposing abandoning of aerial warfare by all nations. Lansbury urged the world's airways be "nationalized," and amid cheers asserted:

"I want the British Empire to say we are willing to take a chance in an earnest endeavor to end this foul business of fighting from the sky."

He asked Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, while in Berlin on Sunday to say that Britain does not agree with the manner in which Germany is now re-arming, and stand firm with the French and Italians.

Cheers also greeted Sir Herbert Samuels, Liberal Party leader, when he warned: "Equality for Germany, yes—military predominance, no!"

He predicted that Germany's neighbors would draw together for mutual protection if the ideas of militarist supremacy in Europe again gained the upper hand in Germany.

Sir John, entering the discussion, said he and Capt. Anthony Eden, lord privy seal, were going to Berlin on Sunday "as the sincerest friends of peace."

The foreign secretary emphasized the harmony of action among France, Italy and Britain concerning Adolf Hitler's arms scheme and told Commons Eden would cooperate fully in Paris at the first three-power parley there Saturday.

Going to East Europe.

He said Eden would proceed to Moscow after the Berlin parleys, and stop at both Warsaw, Poland, and Prague, Czechoslovakian capital, on his return to London. At the end of this series of visits, Sir John told the House there would be a general allied conferenc in Italy, called by Premier Benito Mussolini.

"Let nobody suppose these meetings are directed against somebody else," the secretary warned, however. He insisted they were purely in the basic interest of peace on the troubled continent, adding that Britain wishes to bring Germany back into the comity of Europe "on terms fair to her and secure for all."

He revealed also that Germany was being invited to attend the parley in Italy, presumably before the forthcoming special session of the League of Nations Council, saying: "We would be glad if Germany took part there."

Sir John described as "grave and appropriate" Lansbury's references to Germany's arms action.

A hint that he might try to persuade Hitler to reduce his plan for an army of 500,000 men was seen in his remark that "figures in the German declaration raise grave doubt whether, if persisted in, agreement with some of Germany's neighbors would be possible."

many, protested against the new Reich army and sought to prevent any further violation of the peace treaty by stamping the Reich as an international lawbreaker.

The punishment sought by France was world condemnation for the German action—but the great danger as seen by informed quarters, was that German conscription might be a preliminary to territorial demands which they say would hold the danger of war.

The protest to Berlin accused Germany of either refusing to abide by the treaties or seeking to sabotage peace efforts.

In citing Germany today before the league council, France intended to establish legally that Germany is wrong and that France has no intention of recognizing German violation of the military clauses of the Versailles Treaty.

A Preliminary Statement.

The French note of protest, which the Germans announced they "refused to consider," was a preliminary statement of the French case.

The next step is the tripower Anglo-French-Italian conference at Paris Saturday before Sir John Simon, British foreign minister, goes to Berlin to talk with Reichsfuehrer Hitler. The next is the conference of the same powers in northern Italy after the Hitler-Simon meeting. Finally, the whole matter will be presented to the League of Nations.

The three-power conferences are designed to show the world that there is unity among France, Italy and England against Germany's refusal to adhere to military limitation.

There was apparent a determination on the part of France not to accept German re-armament as an established fact in any future negotiations.

In its note to the leauge European "uneasiness" was blamed on Germany. A warning that other powers may act to hold her in check was contained in the phrase that Germany must shoulder "responsibility" for measures other governments may feel obliged to take.

Officials objected to German announcements that the French and Italian notes were "rejected" or "not to be considered" because they were based upon the Treaty of Versailles which the Germans assert the allies made obsolete by failure to keep promises to disarm.

A Simple Declaration.

Officials said the French note was a simple declaration of French protest to German decisions, and a refusal to recognize their legality. Consequently, the French say, the note called for no answer. They said the note was presented and received in accordance with diplomatic custom.

The French sought to lend further weight to the Berlin and Geneva notes with a statement from Maurin that Germany's army now consists of 700,000 men, with the whole country working feverishly on war supplies.

Maurin told the Chamber of Deputies army committee that Germany's military program will be completed in the spring of 1936. He estimated that German factories are turning out aircraft at the rate of 15 a day.

The only military alliances are those made with Belgium in 1920 and Poland in 1922, but he said there ought to be mutual guaranty accords with Britain, Italy and Russia.

The war minister estimated that the German army had ten divisions motorized and asserted 90 per cent of the German factories and machine gun plants are working day and night, with four shifts, on equipments and munitions.

British Ship Visiting.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 21 (AP). H. M. S. Danae, British naval cruiser, dropped anchor here this morning for a five-day good-will visit to the city. A gun salute was exchanged with the U. S. S. Trenton, flagship of the special service squadron stationed here.

Ex-Head of Notre Dame Reported Seriously Ill

South Bend, Ind., March 21 (AP). The Rev. John W. Cavanaugh, C. S. C., 64, eighth president of the University of Notre Dame, was reported seriously ill here today. Physicians said his health had been failing for the past month, and his condition became acute four days ago.

Father Cavanaugh became president of Notre Dame in 1904 at the age of 35 and held office until 1919, when canon law made it necessary for him to resign the post. He guided the destinies of the university through its expansion from a small school to one of national prominence.

Ransom Payment Delay Obtained for Fowler

Aguas Callentes, Mexico, March 21 (AP).—Although the deadline fixed for payment of ransom on Mark Fowler, kidnaped American mining engineer, expired yesterday, Mexican and American authorities were reported to have contacted the kidnapers and obtained an extension.

Fowler was captured in the State of Zacatecas March 15. A Mexican named Jasmine, taken with him, was released to obtain the 10,000 peso ransom demanded.

Senators Back Plan to Remove Profits of War

Flynn to Give Committee Tuesday His Drafted Legislation.

By the Associated Press.

Approval of the essentials of a drastic plan to take the profits out of war was given yesterday by the Senate Munitions Committee, while, in other Capitol sectors, officials listened for any war rumblings from Europe.

The Senate committee plan, drafted by John T. Flynn, New York economist and magazine writer, would limit personal incomes in war time to $10,000 and would take by taxation virtually all corporation profits.

Flynn promised to put in the hands of the committee not later than Tuesday completely drafted legislation incorporating his idea that the Nation should "pay as it fights" instead of leaving a due bill for future generations.

Army of Servants.

He declared stripping recipients of large salaries of all but $10,000 in time of war "might be serious to a man used to a large retinue of servants," but it would not affect "the broad design of the war."

"The army of servants" would be absorbed into war-time industry, he said.

Lauding the economist's suggestions, Senator Vandenberg said: "It is proposed to strike at the economic heart of the war problem by the simple, fundamental device of requiring that no future war shall be fought on borrowed money, but shall be paid for substantially by current taxes.

"It is the process of making war on borrowed money which primarily creates the sinister inflation out of which grows, first, the opportunity for swollen profits; second, the economic dislocation of the war era, and third, the postwar calamity of deflation."

"I subscribe to every syllable of that," Flynn responded.

The committee has virtually completed the preliminary stage of its investigation. It plans only to question Bernard M. Baruch briefly Tuesday before submitting its legislative plan to Congress.

Bills To Be Revised.

Nye said the bills presented by Flynn "probably will be written up quite a bit by the committee," but as to the plan:

"Generally it is indorsed by the committee."

President Roosevelt is committed to the general principle of eliminating war profits, but he has not openly indorsed specific proposals.

From the White House has come information that Baruch, a New York financier, although head of a committee chosen by the President to design a means of taking war's profits, nevertheless would be "speaking only for himself" when he appears before the committee.

The committee planned to question Baruch closely about his proposal to fix prices in time of war as the major means of combating excess profits. Some committee members regard this as "inadequate."

"You should put something in this law," Flynn said, "which will make it impossible for some future Administration to hamstring it in time of war."

Underground Trolley On Bridge Is Ordered

The traction company was directed to submit detailed drawings for these features of its work in connection with the building of the bridge before proceeding with the construction.

Laval Notes to Germany and Geneva Protesting Against Treaty Violation

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, March 21.—France protested directly to the League of Nations today, under Article 11, paragraph 2, of the league covenant, against the decision of the German government for a rearmed Germany.

The text of the French note to the league follows:

"By a law, the text of which was communicated March 16 to the ambassadors at Berlin of France, Great Britain, Italy and Poland, and which was made public the same day, the German government has decided on the reintroduction of general compulsory military service in the Reich and to reorganize the German army into 12 army corps and 36 divisions.

"The German authorities also, a few days earlier, announced the creation of a German military aviation force. In both cases the German government has deliberately repudiated by a unilateral act the contractual engagements embodied in the treaty which Germany signed.

"When entering the League of Nations, of which she still remains a member, until the expiring of the period of two years from her notification of October 21, 1934, Germany in virtue of the preamble of the covenant undertook to observe a scrupulous respect for all treaty obligations in the dealings of organized peoples with one another.

"In the circumstances and since, under the terms of paragraph 2, Article 11, it is the right of each member of the league to bring to the attention of the council any circumstances affecting international relations which threaten to disturb international peace or the good understanding between nations upon which peace depends, the government of the republic (of France) has the honor to notify the council of the league of the situation created by the attitude of the German government.

"Because of the gravity of the question raised by German initiative, I have the honor to ask you to call an extraordinary session of the council for the examination of the present request."

(Signed) PIERRE LAVAL,
Foreign Minister of France.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 21.—The text of the French note to Germany follows:

"Receiving the Ambassador of France March 16, the chancellor of the Reich made known to him the text of a law promulgated the same day by which the German government re-established in Germany obligatory military service and increased the German army to 36 divisions.

"A week earlier, the German authorities had given an official status to German military aviation.

"These decisions are definitely contrary to the contractual engagements written in the treaties which Germany signed.

"They are equally contrary to the declaration of December 19, 1932, whereby the Reich government voluntarily recognized that a general statute of armaments carrying equality of right for Germany with all nations should not be made without the establishment of a security regime for all.

"After several proposals tending to give effect to this principle, the French government, in accord with the British government showed its confidence in the government of the Reich by proposing to it a procedure of negotiation free and fully compatible with respect to the treaty rights for the establishment of contractual means of a new arms status for Germany in a general settlement of the problem of security and of armament and the government of the Reich and appeared to justify the confidence in accepting the principle of such procedure.

"The publication of the German law of March 16, intervening brusquely before the date fixed for the first exchange of views between the government of the Reich and one or two signatory governments of the London communique of February 3, constitutes new manifestations of the methods the government of the Reich intends to oppose to the offers of conciliation which had been made to it.

"A double conclusion thus must be drawn by the government of the (French) republic on one side that in a general fashion the government of the Reich deliberately distrusts the essential principle of the right of a people that no power can denounce the engagement of a treaty or modify its stipulations except with the agreement of the contracting parties and by means of a friendly agreement; on the other side, and in particular after having itself shown its desires to see cleared up between the interested powers the immediate effect of the negotiation to which it was invited, the government of the Reich has deliberately taken the most effective measures to compromise the fate of this negotiation in taking for itself in advance and unilaterally through a fait accompli of one of its essential objects.

"The government of the republic has the duty to make the most formal protestation against these measures with regard to which it now makes all reservations.

"Conscious of the efforts of conciliation which it has not ceased to follow, in all loyalty and with the most constant care for German dignity, to associate the Reich fully in the organization of European security, it can only place on the German government responsibility for the state of uneasiness thus created in the world and the consequences which can result from it, that is to say those obligations which from this fact may be imposed on the governments of the different interested countries.

"Determined, so far as it is concerned, to seek all means of international cooperation designed to dissipate this uneasiness and to safeguard the peace of Europe, the French government desires to reaffirm with its respective treaties its firm resolution not to accept in any negotiation that consideration be given unilateral decisions taken in violation of international engagements.

"PIERRE LAVAL, Foreign Minister."

(The Italian note to Germany protested violations of the military clauses of the Versailles Treaty and reviewed recent developments much in the same manner as the French note to Berlin.—Editor's note.)

2 Workers Stricken With Food Poisoning

Charles A. Biggs, 36, of the 7100 block of Georgia avenue northwest, and Don T. McClellan, 49, of the 4100 block of Emery place northwest, carpenters at a downtown department store, yesterday were taken to Emergency Hospital suffering from food poisoning.

The men were stricken while at work. They told physicians they had eaten several deviled crabs at a downtown restaurant shortly after midnight Wednesday. They were treated and ordered to return home.

Roosevelt to Keep Out of 'Witches' Cauldron; Our Pact a Makeshift.

of the Versailles Treaty—the section against re-arming which Hitler has now repudiated.

Hence, while a technical, legal case can be made for objecting that Hitler has incidentally trod on our treaty, this Administration doubts that it was ever the purpose of our treaty to make us a party to disputes subsequently arising in Europe over those sections of the Versailles Treaty to which we alluded in a rather wholesale manner in trying to reserve our alleged or asserted "rights and advantages," if any.

Other Repudiations Accepted.

As a matter of fact, while we reserved other parts of the Versailles treaty in our separate one we have complacently accepted their vitiation or repudiation without a murmur. Thus the "war guilt" clause was lumped into our catch-all clause, and nobody proposed that we defend that. More important, we reserved also the reparation sections, and we not only maintained for years the fiction that there was no connection between what Germany owed the Allies and what they owed us, but when the whole reparation system broke down, far from protesting, we remained scrupulously remote and aloof. That was in the era of "unofficial observers."

So while the Roosevelt Administration inherited precedents, in the case of Japan, for protesting in favor of the sanctity of treaties, it also inherited precedents for not doing so in the case of the separate treaty with Germany. Thus, the compulsions to make an issue over the latter are very slight.

Other Considerations.

Rather, the Administration is more moved by other "moral" considerations, as to whether a situation might develop, if Hitler remains obdurate and belligerent, in which the raising of our voice might carry some weight. At the moment, as the Administration sees it, there is no issue presented or right invaded or challenged which would justify us in making "representations."

On the other hand, the Administration is reserving freedom of action, and surveying the turmoil with an attempt to be calm and dispassionate. We are not going to jump into any "witches' cauldron," as one official puts it—or into the bramblebush, as another has it.

And, as another authority remarks, just what precisely did all our reserving of "rights and advantages" in our separate treaty with Germany net us? Not a right, not an advantage, he answers.

The President has gone over the situation exhaustively with Secretary of State Hull and Ambassador at Large Norman H. Davis. All appear fully agreed that watchful waiting is our cue. They do not care to have the idea go abroad that we are indifferent to developments that may jeopardize our real interests, nor do they want the country to get the notion that we are rushing into the bramble bush.

In particular, the Administration wants to see what treatment is meted out to Sir John Simon when he gets to Berlin, for the feeling here is that Hitler has a chance to make or break the peace of Europe, to be statesman or scourge—that nothing we might appropriately do at this hour would alter the fates.

Slash in Louisiana Phone Rates Upheld

Baton Rouge, La., March 21 (AP). Judge W. Carruth Jones in East Baton Rouge District Court this afternoon upheld the right of the Louisiana public service commission to reduce the telephone rates in Louisiana under its recent order. Senator Huey P. Long was the commission counsel.

The Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co. had sought an injunction on constitutional grounds to prevent enforcement of the new rates.

Socialists Shun Huey.

Buffalo, N. Y., March 21 (AP).—The Socialist Party, hoping to unite farmers, organized labor and the unemployed in a new national political party, will have nothing to do with Senator Huey P. Long and his "share the wealth" movement, Paul Porter, Socialist National Labor secretary, said tonight.

Hitler Rejects Franco-Italian Arms Protests

Refuses to Consider Two Notes; Says Treaty Was Already Scrapped.

Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, declared he intended to go through with his mission to Berlin on Sunday with high hopes yet for peace.

In Paris, the French pushed their appeal for league action, and the war minister, Louis-Felix Maurin, denounced Germany.

In Rome, Italy dispatched her note to Berlin and sat back pending the second allied conference, to be held in Como early in April.

In Geneva, the league planned to convene the council in extraordinary session the first week in April, to consider Germany.

Pope to Urge Peace.

At the Vatican, the Pope prepared an encyclical calling on the world for peace.

In the midst of this whirlwind which Hitler is reaping as a result of his Saturday's conscription pronouncement, the German nation remained calm. The protests and shouting had been expected, but even Von Neurath's curt rejoinder to the Italian and French notes caused little surprise.

Hitler's position, as reiterated frequently in recent months, is simply that the former allies by refusing to disarm as they agreed to do under the Versailles Treaty, had scrapped that pact and Germany in now proceeding with her re-armament program was merely following suit.

Von Neurath's responses to the Italian and French envoys were not regarded as formal rejection of the protests, as reported abroad, but denial that the motivation for them was legal, since the very nations protesting the alleged breach of treaty had, in Germany's eyes, been the first to break it.

Both Italy and France, in joining Britain in protesting Hitler's arms action, emphasized they could not condone his unilateral, or single-handed, breaking of the military clauses of the treaty, limiting the Reich's armaments.

The French note, as made public in Paris, emphasized:

"The French government must draw two conclusions:

"1. In a general manner the Reich government deliberately fails to recognize the essential principle of the law of men that no power can withdraw from the engagement of a treaty or modify its stipulations without the consent of the other contracting nations and through friendly understanding.

"Most Formal Protest."

"2. On the other hand and in particular after having itself manifested its desire to see clarified among the interested powers the immediate results of the negotiations to which it was a party, the Reich government deliberately took the measures most suited to compromise the result of this negotiation by taking away from it, through unilateral action and by an accomplished fact, one of its essential objects.

"The government of the French republic has the duty to raise the most formal protest against these measures, on the subject of which it formulates immediately all reserves."

The note said that under the circumstances, France "can only leave to the German government responsibility for the state of uneasiness thus created in the world and for the consequences which can result."

It emphasized that France desires "to seek all means of international collaboration capable of dissipating this uneasiness and safeguarding the peace of Europe," but at the same time insists on reaffirming "its firm resolution not to accept in any negotiation that might follow, unilateral decisions taken in violation of an international commitment."

The Italian note, reviewing the history of recent developments, said approximately the same thing.

Police Shake-up Seen as Result Of Expose Here

By J. Bernard McDonnell.

Rumors of changes among the high officers of the Metropolitan Police Department continued yesterday as District police officials awaited further developments before the special House District crime investigating committee headed by Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia.

The name of Inspector Albert J. Headley, who was to have been made assistant superintendent of police upon retirement of Inspector Thaddeus R. Bean, again was brought before the committee yesterday during testimony of Capt. Sidney J. Marks, commander of the Eleventh Precinct, and Lieut. Emil Desch, of the same precinct.

Inspector Headley, they said, had described the precinct as a "third-class" precinct, and declared that some captains and some lieutenants were going to stay captains and lieutenants for a long time. Lieut. Desch said Inspector Headley had refused to tell him in what manner he had failed in his duty, but had reduced his efficiency rating by 10 points.

Inspector Headley was to have been the beneficiary of the so-called "gentlemen's agreement" between Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, member of the House District Appropriations Committee. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen told the committee that he had not participated in any agreement involving retirement of Inspector Bean.

Inspector Headley seemingly has become the center of the storm. All three of the officers are eligible for retirement because of length of service and age. Inspector Headley said he did not intend to seek retirement and some of his friends are reported to have assured him they would fight to keep him in active service. Among others the inspector has behind him the powerful influence of Representative Blanton. None the less, it was reported, officials are considering his retirement, although none would comment.

Representative Blanton is expected to say something on this point when he takes the floor of the House next week to deliver a denunciation of the crime committee, Washington newspapers and others involved in exposure of his efforts to force Inspector Bean into retirement so Inspector Headley could be promoted.

Blanton Ready to Attack.

Representative Blanton is reported ready to attack one member of the committee and has been busy seeking ammunition against that member. Representative William T. Schulte, of Indiana, incurred the displeasure of the unforgiving Texan when the Indianan insisted Mr. Blanton answer questions asked when he was testifying before the committee.

Friends of Maj. Brown have rallied to his support. He has said he did not intend to seek retirement. The commissioners can retire him, but Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen has indicated he has no intention of proposing such a step to his colleagues. Maj. Brown feels he has done nothing shameful. He said he would have recommended promotion of Inspector Headley, on Bean's retirement, whether or not Mr. Blanton had asked it. Inspector Bean is said to feel that now would be an inopportune time to seek retirement because of the hubbub over the so-called "gentlemen's agreement," which everyone involved has sought to deny except Mr. Blanton.

Meanwhile resentment against the tactics of Blanton apparently was growing among District residents. Arthur Clarendon Smith, president of the Federation of Business Men's Clubs of the District, made public a statement replying to the support given Blanton by Representative James P. Buchanan, also of Texas, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee. There was nothing the citizens of the District could do about removing Blanton from the District Appropriations subcommittee, Buchanan said.

Blanton Deal Assailed.

"Some members of Congress have grown so accustomed to treating Washington as a political orphan that any protest by our people is regarded on Capitol Hill as insolence from the national brat," Mr. Smith said.

"No one questions the right of Congress to judge its own members on committees. But when a thing such as the Blanton deal has been exposed, and Blanton is retained on the committee whose power he misused, there is reason to question the sincerity of that committee's interest in its responsibility.

"We are determined to appeal to Congress for fair treatment—if that is denied us, we will, at least, have the satisfaction of knowing that we did not surrender our right to express an honest resentment at being victimized by political dealing from Abilene, Tex."

Policemen Questioned.

John R. Fitzpatrick, crime committee counsel, was closeted yesterday with six patrolmen from the Fifth Precinct, commanded by Capt. Joseph C. Morgan. Capt. Morgan is reported to have been highly incensed a few weeks ago when he raided a gambling establishment and found nothing there. Subsequently, he is reported to have castigated his men at roll call, saying all were crooks except one who was too dumb.

Hearings are to be resumed by the committee at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow. Capt. Ira Sheetz, commander of the Tenth Precinct, is to be called. Other witnesses probably will be decided on today.

Capt. Marks before the committee yesterday said he needed at least 30 more policemen for his precinct, the area of which he described as large as New York City. He has on an average two foot patrolmen for the seven beats into which the precinct has been divided, he said.

Police Merger Is Urged.

Decentralization of the Traffic Bureau and assignment of motorcycle policemen to precincts was urged by the captain. He also urged merger of the United States Park Police with the Metropolitan Police Department. He said the civil service rating of policemen should be retained, but the percentage allowed for experience and fitness should be materially increased over the present 50 per cent allowance.

"A remark was made to me by Inspector Headley that some captains and lieutenants would be captains and lieutenants a long time," the captain said in response to questions by Mr. Fitzpatrick. "I thought, doctor, it was a strange statement, and couldn't understand it.

"No, I didn't ask him what he meant. I have very little to say to the inspector. He's a peculiar man. I'm peaceful. I dot my i's and cross my t's and have very little to say. I should say the remark was made by the inspector as a bit of horseplay."

"Was it made as a joke?" asked Representative Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine.

"No, Congressman. I thought it had some meaning."

Headley Remarks Aired.

Lieut. Desch said he had heard the inspector say loudly that some captains and lieutenants were not doing their duty.

"I was the only lieutenant there and I thought he meant for me to hear it. I asked him how I failed to do my duty. He raised his arm and said 'You're out of order. You're speaking out of turn.' I said I didn't think so. I was a lieutenant, but he said 'You're out of order.'"

"Did the inspector ever tell you where you were failing in performance of your duty?"

"No, sir," the lieutenant replied. Subsequently, he said, he had learned that his efficiency rating of 84.97 had been reduced by 10 points, putting him so far down the list of eligibles for promotion "I haven't had the heart to see just where."

M'Donalds Face County Inquiry In Wilson Case

Called for Questioning in Slaying of Newspaper Circulation Agent.

Edward M. "Mickey" McDonald, well-known Capital gambler, his wife and his mother and father went before the Montgomery County grand jury in Rockville yesterday to tell what they know about the murder of Allen B. Wilson, Washington newspaper circulation agent, in front of the McDonald home in Takoma Park last October 23.

Though no solution of the killing has been found, it was the police theory that hired assassins with orders to get McDonald, shot down Wilson by mistake as he ran his route in the exclusive Takoma Park neighborhood.

McDonald's 77-year-old father and his elderly mother were the first of the family to be called by the jury. They remained in the jury room only briefly before McDonald's wife, Viola, was summoned.

McDonald followed. He was in the jury room for nearly an hour and a half. When he came out he told reporters that he had nothing to say except that he wished he hadn't been called to testify.

Previously the grand jury heard testimony in the second of Montgomery County's murder mysteries, the slaying of two Capital Traction Co. employes in Chevy Chase early in the morning of January 28. Detective Sergt. Theodore Vollten, head of the criminal identification bureau of Montgomery police, and Detective Frank Brass, of the Washington department, were the witnesses. Neither would comment.

Detectives John Fowler and Floyd Truscott, of the Washington police, also testified in the Wilson killing. They were assigned by authorities here to aid Montgomery police in the murder probe.

Meanwhile, Montgomery police continued to hold in the Rockville Jail a man suspected of a connection with the car barn murders at the outset. No charges have been placed against him and officials privately admitted that little was expected to come from the grand jury's investigation of either of the killings.

Landowners Balk VERA Program

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 21.—"Thousands of dollars" are lying idle in the VERA rural rehabilitation fund because the agency has been uable to buy unused farm lands at a fair price, Director H. H. Gordon said today.

Gordon said owners of idle land which every census or farm survey in the last ten years has shown as unproductive are "mysteriously unwilling" to dispose of the property.

The program contemplate establishing between 5,000 and 6,000 families on subsistence farms, but to date only 1,000 have been placed and another 1,000 have been fully certified and only await the securing of farm tracts by the VERA to begin work, Gordon declared.

Federal Trade Group Questions Mail School

Charging misleading advertising, the Federal Trade Commission yesterday gave Helen M. Cook and George A. Cook, allegedly doing business as the Postal Correspondence School here, until April 26 to show why they should not be ordered to cease certain practices ascribed to them.

The commission's complaint said the Cooks advertised that a former Assistant Postmaster General had prepared their course of instruction. It asserted that the actual course now given has been materially changed since the official referred to died in 1926.

Senate Confirms Reed As Solicitor General

By the Associated Press.

Senate confirmation of Stanley F. Reed as Solicitor General yesterday added a stalwart New Deal exponent to the Administration's legal forces at a time when many issues are approaching a Supreme Court test.

Reed, a Kentucky lawyer, quit his $12,500-a-year place as RFC general counsel and refused a $10,000-a-year Federal judgeship to take the solicitor generalship at only $10,000.

Under the law Reed will act as Attorney General if Attorney General Cummings is absent or ill.

Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

By Morgan Baker.

LEAVING grave office problems of Federal people for a day, we turn to one important item of health and recreation that is in acute need of attention, particularly with the advent of spring and the call of outdoors.

BAKER.

It is tennis.

By the sheerest grammatical technicality are we able to write tennis court in the plural. Parking lots and building operations south of Pennsylvania avenue are wiping out court after court. Now comes along the proposal to remove the courts at the Monument and in Henry Park.

We can't see the merit in the principal of "artistry" back of these plans to abolish the tennis courts. Certainly, in our opinion, it is an artistic treat to see scores of healthy people, clad in white, playing on neat courts. By whose authority are "keep off the grass" signs and pansy beds decreed as so much more artistic that they are to replace tennis courts?

This question and stronger ones reach our desk daily. The following are excerpts from a letter:

"Won't you use your influence and the prestige of your column to campaign against the proposed removal of the Monument and Henry Park groups of downtown tennis courts?

"Washington is very inadequately supplied with sports facilities under ordinary conditions, but this spring finds the situation even worse with the vast increase in number of Federal employes. To remove the only courts which are convenient, or within trolley distance of the great majority of Government employes, is little short of criminal—particularly at this time . . .

"P. E. T. (F)."

Tennis courts seem to be the most economical in cost, space and maintenance of any sports facilities. Approximately six tennis courts, with room for spectators, would occupy the space of one baseball diamond. A golf enthusiast at the next desk says "more tennis courts than have ever been built could be placed on a nine-hole golf course."

Letters on this subject are welcome, along with expressions on all other problems of Government employes.

Lyman Carrier, chief agronomist, Soil Erosion Service, has just returned after several weeks' reconnaissance of the wind-swept plains of the West. T. B. Chambers, who accompanied him on the inspection trip, was to return this weekend.

TAKING leading parts in "The Maid and the Middie," operetta being presented tonight and tomorrow night in the Vermont avenue social hall of the National City Christian Church for benefit of young people, are the following Federal thespians:

Matilda H. Bloom, General Accounting Office; Mason Bray, F. C. A.; Milton Cordes, Internal Revenue; William W. Braithwaite, Bureau of Standards; J. Robert Boatman, Treasury; Ernest Matthews, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Arthur D. Wells (C), Patent Office.

Another Rent Survey.

Another powerful group is swinging into action to obtain lower rents for Federal employes. Representative Henry Ellenbogen, chairman of the rent sub-committee of the House District Committee, has requested the District department of the American Federation of Government Employes to make a survey of the Government service for housing data.

Mr. Ellenbogen has prepared a questionnaire which the thousands of AFGE members will circulate. The questionnaire requests information on the type of quarters rented by individual employes, as to number of rooms and location in an apartment house, private residence or flat, the type of quarters occupied in January, 1934, rent paid per month in January, 1933, January, 1934, and at present, what the individual employe considers a fair rental for the premises he occupies, monthly pay in January, 1934, and at the present time, address of employe in January, 1934, and now, physical condition of quarters occupied at those dates, number of members of family at each date, and services included in rent then and now (heat, lights, janitor or maid service, telephone, refrigeration, etc.).

John P. Simpson, Interstate Commerce Commission, secretary-treasurer of the District Department, is directing the compilation of the data. His office is in the Ouray Building, AFGE headquarters.

PLANS have been completed for the spring dance of the NRA Athletic Association at the Wardman Park Hotel tomorrow night, W. L. Yearsley, (P), dance committee chairman, announces. John Slaughter's original band will play. Assisting Mr. Yearsley in arrangements are the following members of the board of directors:

Clay Williams, honorary chairman; W. A. Harriman, Barton W. Murray, Beverly Ober, L. Collins, G. H. McEwen, W. W. Rose, S. R. Kramer, A. Heath Onthank, Blackwell Smith and Kilbourne Johnston.

On the dance committee are:

T. G. Early, Helene Rogers, Jessie McCormick, Olive McNeil, Irene Palmer, Clarence H. Moulton, Alfred Bruce, William Handler and William Allison. Reservations may be made in any NRA office.

Robert Hitch (F), Naval Gun Factory, invites all members of Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity with the Government to attend the fraternity founders' day banquet and dance tonight at the Highlands Apartments. Reservations may be made through Mr. Hitch by calling the Ordnance drafting room, Navy Yard.

Alexander Richter Elected.

Alexander Richter, architect, Treasury, is the new president of the Washington Chapter, Federation of Architects, Chemists and Technicians, elected at a meeting at Central High School this week. Other officers include:

Royal M. Gerhardt, engineer, Treasury, vice president; A. Fox, chemist, Government Printing Office, recording secretary; Robert Helmholz (F), engineer, Experimental Model Basin, corresponding secretary, and Irving Michelson, computer, Naval Observatory, treasurer.

The Government Printing Office baseball team will sponsor a benefit dance tonight in Harding Hall from 10 to 1, with Bernie Jarboe's Nighthawks playing. George Mosedale (C), manager, urges all G. P. O. employes and their friends to attend.

Two Authors Collaborate.

G. P. Walton and R. F. Gardiner, both of Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, have collaborated in a study on "Conservation of Wastes from Small-Scale Slaughter of Meat Animals," just published by Agriculture. The investigation was undertaken to develop a satisfactory method of disposal for this perishable refuse whereby valuable nitrogen and phosphoric acid might be conserved for use as fertilizer.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor between 4:30 and 6 p. m. today. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: (F) Loew's Fox (stage, Herb Williams, Danny Dare Dancers and other acts; screen, Maurice Chevalier and Merle Oberon in "Folies Bergere"); or to (P) Loew's Palace (Will Rogers, Richard Cromwell and Jane Darwell in "Life Begins at 40"); or to (C) Loew's Columbia (Edmund Lowe and Victor McLaglen in "Under Pressure").

Harry R. Stutsman, formerly executive assistant to Director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, is reported promoted to the position of assistant to Malcolm Kerlin, administrative assistant to the secretary. Mr. Stutsman's work in his former office has been consolidated under direction of Wharton Moore, administrative assistant.

Federal Bridge League.

With only one more session this spring the Execs apparently have clinched the championship by gaining 1¾ boards in this week's play, given them a lead of 5¼ boards over their nearest rivals, the Phychems.

In Section A, Coast Survey won 10½ boards out of 16. High pairs were: North and South—H. M. Ambrose and E. R. Koth, Architects, with .600 average; East and West—W. K. O'Loughlin, jr., and W. B. LeClaire, Federal Housing, with .652 average.

In Section B the Set Backs won 10½ boards out of 14. High pairs were: North and South—Miss L. A. Ehringer (C), and G. M. Richards (C), Weather Service, with .662 average; East and West—Robert Rawlings and Robert Gunsales, Set Backs, with .642 average.

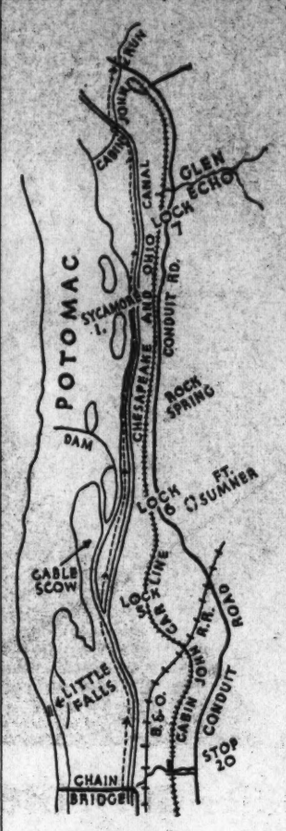
Along the Trail

Two Hikes Planned Sunday, One to High Island and Cabin John, and Other to Garnet Mines.

By Robert Shosteck.

Two Wanderbird hikes are planned for Sunday—one along the towpath to High Island and Cabin John and another from Four Corners to the garnet and mica mines along the Northwest Branch. Also, the club's first anniversary dinner and dance will be held Wednesday evening at the Windsor Tavern, near Ballston, Va.



The hike up the historic Chesapeake & Ohio Canal, starting from Chain Bridge at 1 p. m., will be led by the writer. This easy 4½-mile trip will afford the hikers an opportunity to see many of the first spring flowers and it probably will include a visit to the rugged and scenic High Island, via the cable scow across the Inlet Canal. Hikers planning to go on this trip will meet at Stop 20 on the Cabin John or Potomac Heights carline or, if driving, at the District end of Chain Bridge. The group will follow the towpath to Lock 5, over the lock and along the trail to the scow. The rich woods in the vicinity and on High Island are the favorite haunt of scores of varieties of spring flowers. The writer has already found the spring beauty, pepperroot, saxifrage and speedwell.

If the canal is not flooded and the current not too swift, the group can obtain permission to cross over to this interesting island. A trail runs completely around it and another path follows the crest. On the far side one can find large areas of the blue spiderwort in late spring. A high rock at the upper end of the island affords an excellent view of the rocky dam and the broad, calm river above.

Returning to Lock 6, the hikers will continue along the towpath, past Sycamore Island and, Glen Echo. Crossing Cabin John Run, the hikers will follow the trail on the left bank of this stream to the Conduit Road Bridge. Here street cars run to the city at frequent intervals. Those interested in doing a few more miles through somewhat rougher country may follow the run as far as its juncture with Booze Run, returning along the ridge to the right of Cabin John Run.

The trip to the beryl, garnet and mica mines along the Northwest Branch will be led by Dr. Titus Ulke, Wanderbird mineralogist. Hikers interested in this 4-mile afternoon hike will meet in front of The Post Building at 1:45 p. m., boarding special buses which will carry them to Four Corners, the starting point. The round-trip fare will be 30 cents and reservations must be made in advance at National 4200.

The route of this hike is along the trail which runs left from Four Corners. Nearly 2 miles down this trail the group turns right along a dirt road leading to Gray's farm. The old Kensington mica workings are about 1 mile from this farm and are reached by an interesting woodland trail through coniferous woods. Here Dr. Ulke has found fairly large sheets of muscovite mica together with large crystals of beryl or crude emeralds. Garnets and feldspar are also to be found here.

Below and above the mica mine is an outcrop of mica schist from which very large almandite garnets may be chiseled out. One of the rarest ferns is found nearby, a hybrid between Goldie's fern and the marginal shield fern. The remainder of the route along the right bank of the Northwest traverses very rugged country where one may find a great variety of spring flowers and ferns. Burnt Mills, on the Colesville road, is about 1 mile from the mine workings. Here the buses will meet the hikers about 5:30 p. m.

All Wanderbirds are looking forward to the club's first anniversary dinner and dance, to be held on Wednesday, March 27, at 7:30 p. m. at the Windsor Tavern, near Ballston, Va. We are promised a fine dinner, including chicken a la king, a snappy five-piece orchestra, and a Wanderbird movie, taken by Mr. Sizer. Several hikers are preparing skits (we want more!), and Mr. Hastings, Dr. Ulke, Mr. Sizer and other veteran hikers are expected to tell us about hiking in the '90s. A few Paul Jones numbers on the program will enable newcomers to make the acquaintance of veterans of 1934. Mr. Shapiro, of the Washington Rapid Transit Co., has generously offered free bus service for this affair. All reservations must be in the hands of the writer by Monday at the latest. The price is $1.50 per person, but 50 cents insures your plate. Give your half dollar and name to either the writer or Dr. Ulke on Sunday, or mail it to The Post. Buses will leave the Post Building promptly at 7 p. m. so be on time. Those coming in private cars can follow the buses out Columbia Pike and to the right on Glebe road to Windsor Tavern. Either formal or informal attire will be suitable. Admission to the dance only will be $1 per couple.

• • • •

The Red Triangle Outing Club will meet at Fifteenth street and Constitution avenue at 2 p. m., Sunday, driving out Conduit road to Rock Run. The group will hike along this picturesque stream for more than a mile, and then follow cross-country trails to the towpath which will be followed back to Rock Run. Eddie Smith will lead and reservations can be made through B. C. McGee, North 9190.

• • • •

The Department of Agriculture Hiking Club will meet at 12:30 p. m. Sunday at the Arnold Bus Terminal, 619 Twelfth street northwest. Chartered buses will carry the group to Swinks Mill, Va., the starting point of the hike. The route of this 3½-mile trip is along Scotts road to the Potomac, thence along the river to Bullneck Run and Stubblefield Falls. The hikers will follow the run a short way, turning off to the trail to Prospect Rock. Hence one can obtain a fine view of the Potomac Valley. The group will return to the city shortly after 6 p. m. For reservations call Miss Mildred Fraser, in the Bureau of Public Roads.

• • • •

Hikers who have had the disagreeable experience of being drenched by an unexpected shower will be interested in a booklet prepared by Ernest L. Dench, Nature Magazine's hiking and camping editor. This pamphlet, entitled "Let It Rain," will help you acquire a duck's back resistance to wet weather. The manufacture and composition of everything from headgear to footgear is discussed and the writer lists a large number of products personally tested on the trail. Send 10 cents to the American Nature Association for a copy of this booklet.

IT is not too much to say that the 1935 Ford V-8 brings you an improvement in riding comfort that matches the performance of the Ford V-8 engine.

Let a ride show you exactly what this means. It means "front seat comfort" for rear seat passengers—for everyone in the car!

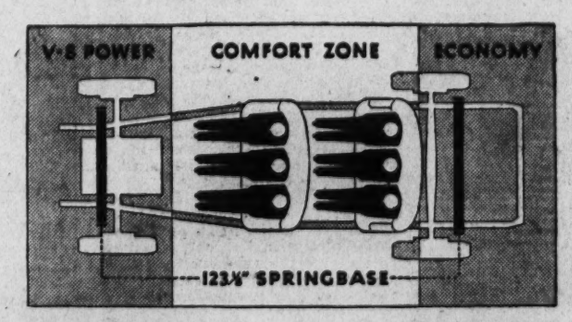
The diagram at the right explains the engineering development that made this possible. But, when you examine this new car, look for more than new comfort. Go to your Ford dealer's expecting to see a car built to meet every present-day motoring need.

The V-8 engine—the most economical, dependable and powerful engine Ford ever built—is here to give you the performance you need on the road and in traffic today.

This car is longer, wider—with plenty of luggage space behind the rear seat. Safety glass all around comes at no extra cost—combining with a welded, all-steel body to give you the security you need.

New, larger, air-balloon tires are standard equipment. Newly designed clutch and brakes not only give better action and service—but also easier operation. In its new body lines and interior appointments, the 1935 Ford V-8 provides the beauty every woman wants today.

This is a new Ford V-8 car, yes. But, more than that, it is a new car value. See it today.



Note how the springs of the new Ford V-8 are placed out beyond the front and rear axles. They provide a long springbase for riding ease on a wheelbase designed for handling ease. Both front and rear seats are cradled between the springs—enabling all passengers to ride in the Comfort Zone.

Columbus, Ohio, March 21.—Two new investigations of the Ohio relief situation, one Federal and the other legislative, were ordered today.

Meantime, a third inquiry, that of the Franklin County (Columbus) grand jury, got away to a slow start, hearing only one witness before adjourning until tomorrow.

Attorney General Cummings announced that Department of Justice agents are seeking to ascertain "if any Federal laws have been violated."

"Whitewash" Predicted.

The Ohio Legislature, late today, amid cries of "whitewash," adopted a resolution authorizing a legislative investigation of the whole relief situation.

The controversy over Ohio relief between Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins and Gov. Martin L. Davey reached a climax last Saturday when Hopkins took over relief administration in the State, charging that he had "incontrovertible evidence" of political corruption. He said that solicitors for the Democratic State committee had "shaken down" persons and firms engaged in selling to the Ohio Relief Administration to pay off Davey's $10,000 campaign and inaugural deficit.

Prosecutor Donald J. Hoskins, of Franklin County, called Gov. Davey's secretary, Dan Duffy, before the grand jury and then postponed the hearing of other witnesses until tomorrow while he conducted a quiet check-up of information supplied him.

To Chisel Chislers.

Prosecutor Hoskins conferred with Jack McCombe, who collected most of the money raised to pay off the deficit, during which time he studied a book labeled "receipts" obtained from State Democratic headquarters. He also called William R. McNamara, suspended director of the surplus commodities division at State relief headquarters; Thomas E. Jones, McNamara's suspended assistant, and Kenneth Aller, a trucking operator. They signed affidavits supplied Hoskins by the Federal relief administrator.

Representative E. R. King (Republican), of Vinton County, raised the "whitewash" cry in the House. Although he voted for the resolution, he said, "I can't believe it will be anything but a whitewash investigation."

C. C. Stillman, the man Administrator Hopkins detailed to Ohio to take charge of relief, announced a drastic change in administrative policy.

Stillman said he intends to "chisel" all "chislers" off the relief pay roll. He dismissed 25 more minor employes, bringing the total discharged in four days to 65. He announced that, effective about April 15, a policy of optional direct cash relief will be inaugurated in the distribution of food, gas, light, some clothing and incidentals to the needy. Orders will continue to be given for rents, medicine, fuel and most clothing.

A.B.C. Board Calls For Reserve Fund

$192,303 Asked for Work; Peery Withholds Action.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 21.—Following announcement this morning that the A. B. C. Board would recommend the setting aside of $192,303.79 as a reserve fund for its operations, Gov. Peery this afternoon continued to withhold his decision on distribution of State liquor profits until he receives a formal opinion from Attorney General A. P. Staples.

The attorney general was busy today compiling answers to questionnaires submitted to him by trial justices, and it was indicated that he would not submit an opinion on the A. B. C. profits until that task was finished.

T. McCall Frazier, member of the A. B. C. Board, favored earmarking the $192,303 profits realized on liquor sales from the time the State stores opened last May to the beginning of the fiscal year on July 1, 1934, for the reserve fund. He pointed out that the revolving fund, to be set up at the discretion of the Governor up to $1,000,000, need not be accumulated all at one time.

Mystery Cloaks Name Of 25th Traffic Victim

Twice believed identified, but now again clothed in mystery, the body of the year's twenty-fifth traffic victim was brought back to the District Morgue yesterday. An inquest will be held by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald at noon today, and the name "John Doe" will be used.

The body had been embalmed and made ready for burial when Mrs. Emma Stehlin, of the 400 block N street southwest, decided yesterday that her identification of the victim as Frank P. Stehlin, of St. Louis, her husband from whom she had been separated eight years, was mistaken. Washington police announced that they were convinced the real Frank P. Stehlin was living in St. Louis with his parents.

The man died in Emergency Hospital March 14 after lying four days unconscious as a result of a hit-and-run accident in the 400 block of Maryland avenue southwest. He was about 35 years old; 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighed 145 pounds, wore a brown hat, black overcoat, brown pants and one black shoe.

Glenn Dale Man's Device Yields Picture of Theft Suspect.

While most residents of Prince Georges County wondered what could be done about the increasing number of housebreakings near Bowie, Md., Edward M. Woods attacked the problem directly—he took a picture of the alleged burglar.

Woods, who lives at Glenn Dale, Md., several miles from Bowie, "shot" the intruder with a home-made flash-photo contraption rigged up on his back porch.

The man, whom Woods believes to be the same person who has entered scores of neighborhood homes in the last several months, took his own picture at the family refrigerator Monday night.

When the flash bulb, attached to the ceiling of the porch, was set off an electric auto horn under a nearby table began to blow, startling the neighborhood. Mrs. Woods, who was sleeping on the second floor, said she caught a glimpse of the man as he ran from the house.

Mrs. Woods also declared she believed this was the same man who had looted her refrigerator twice before during the last six months. Each time he took only one quart of milk, though the refrigerator contained more milk and other food, she said.

The photograph obtained by her husband's ingenious device is unusually plain for a flashlight picture. It shows a side view of the man. The camera used was a small model.

Woods had wired the refrigerator so that when opened it completed an electric circuit. One section of wire ran to an old wooden box nearby, in which the camera was concealed. The other went to a transformer in the house and from there to the flash bulb and horn.

When the circuit was completed an electro-magnet at the wooden box dropped a large cardboard shutter semicircularly from in front of the camera, opening the camera lens. At one point in the shutter's downward motion contacts flashed the bulb and started the horn. The horn had to be stopped from inside the neighborhood. Mrs. Woods, who was sleeping on the second floor, said she caught a glimpse of the man as he ran from the house.

A delegation of citizens from this area has appeared before the county commissioners to urge appointment of a constable for this section.

Move Started For Free Trade At Baltimore

Act in Legislature Would Offer Neutral Zone in Cargo Shifts.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., March 21.—An act which would enable the Mayor and City Council of Baltimore to establish and operate foreign trade zones was introduced today in the Legislature by Delegate Richard M. Baker.

The bill would permit city officials to make application for establishing, maintaining and operating foreign trade zones in the Baltimore Harbor under the provisions of an act of Congress "to expedite and encourage foreign commerce."

Baltimore, March 21 (AP).—G. H. Pouder, executive vice president of the Association of Commerce here, said his organization is backing the bill introduced today by Delegate Richard M. Baker to permit the city to establish and operate foreign trade zones in its harbor.

"The measure would not obligate the city to establish the zones, but would permit it to take advantage of Federal legislation should it wish to do so," Pounder said. He explained a foreign trade zone would in effect be a neutral territory, under guard, where a ship could discharge cargo inbound from a foreign nation and destined to another foreign country without the goods passing through customs formalities.

Would Set up Free Zone.

Under this plan, he said, a ship bound from Europe to Baltimore could also bring cargo consigned to South America. Here it would be unloaded in the foreign trade zone to be placed on a craft bound from Baltimore to the Latin-American port.

Federal legislation was passed at the last session of Congress, final regulations of which will soon be made public, by which a public or private corporation can establish the "free zone."

An act of the State Legislature is necessary, however, to take advantage of the Federal law.

Reading Paper Brings Mistrial In Harding Case

Justice Adkins Acts After Juror Admits He Saw News Accounts.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins in District Supreme Court yesterday ordered a mistrial in the case of Francis H. Harding, charged with a criminal attack on a 6-year-old girl, because a juror admitted having read a newspaper account of the extraordinary precautions taken to guard Harding from attack.

The mistrial followed by one day the arrest of the girl's father, Lorenzo DelRe, who was found to be carrying a loaded pistol when he attended court Wednesday.

After the father was found to be armed, the courtroom doors were ordered barred to everyone. Even after that precaution had been taken, the defendant was ordered placed in the District Jail so that he could be guarded against attack.

The mistrial made it necessary to postpone Harding's case until next month, when a new jury will be sitting. It is necessary to furnish the defense with a complete list of prospective jurors. Defense Attorneys Bertrand Emerson and Edward Buckley intimated that they would insist upon their right to have the panel list served on them within the usual time before they would consent to stand trial.

Assistant District Attorney Irvin Goldstein said he would not insist upon an immediate trial.

Paralysis Victim Goes Under Knife

Operation Benefits Woman, Victim of Bullet.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisonburg, Va., March 21.—Mrs. Stella Meadows, 28, Page County woman whose spine was splintered by a pistol bullet, allegedly fired by her husband, on the night of March 13, underwent an operation at the Rockingham Memorial Hospital here today in an effort by surgeons to save her life. She has been paralyzed from the waist down.

Hospital attendants reported she rallied after the operation.

Questioned by Sheriff Charles R. Fawley, Mrs. Meadows expressed the belief she was going to die. She told the officer last night her husband shot her near their home at Jollett's Hollow, on the Page-Rockingham line, in a jealous rage.

The husband, Ernest Meadows, held at the Luray Jail pending the outcome of his wife's injuries, maintains the shot was accidental. The couple has six children.

Labor Influx Taxes Housing Facilities

Hagerstown Notes Shortage of Apartments.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., March 21.—The scarcity of better-class residential properties and apartments is attributed by real estate men to the recent influx of skilled laborers.

Several large factories have been forced to import labor, while many other workers have come here to work on the $400,000 hospital and a new post office under construction.

One real estate man reported that one six-family apartment house here is now occupied by 13 families, who were forced to "double up" because none other was available.

There has been little building here for four years.

It Costs $1,300,000 To Find Parking Spot

The cost of searching for a parking place in the downtown section is an annual item of $1,300,000 on the bills of Washington motorists, People's Counsel William A. Roberts said last night in an address over Station WMAL.

The average motorist spends at least ten minutes searching for the parking spot, he said, which, when estimated at the average wage of 50 cents an hour, totals $4,160 daily.

Figuring loss of time, cost of gas and depreciation of tires, he estimated that parking space quests run over a million dollars.

Kitty Wagner Again Graces La Paree Show

Fan Dancer and Chorus of 12 Return; Enters and Borgia at Heigh-Ho.

By Kay Ware.

Remember Kitty Wagner, the fan dancer who looks like Jean Harlow? And you remember the 12 chorus beauties and danced with her in the big Winter Garden Revue? The outfit is back at La Paree and the management is dancing jigs of joy.

This revue is full of acrobatics, adagio dancers, fancy, feathered costumes and a good time had by all. There's a fan dance by the chorus that is worth a second look.

Emory Daugherty and boys supply music for dancing and listening. Marie Fowler and Ray Beck croon vocals.

Most advance press agents are people who hang on your desk and bother the life out of you when you're busy. But one agent has been seen in town, and Club Habana is all excited about it. However, unlike most of his kind he's kept in hiding, and nobody has been able to corner him for a final word. The word? Whether or not Club Habana will book a mysterious dancing pair.

Meanwhile Renato and Rita, Moe Baer and Habaneers see to it that this springlike weather brings no inertia. It's always spring at Club Habana.

In case you have paused before that window full of Russian knicknacks in the lobby of the Club Troika you may have wondered from whence they came, and why. The truth is that Helen Hamilton, the feminine genius behind La Troika, is a collector of Russian antiques and handiwork and as well informed as she is daffy on the subject.

Inside the Troika lobby you will find many more thingumbobs in a showcase presided over by a charming gypsy girl, who isn't a gypsy at all but Mme. Bonch-Omolowsky, wife of the head waiter. All the articles are personally selected by Mrs. Hamilton in New York and are imported from Russia. Mrs. Hamilton's home in New York, incidentally, is filled with rare Russian objects d'art and decorated in the grand czarist manner.

The running sign outside the Troika stopped the other night at an extremely embarrassing moment. The sign reads, among other things, as it rolls along, "No cover charge week nights and Sundays." As fate would have it, it borrowed a bit of temperament from a Troika entertainer, stamped its foot, and stopped, not to be started again, with these letters framed in the lighted rectangle:

"over charge we."

Lampkin's trusty left, with which he wields the baton, will try to conquer a new field. Phil will try it out when the cake-cutting ceremony occurs. There'll be a big cake—the artistry of the Ambassador chef—for the maestro's dinner, and in addition, the Hi-Hat will be presented a cake which Manager Russell A. Conn will slice.

Response to invitations have been enthusiastic. Summed up in the words of Moe Baer—"I wouldn't miss it for anything."

Reservations are now being accepted from the public. You may dance and join in the festivities beginning at 9 o'clock. There'll be no cover charge. For reservations, call Frank McNey.

Mayflower put on the Connecticut avenue fashion show yesterday. The Lounge says it has fashion shows every day. And that's about it—and don't think the Mayflower isn't proud of their perpetual models perambulating about.

Sidney's orchestra is getting a reputation as hit-pickers. If you're in doubt about musical trends and tunes, ask Sidney or Buddy Harmon. They'll squint a little and tell you all about it in their most authoritative manner.

An audience which included many of their admirers stood and cheered (literally) at the end of their program. True to form, they did five dances before leaving the floor.

Since they left Heigh-Ho, Enters and Borgia have appeared at many well known night spots. New Orleans, San Antonio and Dallas, Chicago nad other mid-Western cities have seen their work. They just concluded an engagement at the Hollywod Restaurant in New York, where they were featured. They have been booked for a return there very shortly.

Among their new routine is one called "Hell's Bells," a weird, modern stylist number. Patrons of the club in this dance are seeing ballet work pure and simple, tricked up and disguised a bit. The adaptation of classical and ballet dancing to smart and sophisticated night club work probably has been the reason for Enters and Borgia's success.

Madrillonites are sitting up and taking notice of Aida Luciano, the dancing-singing senorita. And no synthetic Spaniard, she. Wearing lots of red, snapping castanets, her act is authentically Spanish.

By contrast, Dickie Bailey, Leon's new accordionist is tall, smiling and shy. He's really just a kid—a bit over 17 by the looks of him—but he knows his music.

Child's Gingham Club is resplendant with a new floor placed conveniently in the curve of the crescent table arrangement. A new show starts today with York and Lewis, dance team with rhumbas and ballroom numbers; Rose Heatherly, an acrobatic dancer and the Hawaiian Islanders who play with the show and during dancing intermissions. George Trotter, the singing master of ceremonies, is held over. Mary Jo Hamilton harmonizes with Jimmy Santmeyer and Casa Rita Orchestra.

Three shows daily, at 1 p. m. 7:45 p. m. and 11:45 p. m. Entertainment continuous.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywood, March 21.

GRETA GARBO'S picture is ready to go into production and as yet she hasn't a leading man; three have already turned down the chance to play opposite the glamorous Garbo. Frederic March is still being tempted with huge salary offers and probably will accept. . . . Josef von Sternberg is amusing himself by doing oil paintings, not for release . . . Will Rogers played a scene in "Doubting Thomas" in which he had to wear pajamas, and the bashful—at least he professes to be bashful—Rogers insisted on wearing his entire street wardrobe under the pajamas. Rogers still refuses to play in "Ah, Wilderness," and the choice is now between Lionel Barrymore and Frank Craven . . . Shirley Temple registered the imprint of her feet on the sidewalk of Grauman's Chinese Theater last week as spotlights glared and the crowd cheered. Of all the stars who left their footprints here for the curious to see, Miss Temple is the only actress who didn't go out and buy a pair of shoes two sizes too small for the occasion.

GEORGE WHITE enters the Fox commissary and walks to a large table where a number of executives and directors are sitting. They do not see White, and he stands there for a second. Then he says: "I guess you've got to be a big shot to sit here, eh?" They laugh, and one of the party says: "Pull over a chair and sit down." White says: "I'm too big to sit with you fellows," and walks away . . . Jed Harris walks about the streets of Beverly Hills wearing a sweat shirt and is taking aviation lessons . . . There is a permanent set at Fox which is a country gasoline station and a member of the Rockefeller Gasoline Co. must also be one of the bankers who owns Fox stock, for shortly after he went on a tour of the lot the names of the gasoline displayed on this prop set was repainted to read, "Standard Gas" . . . Tullio Carminati, who was Grace Moore's leading man, recently completed making a flicker, "Paris in Spring," with Mary Ellis. Everyone asks Carminati if there is any difference between Miss Moore and Miss Ellis, but Carminati is very tactful. His answer is: "There is a difference. One is a blonde and the other is a brunette."

IT was at a private party given by Louis B. Mayer at the Little Club shortly after the preview of "Naughty Marietta," which is a great flicker. Mr. Mayer was very enthusiastic about the picture and started to make a speech. He pointed to Jeanette MacDonald and said: "Jeanette, stand up." She did. Mr. Mayer continued: "Miss MacDonald, they told me that you were through—all washed up. I didn't believe them. I had faith. After listening to you in 'Naughty Marietta,' I want to tell you that you are greater than you ever were. Thank you." Then Mr. Mayer said: "Nelson Eddy, stand up." He did. "Mr. Eddy, they told me that I would be foolish to put you in this picture. They told me that you could sing, but you couldn't act. I didn't believe them. After seeing the picture, I want to tell you that they were wrong. You can act as well as sing." At least Mayer was frank. He told the players directly what Hollywood had been whispering . . . There is an independent picture producer who is about to start a new firm and he is going to call it "Miracle Pictures," and his slogan will be "If it's a good picture it's a miracle."

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

The Whole Town's Talking.

It's a whimsy of nature, no doubt, that spring and Jimmy Durante return to Broadway simultaneously, for spring, that delicate sprite, is the well-dressed maiden of the seasons, and if I recall correctly the lyric of the song that Long Nose used to sing, he is Jimmy, the Well-Dressed Man. When the Casino de Paree sent ambassadors bearing myrrh and incense and spices to Long Nose, to sound him out on the possibilities of an engagement, he was supercilious. "It ain't ethical for one of the legitimate theater to demean himself thusly on a cafe floor," sneered Jimmy. "How much do I git and when do I start?"

Durante returns to us unspoiled, a Ronald Colman in corduroy, an Adolphe Menjou in a sweatshirt, a Ricardo Cortez in a checked suit. The intellectuals and the intelligentsia of New York tried to spoil him years ago and failed, so it was a cinch that Hollywood wouldn't be able to give him a gloss or even a high polish. I remember how the intellectuals "discovered" Durante on Broadway, and the shrill shrieks they gave out when they stumbled on this virgin territory. "You are more than a former piano player from Coney Island," the intellectuals told him. "You are a symbol," Jimmy let it pass. He thought they meant cymbal, which is also entitled to membership in Musicians' Local No.802. Yes indeedy, the intellectuals had themselves a time when Jimmy clicked on Broadway, but he was impervious. "They're good kids," he said, "but you know them rich people are daffy." So Durante returns to town, unspoiled, with Cyrano plumes still fluttering above his nose, largest of natural American breakwaters, and I for one, am happy that he's with us again.

Sorry that I yielded to the temptation to see Tallulah Bankhead in "Rain," but the temptation was strong and the flesh weak. I'd never seen the play, either when Jeanne Eagles did it on the stage or when it was twice transposed to the celluloid, once as a silent picture, later as a talking picture. To me this play was one of the grand legends of the theater, and I see now that no play could have measured up to my imagination of the "Rain" I'd never seen. I found it dull, stagey, dated.

Interesting to watch bushy-haired Leo Reisman leading his swell band at the Central Park Casino. He is all-musician, alternately moody and gay. When he feels happy, Reisman is apt to go skipping about the floor, doing an imaginary tango, or he will follow you and your partner about the floor, singing "Maria" to her—if she's an eyeful. In an age of depressing standardization, Reisman is a rugged individualist.

Movie Stunt Man Dead by Hanging

Gold Medal Pinned to His Nose; Police Probe Case.

By the Associated Press.

San Diego, Calif., March 21.—The body of Carl George Frey, 31, athlete and former stunt man, was found hanging grotesquely from a pepper tree in a vacant lot here today and police began an investigation on the theory he had been slain.

The arms were tied together over the head by the rope which held the body to the tree. A long chain and a leather belt were wound around the neck. A gold medal was pinned to the nose. It bore the inscription "Kreis Turnfest, July 5, 6, 7, 1929, Detroit, Mich. Gut heil."

In Frey's pockets investigators found a packet of yellowish powder which was sent to a chemist for analysis, and a $1,000 insurance policy made out to his mother in Germany.

Officers said Frey had been employed as a film stunt man in Hollywood for eight months and on occasion had doubled for Tom Mix.

A PRESENTATION of THE WASHINGTON POST

L'Aiglon Star Feted at Tea By Diplomat

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted entertained at tea yesterday in honor of Miss Eva Le Gallienne, star of "L'Aiglon," which is playing at the National Theater. Miss Le Gallienne is Danish on her mother's side and speaks several languages fluently.

The guests gathered in the drawing room, where long French windows opened onto the terrace and gardens of the legation.

Mme. Wadsted wore a tea gown of black velvet with several strands of pearls around her throat, and Miss Le Gallienne was in a tailleur with skirt of gray and a jacket of violet tweed. Her blouse was of a lighter shade of violet, and she wore a Cossack cap of Persian lamb.

Asked about the jewelled decorations she wears in the play, Miss Le Gallienne said that the Legion d'Honneur is a genuine decoration of the period, and the two handsome stars are Spanish decorations, also of the period.

Mrs. Forbes Morgan was there in a black frock with a tiny black hat and a wide shoulder frill of dainty lace and mousseline. Others were the First Secretary of the French Embassy, M. Roger Gaucheron, with his sister, Mlle. Simone Gaucheron, who wore black taffeta trimmed with bright green, and the First Secretary of the Argentine Embassy, Senor Don Eduardo Vivot.

Another tea was that given by the Minister of Hungary and Mme. Pelenyi for the latter's nieces, Miss Flora Mather and Miss Elizabeth Mather, of Cleveland, who are passing the week-end in the Capital. With them is a sister of Mme. Pelenyi, Mrs. McDonald McBride.

Mme. Pelenyi wore a gown of palest aqua blue with a corsage of orchids, and her sister wore black velvet. Miss Flora Mather wore an afternoon frock of deep red velvet and her sister was in a powder-blue chiffon.

Glimpsed in the lovely oak-panelled dining room were Maj. and Mrs. Henry Frank Heywood, of the British Embassy, with the latter's sister, Miss Christian Hedley; the Count and Countess de Leusse, of the French Embassy; Mme. Lonbard, wife of the Military Attache of the same embassy; the Attache and Mme. Prochnik, and Miss Christine Beck-Friis, daughter of the Counselor of the Swedish Legation and Baroness Beck-Friis.

Three young members of the diplomatic set who arived together were Miss Nella Veverka, daughter of the Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Veverka, and the Senoritas Olga and Zoe Patterson, daughters of the Cuban Ambassador. Nearby were Miss Elizabeth Roberts, daughter of Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, wearing a costume of gray, trimmed with gray fox, and a large hat of gray; Princess Ourusoff, in a printed frock of maroon and white; Miss Helen Wardman, Mr. Eugene Roberts, Baron Paul Schell, of the Hungarian Legation; Mr. Louis Michell, Counselor of the Swiss Legation; Mrs. Chester A. Law Study Aids Career, Woman Attorney Finds Underwood & Underwood.

An unusual commission for a woman has been received by Miss Susan M. Rebhan, of Cleveland, who has been appointed special attorney for Ohio under the Department of Justice.

Knowledge of the Subject Is a Decided Advantage in the Business World, Miss Susan Rebhan Asserts.

THE CAREER BENT young woman today would do well to study law, whatever her chosen occupation. She may be dismally unsuited to its actual practice, either mentally or temperamentally, but equipped with a general knowledge of the subject, she has the right of way in business and professional dealings. She may even be saved from stubbing her toe on a few financial humps along the road.

"Legal knowledge also gives a woman balance and perspective, which is a decided advantage in the business world," pointed out Miss Susan M. Rebhan, widely known attorney, of Cleveland, who has just received the unusual commission as special attorney for Ohio, handling titles in the submarginal lands and subsistence homestead administration. The appointment, carrying a large salary, was made under the Justice Department.

Miss Rebhan, who boasts probably the women's law firm in Ohio, and is the first and only woman member of the State bar examining board, would not advise all women to go into law as a profession. Those who are exceptionally gifted in the practice are not the rule. And that goes for men, too, she said.

"There is no sex in either brains or ability," she said, "but mediocrity should be discouraged in any profession."

Then Miss Rebhan, lawyer fashion, argued the point on the other side.

An Individual Matter.

"But as long as there are women litigants in court, there is a need for women at the bar," she continued. "Most lawsuits involve the rights of women one way or another—either personal or property rights."

Women lawyers are neither better nor worse than the men in trial cases. It's an individual matter, Miss Rebhan believes. Court work being her own special aptitude, she has some decided opinions on what a trial lawyer should and should not be.

"Emotional? Never," she exclaimed with emphasis. "Excessive emotionalism is passe in the best conducted cases. The clever attorney is the one well versed and well prepared in the law and in the facts of the case. The one who depends upon an appeal to passion or prejudice will not get far with the better educated jury of today.

Personality and poise are also requisites, she pointed out, and personal appearance plays an important part.

How then should the young woman trial lawyer dress to make the best impression on the jury?

"First of all she should avoid being mannish," Miss Rebhan said. "She should be feminine, but not conspicuous. Dark, simple attire is not only more flattering to most women, but in better taste in the courtroom. Make-up of the flashy types especially should be avoided.

"And last, but not least," she concluded, "one of the cardinal principles the woman lawyer should learn is not to expect any special consideration from judge or jury. She'll get it if she deserves it—not because she's a woman."

Miss Rebhan began her legal training at the Ohio State University after she'd found her way around in a couple of other professions. First she taught mathematics and science in high school for ten years. She decided it would be interesting to see life from a different angle, so she became a general secretary in Y. W. C. A. work at Youngstown, Ohio, for three years.

From there she stepped into a national secretaryship with headquarters at San Francisco. It was while in this position that she decided to study law and returned to Columbus, Ohio.

Broadened Education.

"I'm thankful I did all the other things first," she said. "It gave me a broad, general education and knowledge of people. Legal training is a more specialized field, and should come last."

Graduating from law school in 1926, Miss Rebhan independently opened her own law office and has enjoyed a lucrative practice ever since. She has served a term in the city council, and acted as assistant law director for the City of Cleveland during one mayor's tenure of office. In this capacity she had to buy land for the city and try suits brought through disputes over grade crossings.

Then she dabbled in politics. The "most fun" she had was managing Judge Florence Allen's two campaigns for the supreme bench in Ohio. This meant traveling, speaking and contacting voters in the 88 Ohio counties. But it's her one political experience she wouldn't take anything for.

How to Select and Hang Pictures for Best Effect Is Reader's Problem.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have moved into a furnished room which I am trying to decorate and give some semblance of a home, since it is the only home I have here.

• • • •

"I need some advice, particularly concerning the selection and placing of pictures. I don't own any pictures, and since I have to buy whatever I get, I was wondering what would be suitable. Do you have any suggestions? KELMLEY.

Things to Consider.

DEAR KELMLEY: Conservative modern interior decorators say pictures should be hung at the eye level of a person standing; wired to hang flat against the wall, and, if they are small pictures, should be arranged in groups.

• • • •

If you decide upon small pictures hung in groups, three to five in a group should be sufficient, depending upon the size. A symmetrical or balanced grouping is preferred, and pictures so used should repeat the same motif, either in scene or in mounting and framing; preferably in both.

• • • •

If your room boasts vast wall space, and you decide upon a few large pictures, center them over correspondingly large pieces of furniture placed against the wall. Be careful, in this case, not to have the picture seem heavier than the corresponding piece of furniture. Don't hang a large, massively-framed painting over a spindle-legged desk, for instance.

• • • •

In my opinion, it is better to err on the side of too few pictures rather than too many; while well-stocked, well-placed bookshelves and a couple of simply framed mirrors, giving an illusion of vistas and space, often constitute better wall treatment for the one-room dwelling than pictures selected from random.

• • • •

Pictures are not chosen from the point of view of suitability to furnishings so much as they are chosen to reflect the cultural interest of their owner, I should say. Often, too, they represent mental escape into a restful dream world divorced from the reality of actual environment. Are you interested in architecture, in the sea, in mountain climbing, in tropical isles, in hunting, in folk lore?

• • • •

I suggest you choose for pictures to hang in your room those dealing with a phase of life you regard as most nearly ideal or stimulating. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Nature Inspires Frock Ornament

At a recent style showing in Paris the tendency to take inspiration for the spring styles from nature was noticeable in a pink linen country dinner frock which was trimmed with a bunch of radishes. The cluster of lowly vegetables was placed on the pocket of the floor-length skirt, the Associated Press reports.

Day clothes were fashioned of black, navy and green wools and crepes designed in a slim supple silhouette with some fullness in the gored skirts. Many dark frocks and suits had changeable harness—collars and cuffs of organdy and linen.

CULBERTSON on BRIDGE

No. 1357.

A Squeeze Essential.

When the dummy went down at South's final contract of six notrump on the hand below, the declarer studied for a few moments. He finally shrugged his shoulders and said, "Well, the diamonds have to break," and proceeded to play out that suit. The suit did not break, and he went down one trick.

North, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
1◇	Pass	1♡	Pass
2◇(1)	Pass	3NT	Pass
4NT(2)	Pass	6NT(3)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—The alternative response with this hand is one notrump.

2—Slightly optimistic. The heart Queen, however, correctly appears to North as a very valuable card and justifies the encouragement of a slam bid.

3—South, with almost enough strength to bid two hearts immediately over one diamond, can not fail to accept his partner's slam try. He does not wish to support diamonds with only Q x and wants to be the declarer, so his black Kings can not be led through in case North does not have a high honor in one of those suits.

The Play.

West opened the spade Queen and the declarer, after winning with the Ace in dummy, immediately attacked the diamond suit. When it did not break, a diamond trick had to be given to West, and the Ace of clubs was cashed for the setting trick.

South probably had never heard of the squeeze play, even after so much has been written about it. Had South first run his long suit in the hand above, he would have fulfilled his contract despite the bad diamond division, as the West player would have been completely squeezed. It is admitted West had to have practically every important card which was outstanding for the squeeze to occur, and this possibility was not very likely. Yet it was inexcusable for South not to play for every possible chance. It could not have cost him anything to first run his other side suit and then, no matter how obtrusive a player South might be, he could not have avoided stumbling into the squeeze. An optimistic slam contract would have been fulfilled and about 1,000 points saved.

After winning the spade Ace, South should have run his heart suit, as he can well afford to discard three clubs from dummy. This compels West to make three discards. He can safely throw one spade and a low club, but the third heart lead will prove embarrassing. He can not relinquish his diamond stopper, and, as a choice between the spade ten and the club Queen, West should throw the spade. (South is clearly marked with the club King but may not hold the spade nine.)

West's choice of discard makes little difference. The King of spades drops the Jack and the nine starts the squeeze all over again.

Now the club Queen must go, and a low club lead by South establishes his King of clubs and the Ace, King, Queen of diamonds as the last four tricks.

Illness, Accidents and Hysteria Principal Causes of Amnesia

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

EVERY now and then we read reports of persons who have suffered a total loss of memory and who are described as victims of amnesia.

As a rule such cases represent an effort on the part of the individual to escape from an unpleasant or perhaps an intolerable personal situation. Many examples were noted during the World War, when "shell shock" developed under the strain of new and harrowing experiences.

There are two principal types of loss of memory, namely, for past events and for events following an illness, injury, or startling occurrence. For example, in a very severe illness, with high fever and intense toxemia, consciousness may be so dim that the patient exists in a mental fog; circumstances and incidents simply do not register. Even on recovery, perhaps weeks or months later, there is no recollection of what has taken place during the period. In functional loss of memory the mental images of events may be recorded but can not be recalled.

Physicians are familiar with the type of memory recovery that occurs during convalescence from a severe illness. In order to be on the safe side, rather prolonged rest should be required in all cases where damage to the brain has occurred.

Those patients who give no history of injury or illness and who suddenly recover memory usually represent the hysterical type. Either the game has been played out or the disagreeable factors that brought on the manifestations have been removed. Hysterical amnesia should be treated by a skilled psychiatrist, and many of these cases make better progress under sanitarium management.

We must not confuse amnesia with aphasia. This latter condition indicates a partial or total loss of speech and is characterized by the inability of the afflicted individual to express himself in words, although his understanding may be normal.

Return of He-Men Indicated, But Type With Mental Courage To Match Brawn Is Preferred

By Malvina Lindsay.

IT BEGINS to look as if the he-man might return to American life. For women are turning against the sweet fellows they have been so zealously entertaining at cocktail parties. Mary McCormic, opera singer, has set out for the Southwest, where men are men—not sissies—and Peggy Bacon, caricaturist, has left Washington disillusioned because the big men in the Nation's Capital "look like a bunch of softies."

• • • •

Miss McCormic's implied lament was over the disappearance of the strong, silent, muscle-flexing type. Miss Bacon wasn't so concerned with brawn. What worried her was that the national leaders, while intelligent, weren't forceful looking.

These complaints are significant straws in the wind. Many women are feeling that men aren't what they used to be. They are sensing the passing of frontier daring and resourcefulness, of farm hardihood and vigor. What women fail to take into account is that they, themselves, are the original softies, and as such have made men what they are today.

IT IS ONE of the ironies of civilization that women effeminize men and then turn on them. And women are always the first to yield to the allurements of ease and luxury. Take the boom period of the '20s—a period that probably established a new record for the incubation of softies. During it women set the pace in emphasizing the superficialities of life and in mollycoddling their sons—saving them from what "mama and papa had to go through."

• • • •

The cult of the child, which developed in the twentieth century, also has contributed to the effeminization of men. Desirable as it was for parental tyranny to be broken and children given psychological understanding, the swing to the other extreme has denied many a youth the necessary challenge of physical struggle and group adjustment. The neurotic overconcern of mothers has made many a boy a sissy. The setting up of infantile potentates in homes has flooded the country with grown-up adolescents.

• • • •

Woman's dominance in cultural, educational, social and religious life has been steadily growing since the close of the nineteenth century. One good result of this has been that men are losing their silly pose of hard-boiled superiority to cultural interests. Few of them today have to assert their masculinity by scoffing at poetry. But nevertheless this situation has had some enfeebling effects. Women today might do well to encourage more Spartanlike values in the men they influence.

NEVERTHELESS, the traditional he-man does not afford a model in keeping with today's demands. While he had his points, he also had his weaknesses. Often he was a swashbuckling illiterate, a softie at heart, and wholly without mental audacity. He might not have been afraid of a bucking broncho, but he usually couldn't be induced to touch a new idea with a 10-foot pole. He was afraid of culture, he was leery of change. He was prejudiced, provincial self-satisfied.

• • • •

Moreover, he was often without self-control. He engaged in fist fights at the village store, and if he happened to get to Congress he staged oratorical and often physical brawls. Force he may have had, but it was the tool of his passion. His place is in the past. A less theatrical and more disciplined masculinity is needed today.

• • • •

It is to be hoped that the he-man returns. It is to be hoped that he has a hard body, free of office flabbiness, and a clean-cut face, free of night club pallor. But it is more to be hoped that he has a hard spirit and a tough mind, that he has frontier courage in blazing social and economic trails, that in a world being destroyed by its own primitive passions he has strength enough to be his own master.

Bachrach Photo.

MISS RUTH SHERMAN JONES, soprano, who will give a recital tomorrow evening at the studio of the League of American Pen Women.

She Will Give Recital Tomorrow at Studio of Pen Women.

COMPOSING IS all very well, but there must be some musicians to interpret what has already been created, Miss Ruth Sherman Jones, who prefers to do the latter, will give a recital tomorrow evening at the studio of the League of American Pen Women.

A descendant from the same family as Sir Edward Elgar, the great English composer, Miss Jones is also the granddaughter of Dr. Henry Clay Sherman, who was one of the most noted musicians in Washington.

Miss Jones has the distinction of being the first pupil to receive certificates in piano and voice the same year at the Peabody Conservatory of Music. She is now a member of the faculty at the Western Maryland College in Westminster, Md.

Discussing her career yesterday, Miss Jones admitted her first musical ambitions has been slanted toward the piano. "Then I became interested in voice, and for a time opera was my goal," she said. "I suppose almost anyone who studies voice wants at one time or another to be an opera star. But now, I find the lieder songs are more to my liking than operatic airs."

Lieder compositions, she further explained, are "short-shorts in song." "They are lyric rather than dramatic," she said, "and they cover almost every subject imaginable. I enjoy singing them more than any other type of composition and I enjoy teaching my pupils to sing them."

This led to a discussion of her work as choral director at Western Maryland College, where she is in charge of a choir of over a hundred students. Her success in presenting an oratorio last year led her to plan another for this spring. So at present she is preparing her pupils for a presentation of "The Messiah," which they will sing at a Washington church in May.

Miss Jones' program will include some of the lieder songs that are her favorites. Her accompanist will be her sister, Miss Elga Sherman Jones, who will also play during the reception.

They are made of everything from the coolest fabrics to light woolen fabrics and embroidered muslin. Practical and smart simultaneously, these robes are suitable for day and evening, depending on the color and material.

Birth Rate Rises In New York City

During the last 18 weeks of 1934 the birth rate in New York City showed a distinct upward reaction. This has given the department of health reason to believe the birth rate for 1935 will show little if any decline in comparison with 1934.

Depression years were responsible for a pronounced drop in the birth rate, according to a bulletin recently issued by the department of health. The present increase in the rate may indicate improving economic conditions, the bulletin states. The twenty-eighth week of 1934 contained the largest number of births in Manhattan.

New Lipstick Is the Answer To Male Critics

Shopper Finds One That Men Can't Grouch About.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THIS YEAR men are using woman's prerogative and changing their minds. For years and years they almost unanimously declared themselves against lipsticks. Some complained because they smeared. Others said they smacked of barbarism. And there were always those who said they didn't like them, but had no reason.

Well, this season things have changed. There's a lipstick that men actually like. They can't help it. It's so soft and natural-looking, so utterly feminine that they couldn't hold out against it if they wanted to.

You'll love the lipstick yourself, for it fits in so well with the "native" keynote which is being strongly accentuated by stylists and beauticians all over the country. It has the tone of a warm mellow brick with a dash of bronze and gold mixed in. As you can imagine the combination gives supremely natural healthy—and Tahitian—look.

In keeping with the lipstick is a rouge with the same delicate color tone, and also a powder that gives you all the glamour of a fresh out-of-door complexion.

Since an artificial, painted look is definitely "taboo," you should be delighted with this new make-up ensemble, which is appropriate for a woman of any age and equally lovely for blondes, brunettes or platinums. It is particularly ravishing with the new light pinks, lovely with dark blue, and perfect for green, gray or any of the off-white shades.

Place for Buying Spree.

If this balmy weather is giving you the spring shopping fever, we know a grand place for you to splurge. And this time it will be a splurge in a small way, so small that your budget won't be strained in the least.

You may begin your spring wardrobe by purchasing a lovely little crash frock for only $1.77! Now maybe you wouldn't think of buying such a low-priced frock.

Or maybe you think you wouldn't but you'll decide differently after you've seen these frocks.

You wouldn't dream they cost so little if the prige tags weren't in plain view. They are beautifully tailored, simple and good-looking.

All of them are two-piece, with a little overblouse and plain skirt. Some of them have Peter Pan collars, others square necks, and there are some with wide lapels. They're trimmed in large saucer buttons in contrasting shades.

Adhesive Tape Welcome.

There's a wholesale welcome accorded the new waterproof adhesive tape. What a boon it is! The woman who cuts her finger and has to bind it can continue her household duties with no bother from a tape which remains the same in or out of water. Children, most frequent users of the tape, can have their baths without having to remove it.

As for men, they can wash their car, dig in the garden and water the seedlings whether they've bandaged fingers or not.

This waterproof tape comes in rolls of two sizes. One sells for 25 cents, the other 35 cents.

Pig-Tuplets a Treat.

If you haven't seen the pig-tuplets you've a treat in store for you! As might be expected, Lester Gaba (clever soap sculptor) has some more new and novel soap ideas for spring and of course the pig-tuplets, five of the cutest little soap piglets you ever saw, are just part and parcel of this whole group of models. They come in a little box outfitted like a baby crib and each piglet wears a ruffled lace cap.

The Scotties, too, are among the favorites. These are chubby little soap dogs colored black, white or gray.

Mr. and Mrs. Easter Bunny are on hand with baby bunnies 1, 2, 3 and 4. They have adorable pink and blue flannel ears and Papa Bunny has little whiskers.

Storage Problem Solved.

Soon there'll be no dodging the issue. Spring will be here in full blast and the time will have come for packing up winter coats and blankets, sweaters and jackets. Alack and alas, for the number of us who have small apartments and at best little closet space. What can we do? Where can we put our things?

The answer comes from a downtown store which is featuring some small utility closets. These are sturdily built—and moth repellant. As they range from 95 cents to $2.95, you can find almost any type you want. After they're packed you may store these safely in basement or attic.

Fragrant Bath Powder.

One of the best known beauty experts scores again with a certain out-of-doors fragrance which has captured in a soft-as-down dusting powder.

When you do your Easter shopping you will want to keep in mind this attractive package of bath powder and a lovely little bottle of perfume with the same scent.

Pudding With Nice Appearance Recommended as Important Asset

The pineapple pudding is destined to be a success, for it combines the important features of an attractive appearance and a melt-in-the-mouth quality. Its feathery lightness makes it an especially wise choice for the Sunday dinner dessert.

Pineapple Is Suggested for Dessert Dish on Sunday.

By Dorothea Duncan.

"THE PROOF of the pudding is the eating" 'tis true. What then if the pudding is so unattractive to the eye that it never reaches the palate? The man or woman who said, "We eat with our eyes, first of all," has given every housewife a bit of truth that is worth her while to remember.

It is hard to say what a pudding should be, because there are soft puddings, firm ones and a cakelike variety. The main thing to remember is just to make it as attractive as possible. If you are dubious about the possibilities that a pudding affords, try the following pineapple pudding for the Sunday dinner. If you work the recipe out with care you will have a dish that pleases the eye and surprises the palate. Here it is:

Pineapple Pudding.

1 cup Hawaiian pineapple juice
1 cup water
Juice of one lemon
½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 eggs, separated
1 cup pineapple, small pieces
Pinch of salt

Mix sugar and cornstarch, place in a double boiler, stir in pineapple juice, lemon and water, and cook until smooth. Pour over the beaten yolks, fold in the well-beaten whites and then the pineapple pieces. Pour into a well-buttered baking dish, set into a slow oven (300 degrees F.) and bake about 20 minutes. Serve with foamy sauce or whipped cream.

Following are suggested week-end menus:

Saturday Dinner Menu.

Asparagus puree
Codfish cakes with tomato sauce
Mashed potatoes Harvard beets
Fresh fruit salad Crisp crackers
Tea Milk (for children)

Sunday Breakfast Menu.

Orange juice
Cold cereal with top milk
Jelly omelet Broiled bacon
Hot biscuits
Coffee Milk (for children)

Sunday Dinner Menu.

Prune juice
Three-corner roast with vegetables (carrots, onions, potatoes)
Buttered fresh lima beans
Pineapple pudding
Coffee Milk (for children)

Sunday Supper Menu.

Tomato rarebit on toast
Salad of mixed greens
Fruit gelatin Cup cakes
Hot cocoa

Try your jelly omelet for Sunday's breakfast this way:

Jelly Omelet.

4 eggs
4 tablespoons hot water
Salt and pepper

Codfish Cakes Among Ideas in Menus for Week-End.

Butter or other fat

Beat the egg whites until stiff. Beat the yolks until thick and lemon colored, beat into them the hot water and add salt and pepper. Cut and fold together the yolks and stiffly beaten whites. Melt enough fat in an omelet pan to grease the bottom and sides of the pan. Turn the egg mixture into the pan and cook over a slow fire until it is puffy and a light brown underneath, then place in the oven until the top is dry. Touch the top of the omelet with the finger and if the egg does not stick to the finger the omelet is done. Do not over cook or it will be tough or shrink.

Loosen the edges of the omelet, cut through the center, slip a spatula or flexible knife under the side next to the handle of the pan, spread with jelly, fold one-half over the other and press slightly to make it stay in place. Slip onto a hot plate and serve at once.

THREE MEN AND DIANA

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

Diana Carmichael's grandmother kept a boarding house down where the town trailed out into empty lots and railway fences and Diana suffered at being poor. But then she met Bruce Palmer, and fell in love with him. Bruce said he was going to live in Paris, and Diana, in the agony of her disappointment, revealed to Bruce that she loved him. He was shocked and sorry that he had hurt her. But nothing mattered to her except that he didn't return her love. Fortunately, sickness proves a counter-irritant to the pain in her heart. Upon her recovery she marries Neal Tressady; they move to Hollywood, where Neal obtains a job in the movies. Diana does not like the life they lead.

PRESENTLY Neal came behind her and kissed her neck, and she felt his face burning hot.

"Neal, what's the matter with you? Feel sick?"

"No. I just——" He rumpled his hair furiously; tossed his dark, handsome head. "No, I feel fine," he said in a gentle, quiet voice, sitting down at the table. "Put 'em here, and I'll dry 'em."

And then, suddenly, frantically, like a man stung with a sharp prick of pain, "Look here, Di, I feel—I've got to walk! I'll—I'm suffocating. I—I'll be all right. You're a darling, and I'm a skunk to leave you the dishes, but I'll be back and we'll go somewhere and swim; I—I can't breathe."

Quickly, jerkily, he was into his clothes; when he was dressed he seemed much calmer and went to the piano, where he sang for half an hour.

Diana Was Hurt.

This was better, and the uneasiness of Diana's heart was somewhat assuaged. She finished with her little kitchen and left it orderly and clean, with the sun beating furiously against the drawn shade and the faucet dripping one crystal drop, and stopping again, and dripping again in the Sunday peace.

"I believe I'll walk!"

"Wait for me. I'm almost ready."

"No, I'd rather go alone!' he said ungraciously. He went out leaving Diana to feel snubbed and hurt. Why need he be so rude? She went out presently in a new blue dress of all frail ruffles and sat on the top of the three shady brick steps that mounted to the porch. Theirs was the end house of the little court; there had been late breakfasts in all six of the little houses, and now almost all her neighbors were leaving for Sunday outings.

Star Called Him.

The telephone rang; Miss Deirdre Dean to speak to Mr. Tressady. Mr. Tressady was out just now. Would he call Miss Dean as soon as possible Surely. Thank you. Good-by.

Only a few minutes later Neal came back. Diana hated to give him the message; hated herself for fearing its effect on him. It was worse than her fears. Instantly, at Deirdre's name, he brightened; the color rushed to his face, ebbed away. He attempted a yawn.

"Oh, yes, she said she'd call."

"She may want you in the new picture."

"She isn't going to make another until July."

"Maybe something has come up?"

But Diana knew that it was not their work they would discuss today.

Neal went to the telephone; Diana, ostentatiously busy with the bookshelf, could hear monosyllables from him. But by some unusual clearness of the telephone connection she heard more than one phrase from Deirdre.

Neal Was Clumsy.

"Listen, Beautiful, you're a fool—well, you're a fool, Nealy—well, that doesn't make any difference, you were a fool to take it that way——"

And then in an undertone, "Listen, is anyone around?"

Diana could have laughed at Neal's clumsy attempt to answer carelessly, in a businesslike way.

"Why, yes, I could do that . . . Why, no . . . Well, yes . . . yes . . . yes . . . I can't exactly . . . Yes."

He hung up the receiver; his face bright.

"I have to go out and see a man," he said confusedly, thickly.

"At the studio?"

"Well, no. Yes, at the studio. At least—it's about a new picture; she's all steamed up about it. She—it was decent of her—she said she knew I was keen to get going again. I'll run out and see him and be back; you don't mind? I'll leave you the car——"

A Guilty Conscience.

She had come to realize that whenever he offered her some little courtesy it meant that his conscience was not quite at ease. She said:

"You take the car, I shan't need it."

"No, I'll leave you the car!"

"I really won't need it, Neal. I'll walk over to the library."

"You keep it and go out to the club and swim. And I'll be there as soon as I can—wait a minute, Wilcox may want me to have dinner with him; damn it, you never can tell! You go swim at the club, and if I'm not there by six—or I'll telephone you——"

He was all excitement, he was completely obvious of any possible impression he was making on her.

"Here," he said, abstractedly, "have some money—here's $20. My keys, my hanky—goodby darling! This is what it means to marry a movie star!"

She caught at him; her face reddened.

"Look here, Neal! Why shouldn't I go with you? You can have your talk with Wilcox and Deirdre, and then we'll go somewhere."

A New Enthusiasm.

"Oh, Lord, no! Good heavens, no!"

Pride paralyzed her; her hands dropped.

"Oh, very well," she said coldly, thickly. He kissed her again, carelessly, his eyes on his wrist watch, and was gone.

That night she was reading in bed when he came in, quite sober, not very late, and fired with a new enthusiasm.

"I've got to be in San Francisco Thursday, Di; so we're packing tomorrow, and w'ell move out Wednesday. Too sudden for you?"

It was sudden enough, at least, to drive from her mind all the argument, the protest, the reproach she had been saving for him.

Home at Last.

Three days later they drove down shabby Lincoln street into shabbier Mason avenue, and there was the collapsing old house, with its millwork trimmings and peeled and battered paint, and there was Gram with one lean hand crooked against her face to shade her eyes from the sun, and there was Mrs. Tressady all flutter and delight, ready to run into Neal's arms. Neal could not stay; he was going to the city for a few days.

When he had gone, she was tired, excited, but she could not wait to go see Margaret and Sheila Patricia.

Later, wandering home, she met Margaret's brother, Robert Hyde. He was a nice, big handsome boy of 22, who worked in a local automobile shop.

News of Neal.

"Say, I thought you'd come home, Diana! I was coming up from Hollister this afternoon, and I saw Neal going lickety-split through Morgan Hill."

"This afternoon? This morning. We came through about 10."

"Nope, this afteroon after 4. I knew it was Neal, who fixed that car last year. He was going hell-bent for election, and he ought to look out, too. Gilroy's a regular speed trap."

"He couldn't have been going back this afternoon—," Diana said aloud, puzzled. But she was not talking to Bob. Neal was in San Francisco, of cours; it was funny—but she didn't know exactly where.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

What Today Means

"Aries."

IF MARCH 22 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a. m. until noon, from 2 to 4 p. m. and from 7 to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 8 to 10 a. m., from 4 to 6 p. m. and from 9 to 11 p. m.

You may, at a social gathering, become annoyed at someone's display of a decided preference for someone else, or something, but if you will tactfully ignore it, there is a strong possibility you will be the actual winner in the long run.

If a woman, and March 22 is your birthday, you probably believe that brevity is not only the "soul of wit" but also of conversation and letter writing, and putting into practice your conviction on this subject may prove most helpful in a future career. If you will allow your high ideals to always motivate your actions, happiness will come to you in great abundance. Any form of investigating work, or work of a research nature should fascinate you. Laboratory, or historical research work, acting as librarian, secretarial, or social welfare employment, should provide congenial means of earning a lucrative livelihood. Married or single, you are the type that should have no trouble in finding a great deal of happiness.

If a man, and March 22 is your natal day, you possibly love things with a scientific background. You possess, very likely, a mathematical talent, which will prove to be a great asset, if commercialized. As a public accountant, cashier, teacher, inventor, engineer, sculptor, or artist you should do well both in the way of making money as well as reputation. As a husband and father you will probably get your greatest amount of joy.

Study Reveals Status of 180 1933 Chorines

WHAT becomes of chorus girls?

This perennial question has been the subject of a recent investigation of the fate that befell the 180 chorines who appeared in the "Gold Diggers of 1933" production. The New York Times reports the following results of the survey:

Forty-one of the chorines are in the "Gold Diggers of 1935."

Thirty-one are married, and of these, 12 have babies.

Twenty-four are in pictures.

Nine have been promoted to the contract list in films.

Sixteen have gone "back home."

One is a missionary in Mexico.

Two have become school teachers.

Three are entertaining in night clubs.

Four are listed as missing persons.

Twenty have become dress extras in motion picture studios.

Two have attained positions of standing, one is in Arizona recuperating her health and the others are unaccounted for.

Hems Give Billowy Effect.

Paris (AP).—Horsehair hems are something to talk about in spring fashions. They are bands of horsehair about 3 inches wide sewed inside the hems of full-skirted evening gowns to give a swirling billowing effect as the wearer walks.

THE INSIDE STORY OF HEINZ BAKED BEANS

FOR LENT
Heinz oven-baked Beans, vegetarian style, are the same fine beans baked the same old-time way. But they contain no meat; just rich tomato sauce. So they are a splendid dish for Lenten menus.

How Heinz endows the humblest of vegetables with the savory aroma, toothsome texture and delightful flavor that make baked beans America's national dish.

We went back to the golden age of bean-baking, back to Pilgrim kitchens where many long hours were devoted to preparing the important Saturday night feast. Bean-baking then was a rite. Care and labor in heaping measure went into each glorious pot of beans.

Back to the Heinz kitchens we brought the old-fashioned recipe. And every tin of beans we offer you is prepared this way: We sort the beans by hand. We wash them gleaming clean. We soak them many hours in cold water. Then we bake them thoroughly in dry oven heat. For Boston-style beans we make a sweet molasses sauce and add squares of finest pork. (We urge you to try these. They are the authentic old-time dish that delighted our New England forefathers.)

That is the inside story. Of course, Heinz-wise, we buy the finest beans, the "choice hand-picked". But it is the magic old recipe by which we bake them that makes Heinz beans such sheer delight to eat.

Portrait of a Salad Getting its Desserts

Add Heinz pure vinegar to your crisp fresh greens and your salad will taste its very best. For this vinegar is so made that it actually awakens and emphasizes the natural good flavor of each fruit and vegetable. It is rich and mellow because it is aged in wood. Heinz makes it of finest ingredients, and then stores it away in wooden casks to age, like fine wine. A year or two later, when the flavor is right for your salad, the vinegar is bottled and brought to your grocer . . . You owe it to your salad to use Heinz vinegar. Four kinds: Malt, Tarragon, White Pickling and Cider Vinegar. Also, use Heinz Olive Oil, made from superb Spanish olives at the Heinz factory in Seville, Spain.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

AN advertising manager speaks his mind on the subject of national amateur night. "I agree with you that it is rather awful that some 10,000 young hopefuls will try for honor in our theater tie-ups and that only a few will make the grade. It's awful, too, that there are so few of anything good in this world—and if I may speak right up, that goes for professional entertainers as well."

Then he goes on to say, contrary to a superficial conclusion, that the amateurs are not endangering the jobs of professionals. He lists the professionals maintained on the program — Ray Perkins, Arnold Johnson and his orchestra, Harry von Zell and any number of gag men. "In addition to that, we have brought to network radio one of the most popular radio ideals of the day. . . .

"As a matter of fact, the whole controversy between amateurs and professionals must eventually rest on just plain ability. If the professionals are better entertainers than the amateurs they have nothing to worry about, and if they are not, it is high time they gave somebody else a chance for the good of the whole radio industry."

Good points, all of these. Yet, suppose two singers were up for radio audition, each with equally good voices, each with an equal amount of talent. One, say, is an amateur, with a natural vocal organ; the other is a professional, whose singing is the result of hard work. Which would be chosen? Somehow, with all the ballyhoo about "new talent" one is inclined to believe that the "amateur" would win out—by merit of sheer luck.

Or are we wrong?

PRODUCER and critic clash at the mike today when Robert Garland, dramatic critic of the New York World-Telegram, and Vinton Freedley, producer of such hits as "Funny Face," "Girl Crazy," and "Strike Up the Band," argue the merits of their beliefs on the American theater. They are to be interviewed by Francis Healey on WMAL, 8:15 p. m.

Mrs. Roosevelt puts on a sample press conference tonight, WJSV, 8 o'clock. Together with five "press ladies" she will familiarize listeners with the manner in which her conferences are conducted in the White House.

Hollywood Hotel features a scene from "Sarah and Son," starring Ruth Chatterton. WJSV, 9:30 p. m.

Other best bets:

March of Time dramatizes Germany's moves for military conscription; the passing of "De Lawd;" action taken to make the Dionnes wards of the King, and the Broadway debut of "Panic." WJSV, 9 p. m.

Bea Lillie "visits" a theatrical performances as a member of the audience. WMAL, 9 p. m.

Music Appreciation Hour, WMAL, 11 a. m., deals with the human voice in music and the "song" form of musical composition.

WJSV has its fancy station breaks—and the acclaim of the public. One fan wrote in suggesting that a characteristic break be used in each quarter hour, therefore, the writer believes, the listener would immdiatly know the time of day by association with the break. For instance, each hour you'd hear "Alexandria, Va., under the shadow of the Nation's Capitol," and at the first quarter hour, "WJSV on the beautiful Memorial Highway between Washington and Mount Vernon" and so on.

Another fan wrote highly in praise concluding with "by all means continue the coruscations." Nobody at the studio knew what coruscations were, so they looked it up and it means "shower of sparks or fire." The studio is still puzzled.

Minneapolis Symphony program. Ramona Gerhard, pianist, and Paul Le May, conductor. "The Rio Grande" tone poem by Lambert; Brahms' "Variations on a Theme by Handel," "Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 4, and Dohnanyi's suite in F sharp minor. On WJSV, 3:15 p. m.

At the last minute comes a detailed account of Arthur Godfrey's amateur show. Things are getting a little rushed, so this column will take it up in detail first thing tomorrow.

Watch for it!

Charles B. Knupp.

Tax on Sales Strikes Snag In Maryland

Compromise Based on Utility Levy, Other Impost Looms.

A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., March 21.—Passing of another legislative day found the Maryland General Assembly apparently divided against itself on the issue of providing for unemployment relief to meet Federal requirements and perhaps as far removed from solving the problem as it was several weeks ago.

Although it had been expected the legislators would get together on a 2-cent sales tax proposal to lead them out of the difficulty, plans went awry and tonight the respective chambers were floundering, more or less, with prospects of a compromise on a utility tax, combined with special imposts on other commodities, to consummate the program.

The Senate apparently is lined up against a sales tax, while the House tonight passed the proposal. The Senate, after protracted debate on a favorable finance committee report, voted 19 to 9 to recommit the sales tax measure. The move came as something of a surprise in certain quarters.

The House, after adopting a favorable report from the ways and means committee at a session that extended well past midnight, passed the bill on third reading late today by a vote of 72 to 42.

Sasscer Leads Opposition.

Lansdale G. Sasscer, Prince Georges County, president of the Senate, and co-author with Senator Stedman Prescott, Montgomery County, of the utility tax proposal, took a prominent part in today's debate. He moved recommittal of the bill, declaring Gov. Nice had exercised "every means at his command to force senators to vote for it." He also referred to a recent speech in which the Governor asserted the sales tax "would drive business from Maryland to other States." He added that such a tax would "crucify and paralyze citizens adjacent to the District of Columbia."

Senator J. Allan Coad, St. Marys County, majority floor leader, said the vote for recommittal was a strong indication of the ultimate fate of the measure in the Senate.

In the meantime three new tax proposals were presented in the Senate, and these, it was claimed by opponents of the sales tax, coupled with other revenue measures now pending, would furnish a composite plan to solve the relief problem.

The new proposals provide the following tax imposts:

Five cents on each proof gallon of whisky or other distilled spirits rectified or blended in the State.

The utilities tax bill in its present form provides for a flat levy of 5 per cent on gross electricity, gas, telephone and telegraph charges, and 1 per cent on power used for industrial purposes, the tax to be paid by consumers.

Bill on Auto Rules.

Among new bills presented in the Senate was the uniform automobile act, a rewrite of existing law to correspond with the statute of 17 other States. Introduced by Senator George Hofferbert, Baltimore, it is one of the most voluminous documents ever offered in the State Assembly, containing more than 300 typewritten pages. It was drawn as the result of an investigation by a commission appointed by Gov. Nice, with John E. Raine as chairman. No changes in State fees are proposed, the only change affecting revenue being that requiring every holder of an operator's license of five years or more, to re-register after May 31, 1936, and pay a fee of $1. It is estimated this will bring an increase of $250,000 for the year. Renewals will be required every ten years thereafter.

Holders of light wine and beer licenses would be permitted to sell light wines containing 21 per cent of alcohol by volume, under a bill by Senator Milton L. Veasey, Worcester County. Existing law limits alcoholic content of wine to 14 per cent.

A bill by Senator Higgins authorizes the county commissioners of Dorchester County to issue $75,000 bonds for improvement to the schools at East New Market, Cambridge Academy and Galestown Elementary School. It also sets up a commission to supervise the improvements in each instance.

Bay Survey Proposed.

Provision for survey of the Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries, with special relation to propagation of fish, with the Federal Government cooperating with State officials, it is contained in two joint resolutions by Senator Brice, Kent County. One measure requests the State board of public works to transfer to the conservation commissioner $5,000 for 1935-36, to enable that department to make a survey pertaining to spawning grounds and habitations of fish, together with other experiments. The second resolution calls on Congress to appropriate funds to the United States Bureau of Fisheries for its part in the project.

A number of other bills, embracing local legislation for several counties, also was filed in the Senate.

Among the more important new proposals in the House was a bill by Delegate Griesacker, Baltimore City, requiring tax collectors offering property for sale for unpaid taxes to give notification to all record holders of mortgages, venders' liens and notes secured by deeds of trust against the property. Collectors also would be required to search title records as far back as ten years, and give at least 60 days' notice before the expiration of the time limit to redeem properties.

Operators of taxicabs in cities of 25,000 or more population would be required to obtain permits from the Public Service Commission under terms of a bill by Delegate Miller, Washington County. Under present law, the limitation is for cities of 50,000 or more residents.

Delegate A. Lamar Barrick, Frederick County, sponsored a bill for a constitutional amendment to provide for the election of another associate judge of the Sixth Judicial Circuit, comprising Frederick and Montgomery counties. The circuit now has a chief justice and two associates. The bill provides that the county wherein the chief judge resides would be entitled to only one associate. It also provides a referendum to the voters at the general election in 1936.

Frederick Levy.

A bill by Delegate Ramsbury empowers the mayor and council of Frederick to levy $3,000 annually for economic, civic and social welfare of its citizens, the fund to be turned over to the chamber of commerce and, in turn, distributed among various civic organizations.

Delegate Dennis, Worcester County, offered a bill to regulate barbering and beauty culture in Ocean City and its environs. The bill would create a board of barbering and beauty culturist examiners, said the bill is aimed to put a stop on "fly-by-night stores."

The sheriff of Calvert County would be allowed a fee of $3 for attendance in each case before police magistrates, under a bill by Delegate Ireland of the county delegation.

A bill to place employes of the State board of welfare whose services are required at penal institutions under the pension law governing such employes was offered in the House by request, by Delegate Baker, Baltimore City.

Another request measure by Delegate Sweeney, Baltimore City, authorizes a pension of $3,000 annually for Mayors of Baltimore after reaching the age of 70. It is stipulated in the bill that mayors, to be entitled to the pension, must have served a full term.

Teacher Allegiance Oath.

Full support of the American Legion was given the bill requiring all teachers in public schools, colleges and universties receiving State support to subscribe to the oath of alleginace to the United States, at a hearing before the House judiciary committee. John McCurdy, State commander of the legion, and Mrs. Reuben Ross Holloway, were chief spokesmen. They urged a favorable report of the measure, which was introduced by Delegate John S. White, Prince Geoges County.

The board of public works advertised for the sale of $5,500,000 bonds, part of the $8,500,00 loan authorized by an act passed by the Assembly a few days ago in order to meet the State deficit, provide working capital and serve other purposes. The bonds will be offered at 3 per cent interest, lowest rate in the history of State securities, and State officials expect to receive a figure well above par. Bids will be opened April 11. The bonds will be dated April 15.

Bounty Put on Snakes For Trouts' Protection

Covington, Va., March 21 (AP).—The Alleghany County board of supervisors has placed a bounty on snakes to provide protection for trout.

An appropriation for this purpose was asked by the Alleghany County Game Protective Association to aid in the eradication of the reptiles in the county, and the board met the request with an appropriation not to exceed $100. The premium per snake head was set at 10 cents.

Work Relief Project To Hire 10 Cowboys

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 21.—The Virginia emergency relief administration today approved a work relief project for the employment of ten "cowboys."

They will not ride forth with lariats or bang away with six-shooters at the Indians, but they will be assigned to the more prosaic task of instructing a herd of young oxen in the ways of Virginia farm life. The 200 oxen in question are what are left of the 20,000 head of cattle shipped into the State last summer from the drought-parched plains of the West.

Four Captured In Bootleg Raid Held for Jury

Warrants Charge Two With Firing On U. S. Agents in Maryland.

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., March 21.—Four men, captured in a raid by Federal officers on a still near Vindex, Garrett County, were held today by United States Commissioner Taylor Morrison under bond for action of the Federal grand jury.

Arthur Riggleman and Harry Riggleman, brothers, who were charged in warrants with firing on Federal officers with deadly weapons, were held in $5,000 bail each.

Their brother, James Riggleman, and Fred Hoston, were remanded to jail in default of $1,500 bond each on charges of violating the Federal liquor laws.

The quartet was captured by four unarmed investigators of the alcoholic tax unit from Cumberland, after the raiders had dodged a volley of gunfire from the vicinity of the still. The raiding party was led by Chief Investigator William R. Harvey.

Harvey said the officers seized a quantity of mash, a roadster automobile, a 12-guage pump gun, a high-power Swiss army rifle, and a revolver. He asserted the guns were used by the prisoners in battling off the raiders.

Harry Riggleman, who had a gash on his head, claimed he was struck by a club by one of the Federal officers, but the latter said the man received his injury in a fall. Riggleman was listed by the Federal officers as a former offender.

Martinsburg Girl Queen of Campus

Janet Schroder Winner of Shepherd Honor.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., March 21. Miss Janet Schroder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Schroder, of Martinsburg, was selected the most attractive girl on the Shepherd College campus by the student body, in a celebrity contest held here today.

Miss Schroder, a brunette, senior, has held this honor for two years, winning the first contest in 1933.

The selection was made through a contest sponsored by the Alpha Psi Omegs, dramatic fraternity.

It has been the custom for three years that the winner of this contest represent the school at the Apple Blossom Festival at Winchester.

Others winning honors were: Most popular man, Roscoe Warner, of Hershey, Pa.; best citizen man, Kenneth Waldeck, of Shepherdstown, W. Va., best citizen woman, Anna Kershner, of Martinsburg, W. Va.

Virginia D.A.R. Ballot Marked By Two Upsets

Mrs. Rowbotham Defeats Favorite for Regent by Three Votes.

By the Associated Press.

Bristol, Va., March 21.—The thirty-ninth annual conference of the Virginia Daughters of the American Revolution adjourned tonight after electing officers for three-year terms and awarding the 1936 conference to the five Richmond chapters.

The elections resulted in surprising defeats for two candidates who were without opposition until the conference opened Tuesday.

Mrs. Arthur Rowbotham, of Alta Vista, defeated Mrs. Hampton Fleming, of Richmond, the favored candidate, by three votes for the regency, and Mrs. Laird Conrad, of Harrisonburg, defeated Mrs. Frank Goodpasture, the preconference favorite, for recording secretary.

Other officers named were Miss Claudine Hutter, Lynchburg, vice regent; Mrs. Anthony V. Shea, Richmond, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. Walter Wright, Bristol, who defeated Mrs. J. L. Bugg, Farmville, for registrar; Mrs. Floyd Bell, Suffolk, librarian; Mrs. Mary A. Hunt, Newport News, historian; Mrs. George C. Stone, Danville, treasurer; Mrs. C. A. Sinclair, Alexandria, chaplain, over the candidacy of Mrs. F. B. Kegley, Wytheville.

The conference this afternoon adopted a resolution regretting the recent death of Dr. L. G. Tyler.

An impressive memorial service was conducted by the Rev. Donald McIver and Mrs. Lawson Worrell, and later the delegates attended a tea and reception given by several patriotic societies at the residence of Mrs. J. A. Stone.

Members of the Bristol Kiwanis, Rotary, Lions and Civitian clubs took the visitors on a motorcade to Kingsport late today and the final business session was held tonight with William H. Rouse, of Bristol, as the principal speaker.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., March 21.—The Harrisonburg Chamber of Commerce is considering expanding to include Rockingham County in its endeavors to publicize the Shenandoah Valley.

The quarterly meeting of the membership will pass on the action of the board of directors in making the organization the Harrisonburg-Rockingham Chamber of Commerce. Both the city and county have allied interest in tourist, business and civic matters.

Frederick's Spelling Bee Set Tonight

Pupils of Winchester and County to Vie for Club and Post Prizes.

Winners in Both Groups Go to Area Finals for National Contest.

The best spellers from the schools of Winchester and Frederick County will vie for prizes in an old-fashioned spelling bee at 7:30 o'clock tonight in Handley High School, Winchester, under sponsorship of the Lions Club of that city. In addition to prizes offered by the club, The Washington Post will make two awards and offer the pupils winning them the opportunity of taking part in the area finals of the national spelling bee.

Contestants in tonight's match have been determined by a series of spell-downs in each school entered. As a result of the rivalry aroused pupils have acquired considerable proficiency in spelling and the show they will put on is expected to attract many spectators. Proceeds will go to the Lions Club charity fund. A small charge will be made for adults attending, but children of school age will be admitted free.

Several Awards.

School authorities are cooperating with the Lions Club in conducting the match. Pupils from the fifth through the tenth grades will take part. A prize of $2 will be given the winner in each grade, both in the city and in the county. This divisional spell-down will be followed by a "free for all" match, in which $5 will be awarded the best speller who is a resident of Frederick County, including the city of Winchester.

This year, for the first time, The Post is co-sponsoring the National Spelling Bee, in which the best spellers from all parts of the country will compete for $1,750 in cash prizes. In the elimination matches to determine the champion speller of Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, The Post is offering two prizes in each county. These are the "Wonder Book of Knowledge" and Thorndyke's "Junior Century Dictionary." To avoid the necessity of holding two separate matches, The Post contest in Frederick County has been combined with the Lions Club bee.

To Enter Area Finals.

One of these prizes will be given a pupil from the city of Winchester and the other to a pupil from Frederick County outside the city. And both these champions will go to Washington, May 18, to compete against winners from 31 other counties in the area finals of the National Spelling Bee. This means that the Winchester-Frederick champions will have the opportunity of competing, in that match, for a 12-volume set of the Encyclopedia Britannica Junior, and a four-volume set of Champlin's "Young Folks' Cyclopaedia." They also will vie for the honor of representing the territory in the national bee.

The arrangements have been made through cooperation of Hoye Riley, of the Lions Club; G. C. Quarles, city superintendent of schools, and L. D. Kline, county superintendent of schools.

Mr. Kline, Mr. Quarles and W. W. Glass will be announcers at tonight's match. On the county committee are Miss Ada Woore, Miss Virginia Hawn, Mrs. G. W. Ropp, Miss Mariam Sizer and Miss Dora Waldeck. The Winchester committee consists of Howard Shockey, chairman; Grover Henshall and Clarence Schenck, of the Lions activities committee.

Youths Admit Robbery Guilt; Get 20 Years

Delaware Pair, 19 and 17, Respectively, Sentenced in Virginia.

By the Associated Press.

Eastville, Va., March 21.—Two youths who left the Ferris Industrial School at Marshallton, Del., and were captured near here Monday 30 minutes after they had robbed a filling station, were sentenced to 20 years in the penitentiary today by Judge John E. Nottingham.

The youths are Charles Fifield, 19, and Edward Willing, 17. Both pleaded guilty to the charge of highway robbery with weapons.

They also confessed that the six pistols, 500 rounds of ammunition and two daggers, found in the stolen car they were driving when arrested, were stolen from a Salisbury (Md.) hardware store. They previously had maintained they had bought the arsenal from a peddler.

Delaware probation officers testified the boys had been hard to handle.

After sentence had been pronounced, Willing broke down. His mother had unexpectedly appeared in court in his behalf. Fifield asked permission to write his life story as a warning to others.

The two youths left the school Sunday in the car of an official, which they later abandoned and stole another. After robbing the operator of a filling station they exchanged shots with Sheriff George Turner and his son in a 5-mile running battle, which ended with their capture when a tire on their car was punctured by a bullet.

Judge Nottingham, in passing sentence, expressed regret that boys so young should have to pay such a penalty, but said society must be protected against those who placed too little value on the lives of others.

W. R. THACHER, of the faculty of Shepherd State Teachers College, seriously hurt in the collision.

Mrs. Bucklew Offers $19,500 for Hospital

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., March 21. Mrs. Dora Bucklew has offered the Allegany County Commissioners $19,500 for the vacant Western Maryland Hospital property. Check for $500 was tendered as an option.

The offer was taken unde consideration by the Commissioners. Mrs. Bucklew indicated that if she could purchase the property she would repair and remodel it and convert it into apartments. The old hospital building has been vacant since the construction and opening of Memorial Hospital five years ago.

Woman Dies, Auto Crash Injures Two

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 21.—A head-on crash of two automobiles on a curve 6 miles east of here on the State highway to Charles Town late last night brought death to Mrs. Mary Gray Thacher, 42, and serious injury to her husband, W. R. Thacher, member of the faculty of Shepherd State Teachers College at Shepherdstown, and George I. Nicewarner, 19, of near this city. Thacher and Nicewarner were drivers of the two cars.

Mrs. Thacher died early this morning without regaining consciousness. Her husband has a fractured skull, and Nicewarner a broken jaw and probable skull fracture. An acting coroner held an inquest unnecessary after a police inquiry.

The Thachers were en route to their Shepherdstown home after spending the evening here, during which Mrs. Thacher conducted a weekly educational class for teachers. A resident near the scene of the tragedy, who extricated the victims and sent them to the hospital here, said he heard Thacher scrape his brakes and sound his horn in an effort to avoid the crash. Both cars were demolished.

Mrs. Thacher was Miss Knapp before marriage, a native of Lewisburg, W. Va. She studied at Greenbrier Woman's College at Lewisburg, and Fairmont (W. Va.) State Teachers College, and was an associate professor at West Virginia University for three years. She is survived by two sons, Billy, jr., and Bobby, at home; one sister, Mrs. Clarence Harriss, of Morgantown, W. Va., and two brothers, Forest Knapp, of Chicago, and Oliver Knapp, Morgantown. The latter is assistant head of the State agricultural department.

Three in Critical Condition.

Harrisonburg, Va., March 21 (AP).—Three young people remained in a critical condition from fractured skulls today as the result of an automobile accident that claimed one life late last night.

Miss Rosella Saum, 19, of Woodstock, is the most seriously injured. The others are Miss Naomi Fultz, 19, of Woodstock, and Claude Kennedy, 21, of Harrisonburg.

William Kennedy, 21, of Harrisonburg, died of a broken neck after reaching the hospital.

Howard Smith, 19, driver of the car, escaped with minor hurts. He is being held by police. Smith said he lost control of the car.

Guard Captain to Be Shifted.

W. A. Stein, captain of the guard at Occoquan Wharf, will be transferred to the Occoquan guard as a result of charges made to the Board of Public Welfare by John Costello, one of the guards. Stein was accused of cruelty to animals. Costello will be shifted to the Lorton guard.

An Exotic Young Star of the Screen Breaks Down and Confesses All, at Last

Miss Oberon Is, After All, An Alien by Birth

Weird Appeal Is Inherited; Amusement Notes; A Dancer Arrives;

By Nelson B. Bell.

Having appeared with Charles Laughton in the role of Ann Boleyn in the memorable "Private Life of Henry VIII," with Leslie Howard in "The Scarlet Pimpernel" and to be seen, come Friday, with Maurice Chevalier in "Folies Bergere," it seems only fair to elucidate, as well as may be, the career of Merle Oberon, one of the most exotic of the cinema's contemporary decorations.

We made the veiled assertion here some time ago that Miss Oberon, as a matter of fact, was born Miss O'Brien somewhere in the vicinity of Richmond. We only missed the scene of the event—but not the original maiden name—by about half way around the world, more or less. Probably more. It might even be Antipodean. Look it up, as I had to.

However, it may be best to let Miss Oberon tell her own story. Here it is:

Her Own Story.

Whatever other distinctions I may have, whatever other honors come to me, there is one that is mine—to have and to hold forever. No other actress could have been discovered in so many ways as I was supposed to have been found.

There are four variations on this theme:

1. Merle Oberon is discovered by Alexander Korda while visiting a friend in the studio.

2. Leslie Howard, riding a bus in Piccadilly, retrieves a handkerchief belonging to Merle Oberon and persuades her to become an actress.

3. Lunching in the studio cafeteria Merle Oberon is spied by Mrs. Alexander Korda, who induces her husband to sign her to a seven-year contract.

4. A British officer, attending a society function in Bombay is so impressed with the dancing of Merle Oberon that he cables Korda, who signs her, sight unseen.

Since my appearance in "The Private Life of Henry VIII," in the small and tragic role of Ann Boleyn, my name has seemed to be enmeshed in a labyrinth of fantastic fictions. The facts are perhaps less glamorous than the fictions, but they have the virtue of being more satisfying to me.

Here Is That Birth.

I was born Estelle Merle O'Brien Thompson in Hobart, on the island of Tasmania, February 19, 1911. My father, who died before I was born, was an English army officer; my mother is English and French-Dutch.

In Calcutta, where I later lived with my mother and an uncle, I was educated along the austere lines deemed necessary in army families. At 16, after graduation from La Martinere College, I was introduced into the "Cats," otherwise the Calcutta Amateur Theatrical Society, in whose fashionable stage rites I became a participant.

At 17 I toured Europe with my uncle. And then the thought of returning to India to resume my duties as a society debutante began to appear less and less attractive. Finally I persuaded my uncle to allow me to go to England. He compromised by buying a return ticket to Calcutta for me and giving me $100 in cash. "When your money is gone," he warned, "we'll expect you back in India."

On my arrival in London I made straight for the nearest picture studio in response to an advertised audition for extras. I was carefully inspected—and turned away. At the same time a man approached me with an offer to dance at the Cafe de Paris. When, with all the hauteur I could muster, I refused, he said: "I do hope you will do me the honor of coming to tea next Thursday. I would like to have you meet some of the girls. Perhaps you'll change your mind."

Played "Bits" Two Years.

By the following Thursday most of my indignation had disappeared—along with my money which I had recklessly invested in clothes. I did attend the tea solely because I was hungry—and for the same reason accepted the proffered position as a dancer. After three months of cabaret work I again applied for a job in pictures—this time successfully.

For two years I worked in films and played bits. One day, while lunching in a studio cafeteria, Mrs. Alexander Korda, I am told, caught sight of me and pointed me out to the producer. The result was a test, a contract and a role opposite Roland Young in "Wedding Rehearsal." I made three pictures following this, and then came the small part in "Henry VIII."

While I was working in "The Scarlet Pimpernel," Darryl F. Zanuck, producer of Twentieth Century Pictures, arranged for my appearance in his Hollywood production, "Folies Bergere." The day the cameras stopped grinding on "The Scarlet Pimpernel" I packed my bags and stepped aboard ship for America.

And that—versions one, two, three, four to the contrary—is the unadorned outline of my career.

Not So Romantic.

If people choose to think that my presence in the movies is a romantic affair, fraught with drama and last-minute rescues, let them think so! It's their privilege, and I shan't attempt to deprive them of it.

Even my personal romances have not been entirely free of conjecture. At various times I have been paired off with various individuals in the cause of love. A banker, an international star, a producer, a member of the British nobility—each has had his turn in the public mind.

I have to dismiss them without getting too greatly concerned.

It takes time for one person like myself to disprove things that are made up by a world full of people. All I can say is that there is no one on the scene and let it go at that. I don't take the rumor seriously. I am merely flattered.

So now you know.

When "Love in Bloom" begins a week's engagement at the Metropolitan Theater tomorrow, the first 500 women who present themselves at the boxoffice each will receive a rose through the courtesy of the C. and C. Flower Stores, whatever and wherever they may be. . . . Joe Morrison, whose likeness appears on this page; Burns and Allen and Dixie Lee, who, in private life is Mrs. Bing Crosby, are the stars of the cast. That ought to make it worth while, even without any gratuitous blossoms. Or am I wrong?

A New Dancer.

A new dancer has come to town.

Yesterday when a certain plane settled gently on Hoover Airport—this obviously was not one piloted by Roscoe Ates, the student prince of fliers headlining the vaudeville bill at the Earle—there alighted a lovely young women by the name of Chela de Castro, whose artistry as an exponent of the folk dances of her native Cuba will be publicly revealed to the National Capital at the Club Habana on Wednesday, March 27.

This afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock—about the same hours that will mark an ambassadorial greeting to Eva Le Gallienne, appearing at the National Theater in a splendid modernization of Rostand's "L'Aiglon"—Senorita de Castro will be the guest of honor at a cocktail party in the Mayflower Hotel, sponsored by the Cuban dignitaries resident in Washington.

Senorita de Castro boasts, or might, were she given to boasting, a considerable native background for her artistry. Her dances for the most part are executed to melodies written especially for her by Gilberto S. Valdes, whose name, it seems to me, from my fragmentary recollection of the Spanish tongue, should be Valdez. That, however, as goes without saying, is his business. Al Jolson thinks well enough of the Valdes compositions to make them the basis of everything he undertakes in the way of interpretation of the Cuban temperament and point of view in song.

Partner a Past Master.

When Senorita Castro makes her local debut she will have as dancing partner, Rene Doray, whose name is a strange blending of French and Spanish. Senor, or Monsieur, Doray is a native of Los Angeles whose dancing career has encompassed a bit of picking them up and putting them down in "No, No, Nannette," a long term with Radio-Keith-Orpheum and the conduct of the most successful academy of dancing on the West Coast. He looks precisely as Valentino looked when Valentino was Valentino—and deems it no more an asset than handicap.

During odd moments of relaxation in Cuba, Buster Keaton, Carole Lombard and other screen luminaries have availed themselves of the tutelage of both Senorita de Castro and her partner Doray. Doray, incidentally, began his dancing at the age of 14. He has been at it ever since. Doray is at the present moment so many years old as you might say. You guess how many. I wouldn't know.

At any rate, here is a new dancer. She promises something of novelty in her interpretation of the languorous mood of her tropical country. Having adventured briefly in that country off and on in an earlier incarnation, I am curious. How is by you?

Tomorrow this column will have something of interest to disclose concerning the next project of the Children's Theater of New York, scheduled for Saturday, April 20, the day before Easter. It will be something relating to the opportunity for everyone to be a "Boy Scout" for a day. Watch this space. And order your copy early!

Meteorological Note.

This should be the first day of spring.

But what I want to know, is it?

Songsters Who Warble Tomorrow

Students Offered Posts in Marines

Georgetown Is On List of Colleges Affected.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, March 21.—Honor graduates of four colleges in the Third Corps Area will be given the opportunity to qualify for Marine Corps commissions this year.

The institutions are the University of Maryland, Pennsylvania Military College, Virginia Military Institute and Georgetown University. These colleges maintain senior units of the Reserve Officers Training Corps. Recommendations of their president and professors of military science and tactics will be accepted, and the graduates will only need to pass physical examinations.

Approximately 56 probationary commissions are to be awarded. Forty-three institutions throughout the country have been designated for selection of candidates. Third Corps Area officers said this is the first opportunity they can recall of R. O. T. C. graduates being able to qualify for Marine Corps commissions with no examination except the physical.

Churches Named In Will of Rich

Other Institutions Share Maryland Estate.

By the Associated Press.

Centerville, Md., March 21.—Bequests, totaling more than $10,000, to churches, library and homes were made in the will of Charles F. Rich, of Centerville, who died March 10.

The largest bequest was one of $6,000 to the trustees of the Centerville Methodist Episcopal Church, which also will receive, after the other bequests are made, any residue of his estate. A fund of $1,000 was given to the Greensboro Methodist Episcopal Church in memory of his mother, Mary F. Rich. Personal bequests were made to relatives and friends. The Centerville Public Library received $100.

Bequests of $500 each were made to the trustees of the Home for Aged Women at Easton, the Home of Friendless Children at Easton, the Wye Mills Methodist Episcopal Church, Carmichael Methodist Protestant Church, Ashland M. P. Church, Ruthsburg M. P. Church and Grace M. P. Church in Centerville.

Stage and Film Programs Offer Fine New Week

Noted Attractions Come to Enliven Spring Period of Pastiming.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

At the National Theater next week, beginning Monday night, the attraction will be one of the most notable light musical revues of the season—"Life Begins at 8:40," the production that has practically run out the season at the Winter Garden on Broadway. This tuneful diversion takes to the road with its entire cast and choral ensemble intact, something unique in the annals of the modern playhouse. The foremost members of the company are Bert Lahr, Luella Gear, Ray Bolger and Frances Williams. They will be seen here in their original roles. The customary matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday.

• • • •

"Ruggles of Red Gap," the Paramount picturization of the story of the same name by Harry Leon Wilson, will be the chief screen feature of the week beginning tomorrow at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater. The title role is played by Charles Laughton, who achieves something of a personal triumph in the same part, and in his support are such luminaries as Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland, ZaSu Pitts, Leila Hyams, Lucien Littlefield, Maude Eburne and numerous others of similar renown. This, as any preview audience will testify, is one of the outstanding comedies of the season. The vaudeville portion of the bill will be headlined by the Eton Boys.

• • • •

"Folies Bergere," one of the most pretentious musical productions of the year, is announced as the chief screen feature at Loew's Fox Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. Maurice Chevalier, in a dual role, is the duplex, so to speak, star, with Merle Oberon, Ann Sothern and various others of comparable note in associate roles. In certain of his sequences Chevalier will not be recognized even to his most ardent admirers. On the stage, the Fox will present that eminent comedian, Herb Williams, as its headline personality. And a headline personality he is! The bill will be completed by the Fox Movietone News and orchestral contributions under the baton of Phil Lampkin.

• • • •

"Love in Bloom" is the title of the foremost screen attraction to be presented for the week beginning tomorrow at the Metropolitan Theater. Joe Morrison and Dixie Lee, who is by way of being Mrs. Bing Crosby, are the co-stars of the film. The bill will be augmented by a varied assortment of abbreviated camera subjects and a full, 15-minute news reel, combining the current events caught by the cameras of more than one reportorial agency.

• • • •

Will Rogers will be the pictured star of the new week, beginning tomorrow, at Loew's Palace Theater in "Life Begins at 40," a film version of the stage success, the title of which is slightly parodied by the musical attraction coming into the National. In the star's support will be seen Rochelle Hudson and a considerable list of others who in the past have lent distinction to the Rogers vehicles. The bill will be augmented by the usual short-reel subjects and a new issue of the Metrotone News, reflecting the important world events of the preceding week.

• • • •

"Man of Aran," Robert Flaherty's production for Gaumont-British, will be the chief feature of the film bill offered at the Belasco Theater for the week beginning today. The principal roles in this highly lauded picture are portrayed by Colman (Tiger) King, Maggie Dirrane and Michael Dillane, names that mean little to American audiences. It is said, however, that after the first showing of the picture their identities will become firmly fixed in the minds of picture-goers. The chief auxiliary attraction for the new week will be "Dawn to Dawn," starring Julie Hayden. Newsreel and added short subjects will complete the program.

• • • •

As has already been made known in these columns, RKO-Keith's Theater will continue the screen version of Jerome Kern's popular musical comedy, "Roberta," through a third week on Fifteenth street, beginning tomorrow. Irene Dunne, Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers and their numerous and accomplished supporting players have conspired to make this one of the most engaging releases of the season. The Kern melodies, the Astaire dances and the general, all-round effectiveness of this film make it one of the cinema's aces. It is briefly and judiciously augmented by a newsreel and cartoon comedy in colors.

• • • •

Igor Stravinski, composer of "Petrushka," "Le Sacre du Printemps," "Les Noces" and other revolutionary works which have made him a storm center of critical debate, will give a joint recital with Samuel Dushkin, American violinist, on Sunday night in the National Theater. The program will be devoted exclusively to Stravinski's compositions.

Among Stravinski's post-war compositions are "Renard," "Les Noces," "Pulcinella," "L'Histoire du Soldat," "Mavra," "Oedipus Rex," "The Symphony of Psalms" and "Persephone." Sunday night's program will include the "Suite Italienne" in six movements, a "Divertimento: Inspired by the Muse of Chaikovski" in four movements, two movements (Aria and Capriccio) from the violin concerto, and four excerpts from the opera, "The Nightingale."

• • • •

Frank X. Silk and "Silk Stocking Revue" will be the major burlesque attraction at Jimmie Lake's Gayety Theater for the week beginning with the usual matinee performance on Sunday. Supporting the star on the comedy side, will be Sam Micals, Jim Bennett, Tom Bundy and Lew Denny. The feminine contingent will be headed by Edna Dee, Rita Zane, Ella Sears and Eva Osborne. A pleasant time is promised for all, as the saying goes.

WATCH KIDNEYS SAME AS BOWELS
Wash Out Your 79,200 Feet of Kidney Tubes

Your bowels contain only 27 feet of intestines, yet the kidneys contain nearly 10 million tiny tubes or filters which would measure 79,200 feet if laid end to end. Therefore, it is just as important to watch the kidneys as the bowels. Kidneys are working all the time and are one of Nature's chief ways of taking the acids and poisonous waste out of the blood.

Healthy persons pass thru the bladder 3 pints a day and get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter. If you pass less than this, your 79,200 feet of kidney tubes may be clogged with poisonous waste. This is a danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

Kidneys should be watched closely and need cleaning out the same as bowels. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, an old prescription, which has been used by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help to wash out your 79,200 feet of kidney tubes. Get Doan's Pills at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

Nats Conquer Cleveland, 7 to 6, on Powell's Wallop in Ninth

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

Biloxi, Miss., March 21.

THE man with the abnormally long arms, the slightly-drooping shoulders that squared themselves at his every move and the handsomely honest face, allowed as how he didn't think much of the Washington Ball Club. Walter Johnson was chaperoning his Cleveland Indians to Biloxi today for the game with the Nats when he emitted his figurative "Humph," and said he didn't reckon Washington would be much of a contender.

JOHNSON.

He said there were a couple of guys in the Nats' outfield who didn't figure to be of much help to the club, and, when pressed, he named no less than Heinie Manush and Fred Schulte. He said he knew all about Manush's batting average, but that Heinie was a distinct liability out there in the outfield with that poor throwing arm. And as for Schulte, well, he said there were a lot better outfielders.

And then there was the club's pitching. You had to consider that, he said. Fellows like Earl Whitehill and Walter Stewart were getting no younger and there isn't another pitcher on the staff who has been tried and really proven. The team would probably hit well, he said, but he spoke like a fellow who knew the extreme value of good pitching and defensive play, and, thus, he based his low appraisal of the Nats.

And it was apparent that Johnson was speaking from the viewpoint of a man who had seen the team perform in 1934. The new forces on the club he apparently refused to take into consideration. The addition of Bump Hadley and Ed Linke to the pitching staff and the availability of the brilliant Jake Powell for outfield duty seemingly escaped Johnson. Either that, or he has his own ideas about the capabilities of the trio.

HIS own team, the former Washington pitching idol said, he liked extremely. There was the little matter of an infield problem and a rather weak catching staff, but he said he didn't mind being placed on the spot by the rising tide of opinion that has designated the Indians as the team most likely to end the pennant reign of the Tigers. He rather liked the effects.

It was vastly better, he said, to be picked as the pennant winner than to be consigned to a second-division berth. The belief that the Indians are fated for the pennant has permeated even the skulls of his ball players, he said, and he was glad that they are thinking in pennant terms. It's a young ball club that finished too low last year to be affected by overconfidence.

Johnson's great faith in his Indians is due directly, of course, to his sensational pitching staff—generally recognized as the best in the league. With such as Oral Hildebrand, Mel Harder, Monte Pearson, Willis Hudlin, Clint Brown and Lloyd Brown, the Indians doubtless are better fortified in pitching than any other club. But, as a former star pitcher, Johnson may be placing too much stress on the importance of pitching alone.

He most certainly has an infield problem. With Bill Knickerbocker taken down by appendicitis and hardly available until June 1, that problem has been aggravated. At present, he is filling in the shortstop berth with Ray Hughes, a farm hand from New Orleans who is called a swell fielder, but whose hitting ability is doubted. His third baseman is Sammy Hale, a native second baseman who must succeed the aging Willie Kamm, and Johnson is gambling, too, on his second base job.

AT second base, Johnson is pinning his faith on the Washington boy, Bozie Berger, who has been setting fielding records with the New Orleans team for two years, but whose hitting ability is distinctly a question mark. Johnson attempted to impress Berger into the Cleveland infield last season, but was forced to abandon the move when the handsome Capital lad displayed a rank inability to hit curve-ball pitching.

With New Orleans last year, however, Berger amassed the respectable batting average of .313, which portends better things for him in his second big league trial. To date, however, he has been no shining light at bat in the training games. But it is fielding prowess that Johnson needs chiefly in his infield and there is none to say that Berger is not the best defensive infielder produced in the Southern Association in the past decade. Johnson was saying today that Berger had to hit only .280 to win a regular job.

Johnson's catching problem is apparent after hearing him say today that his regular catcher probably would be Glenn Myatt, who broke into the big leagues with the Athletics 15 years ago. He has been the Indians' second-string catcher for a half-dozen years, but, despite his age, will succeed to the No. 1 position this season as a result of the failure of little Frank Pytlak to round into physical condition.

This is the team that Johnson says can win the pennant at the same time he utters the conviction that Washington doesn't figure in the fight. Well, your humble servant begs to differ. Man for man, by and large, or any way you figure it, Washington appears to be the better ball club. If it works out that way when the curtain falls next September, do not be surprised. If it does not, why, just forget what I said.

Braddock-Lasky Bout Tonight Must Be Good—Else, No Baer!

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, March 21.—The Nation is anxiously awaiting the outcome of the 15-round prize fight involving Art Lasky, of California, and James J. Braddock, of New Jersey, which is scheduled to take place at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night, as the second of a series of elimination contests started by James J. Johnston, Madison Square Garden matchmaker, to determine what is jokingly known as a worthy challenger for the crown of Champion Max Baer.

These elimination series always cause a general feeling of unrest throughout the country. No one can really settle down to serious work with the question of the challenger for the heavyweight championship left unnamed. The greatest period of prosperity this country ever enjoyed was during the perpetual logical contendership of Harry Wills for the title then held by Jack Dempsey. There was no argument and no uncertainty. You could go up to any one in the street and ask, "Who is the logical contender?" and without a moment's hesitation they would tell you, "Harry Wills."

The late Tex Rickard always had the right idea about heavyweight championship prize fights. He named the challenger sometime in the winter, and then went off to play golf down South. By the time summer came the boys had steamed themselves up to thinking he was right.

This shilly-shallying over something that is reasonably obvious, only contributes, as I say, to the general unrest that is trying to the nerves of everyone. Well, only about 12 hours more to wait, and two more "contenders" will be out of the way.

That is, they will be out of the way unless Mr. Johnston insists upon calling Carnera's match with the winner another elimination. The only possible chance for such a thing to be considered an elimination by persons of intelligence is for one of the contenders tomorrow night to knock out the other and then go on and flatten Carnera.

The records of the two real heavyweights of the boxing world, off their last fights, are impressive, and practically on a par. Both their opponents went to the hospital. Max Baer hit Carnera on the chin so hard that the shock broke his ankle by remote control. Max

Star Fielding Plays Made By Bluege

Tribe Scores 3 Runs to Tie Count Without Getting a Hit.

Sington Tallies From 1st as Rookie Drives Ball Beyond Fielders.

By Shirley L. Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

BILOXI, Miss., March 21.—Biloxi was no place for the faint-hearted today as the Nats and the Cleveland Indians broke all exhibition game traditions and stacked thrill on thrill for the 400 fans in a 7-to-6 battle that was decided by Jake Powell, Washington's rookie outfielder.

It was after the Indians had scored three runs without the aid of a hit to tie the score in the ninth that Washington's rookie talent won the ball game that had figuratively throbbed with sensations.

Big Freddie Sington was on first base after bashing a ball through Shortstop Roy Hughes that was erroneously scored as an error when Powell swaggered to the plate. He fouled Willis Hudlin's first pitch over the grandstand and then slammed a tremendous fly over the heads of the left and center fielders for a three-base hit which he could have stretched into a home run had not Sington already scored with the winning run.

But the ball game that Powell and Sington won in the ninth, Ossie Bluege had saved in the eighth. The veteran who is struggling to retain a regular job in the Nats' infield had supplanted Cecil Travis on third base when he produced a play that was well-nigh miraculous in its execution.

A moment before, he had started a fast double play to wipe two Indians off the sacks while the tying run scored, but with Campbell on second base with the potential winning run, Bluege stole the ball game from the Indians.

Bozie Berger, the Washington boy who is trying to make good at second base for the Indians, slammed one of Jack Russell's pitches on a grass-burning line over third base, but the cat-like Bluege was able to knock the ball down with his bare hand. As the deflected ball rolled toward the outfield in foul territory, Campbell raced for home, but he reckoned without Bluege.

Gets Campbell at Plate.

With the spryness of his salad days, Bluege scampered after the ball and from a pretzel-like position tossed it toward home plate. The ball, the runner and Catcher Sammy Holbrook collided at the plate. Holbrook and Campbell were sprawled all over the infield, but the ball was still in the catcher's mitt and the runner was out.

The victory was doubly pleasing to Manager Bucky Harris, who saw his lads pound out eight hits against three regulars of Cleveland's vaunted pitching staff—Oral Hildebrand, Monte Pearson and Willis Hudlin.

There was joy for Harris, too, in the manner in which Leon Pettit, diminutive left-hander from Chattanooga, performed on the mound for the Nats in his first test under fire. Pitching the first five innings, Pettit permitted the Indians only four hits and handed Jack Russell a 4-to-1 lead when he left the mound.

Stone Hits for Circuit.

Johnny Stone had accounted for two of the Nats' runs in the first inning when he rifled one of Hildebrand's pitches over Averill's head in deep center field for a home run with Fred Schulte on base.

Pettit learned in the fourth inning the difference between major league and minor league support when, with one out and the bases full, Red Kress, Buddy Myer and Joe Kuhel collaborated on a double play on Brenzel's hard-hit grounder.

Russell yielded the Indians five hits in his four-inning shift, but a hit batsman and a pair of walks meant trouble for him in the ninth, which he entered with a 6-to-3 lead. Two pardonable errors by Lyn Lary were of no help to Russell, either, but Ossie Bluege was when he started a double play on Hale's grounder and then came up with that unbelievable effort to catch Campbell at the plate.

Bucky Harris will send two more veteran pitchers to the mound for their first tests of the season tomorrow, when the Nats engage the Cleveland Indians in the second

Ruth Is Hitless as Boston Bows on Wide Throw; Other Camp Games.

By the Associated Press.

LAKELAND, Fla., March 21.—The Detroit Tigers put on a ninth-inning rally to defeat the Boston Braves, 5 to 4, in an exhibition game here today.

The American League champions came to bat in the ninth one run behind the Braves and collected the necessary two runs by combining a double by Fox, a single by Hayworth and a triple by Gehringer. Fox scored the tying run when Walker, running for Hayworth, made a delayed steal at second and Lewis' throw was wide.

Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe pitched the first three innings, yielding four hits and fanning five men, including Babe Ruth. The Bambino, who played five innings but went hitless, got an ovation from the crowd of 3,120. The score:

Giants Routed Again.

Bradenton, Fla., March 21 (AP).—A seven-run assault on Rookie Fred Gabler in the first inning paved the way for the World Champion St. Louis Cardinals' 9-to-8 victory over the New York Giants and the fourth straight setback for the Terrymen today.

Gabler was temporarily knocked out by a drive from Joe Medwick's bat during the Cards' opening attack, and most of the run damage he suffered came after the injury.

Included in the seven-hit barrage in the first inning was a home run by Leo Durocher.

Ruth Will Pay For Braves' Training

'Gate' Lure May Bring Babe's Salary, Too, as Spring Records Fall.

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 21.—Babe Ruth is only hitting around .250 so far against the assorted pitching of the "grapefruit circuit," but the elderly Bambino is batting 1.000 at the box office.

The direct consequence is that the Boston Braves, in Broadway's parlance, will be "off the nut" for their spring training trip for the first time in the club's history.

Major league clubs count themselves extremely fortunate if they come close to breaking even on the cost of their pre-season activities. Most of them drop at least $10,000 on the conditioning process. The Braves, however, who need financial help no more than a drowning man needs a life-line, will return to Boston with a substantial profit to show for their first Ruth-inspired tour of the Southland.

Gate Tops '34 Now.

With only 8 of their 27 scheduled exhibition games played so far, including today's contest with the Detroit Tigers at Lakeland, Secretary Edmund P. Cunningham reports that the Braves already have collected more money at the "gate" than they did in their entire 1934 training trip.

Ruth has been the magnet for an aggregate of 20,000 paid admissions, with total receipts figured around $12,000 and the Braves' "cut" at $6,500. Cunningham figures Ruth will help swell the total attendance

'Team to Beat' Well Equipped; Bartell Is Chief Addition.

(The eleventh of a series of stories, gathered first hand in the training camps, on major league prospects for the coming season.)

By Edward J. Neil,

Associated Press Sports Writer.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 21. Take the finest all-around pitching staff in the National League, back it up with sturdy if not brilliant catching, a glittering infield, a swift, robust outfield, mix with oodles of fighting spirit and the answer should come close to describing the 1935 champions.

That's the New York Giants this season, and Bill Terry says the answer is—the champions.

Wherever you go in the Southland, roaming the baseball pastures, National League talk swings instantly to Terry's Terriers, the club of destiny in 1933 conquering the Washington Senators for the world championship, the team that blew a nine-game lead in 1934 and personally held open the door to the recent world series triumph of Frankie Frisch and his Cardinals.

Terry Makes Changes.

At great cost, and with all the courage and decision of John McGraw, Terry has plastered up during the past winter the holes in the dyke that let last year's pennant slip through.

He got the shortstop he's been aching for—peppery, scrappy Dick Bartell—from the Phillies, and with him he brought back George (Kiddo) Davis, whom he frankly admitted he never should have traded out of center field in the first place. The deal cost him the slogan man of 1933, John (Blondy) Ryan, Third Baseman Johnny Vergez, Pitcher Joe Bowman, and cash enough to make up to Brilliant Bartell's value, $125,000.

He picked up real infield replacement strength in Mark Koenig, the old Yankee who subbed the Cubs into the World Series of 1932, and he gathered in the relief pitchers he couldn't do without, Leon Chagnon, from Pittsburgh, and Allyn Stout, from Cincinnati.

Apparently the results have justified William's efforts and judgment, for the National League, from the world champion Cardinals down, are firmly convinced that the Giants, more than ever, are the team to beat.

Has "Big Four" Staff.

Generals Face Cadets 1st Time Since '02 Break

By the Associated Press.

LEXINGTON, Va., March 21.—The dove of peace flew low over Lexington today and the olive leaf's shadow fell upon the Cadets of V. M. I. and the Generals of Washington and Lee as they scrimmaged together in spring football practice for the first time since they broke their athletic relations in 1902.

There was no pulling of punches, the rival teams were hitting hard and cleanly, but the breach that opened wide after a free for all fight in 1902 was closed.

There was no score keeping, in fact, no organized football game. One squad would take the ball on the offensive for a while and then the other team would try lugging the leather.

The Generals visited the Cadets' gridiron for the scrimmage this afternoon, while the V. M. I.'s baseball team trooped over to Washington and Lee's Wilson Field for a practice game with the General nine.

Tomorrow afternoon the Washington and Lee horsehide trumpers will go over to V. M. I. for a practice tilt.

Scores are being kept in none of the games, the first played by the two teams in many years.

Nothing was said about the possible resumption of formal athletic relations—teams in the two schools haven't met since the 1902 break—but the friendly relations augured well for the future.

Should the two teams ever meet again in football, the Generals will be eager to do something about the big margin in the Cadets' favor. In fact the Generals have whipped V. M. I. only once on the gridiron and that was far back in 1896. In 1899, the Cadets won, 39 to 0, repeated with an 11-to-0 victory in 1900 and in 1901 ran up a 46-to-6 advantage. When the Cadets won, 11 to 0, in 1902, the festivities ended in a near riot that Lexington still remembers.

McCarney Sees Chance for Capital Boxer in Detroit Fight.

By Bill McCormick.

THE story behind the story of the signing of Natie Brown, local heavyweight, to do battle with Joe Louis, the Detroit Destroyer, in the colored lad's native bailiwick in Michigan next Friday has more angles than a modernistic painting.

Not that any important boxing contest is arranged by the simple expedient of saying to this pug that he will get 25 per cent of the gate receipts for doing a specified stint of noggin knocking with that pug, but it required even more than the normal amount of phenagling, chicanery and skullduggery to make the Louis-Brown match.

For the past six or eight months Bill McCarney, a very skillful navigator of the treacherous fistic waters, has been exerting every effort to secure a worthwhile match for his protége, Natie Brown. Manager Bill arranged an offer of $10,000 with a liberal optional percentage of the gate receipts for Steve Hamas to fight Natie in Washington. Venerable Charley Harvey, who did not hesitate to send Steve in to take a terrible licking from Max Schmeling in Germany, flatly declined the offer, averring that he wanted no part of Natie Brown for Steve Hamas, regradless of terms or where the bout could be staged.

King Levinsky next was sought as an opponent for Brown, but when the final contact was made

Furfiber Disqualified, Wise Prince Wins; Garner Suspended

Time Equals Fastest of Meeting

Bagur and Critchfield Grounded in Finale; Manifold Hurt.

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., March 21.—W. A. Jones Furfiber was disqualified after finishing first in the Ocoee Purse here today.

Furfiber led Felix Spatola's heavy favorite, Wise Prince, home by three parts of a length. A like margin behind came Mrs. C. S. Bromley's Brannon. Then followed Dewey Bentham's Abner and E. R. Bradley's Be Mine.

The talent let out a cheer when Furfiber's number was taken down after "Red" Pollard, who Rode Brannon, claimed foul. Wise Prince was awarded first money and paid $3.30. Brannon got the place and Abner the show.

Garner Suspended.

The stewards announced shortly after the race that the veteran Mack Garner, who rode Furfiber, was ruled suspended for the remainder of the meeting for rough riding. Wright earned a double as a result of the disqualification.

The time for the 6 furlongs was 1:11 4-5, which equaled the fastest at the meeting. Furfiber, a muchly improved horse, had won four in a row at Hialeah.

Wise Prince, Brannon and Abner raced closely aligned in that order until Furfiber came along with a rush on the outside and joined the leaders rounding out of the back stretch. Wise Prince was on the inside, Brannon in the middle and Furfiber outside as this trio turned into the stretch heads apart. To many it appeared that Wright, on Wise Prince, came out and forced Brannon out with him. To others it seemed that Furfiber came in and bothered Brannon. At any rate, the latter was the victim. The three fought it out bitterly in the closing strides with Furfiber holding Wise Prince safe.

The crowd received a bad scare when Jeton bolted and went through the outside rail near the quarter pole. Jockey H. Manifold appeared to land on his head, but escaped with a shaking up and a minor cut under one eye. The horse seemed badly gashed on the flank.

Scotch Queen Wins.

Admirers of Jockey Wayne Wright were quick to get off in front here today. The Idaho lad had the mount on Scotch Queen, a field horse in the opening dash, and the filly won as if pounds the best. Breaking second, Wright sent the daughter of Scotch Broom into a long lead and never was menaced, winning by five lengths to pay $10.50. True Charm offered chief contention throughout the six furlongs and headed Little Argo for the place. Tudor Queen ran a dull race in the role of favorite.

Johnny Donovan saddled his first winner of the winter when W. H. Gallagher's Miss Ginbar, well liked by her connections, was up to beat Starborough, a field horse, by a length in the dash for maiden 2-year-old fillies. Both the winner and Masked Gal, a tip that ran third another length away, were carried wide at the stretch turn. Starborough overtook the stopping Gay Minetta and saved ground, but she could not stave off Miss Ginbar's late bid. The latter paid $12.70.

Shuffle On Victor.

Shuffle On, well handled by Glen Haines, was an easy victor over a mediocre lot of platers in the one mile of the third. Rated close to the pace in the early running, the gelding took command at his leisure and moved clear, to score by three lengths. He paid $11. Morning Fair created some excitement by taking the place after a slow start, returning $75.20. Guiding Light, the favorite, was last away. She ran into trouble, got free and gained the show, a length farther back.

Favorite players had to wait until the fourth race to cash a winning ticket. In this event of a mile and a sixteenth, Janey Lee responded to Joe Rosen's call around the final bend and flashed to the front to score by a length and a half in a drive with Broken Up. Shalot was less than a length behind. Janey Lee ran down Double R., but had to be kept under pressure to save the purse from Broken Up. The winner paid $7.70.

Pays $19.60 Mutuel.

Flowery Lady caused a surprise by driving to a head triumph in the sixth, paying $19.60. Mermie Roy nosed out Salut D'Amour, the early pacemaker, for secondary honors. Hermie Roy, which ran in dull fashion last time out, had so much life in him today that he ran away more than a mile after his mile-and-sixteenth race. The three "money" horses dominated all the running, with Flowery Lady outlasting her rivals in a hard drive.

Caerleon, $13.20, grouped in the field, nosed out Cabochon in the finale, with Lotus Bud third.

SCOTCH QUEEN was much the best. She opened a wide gap early and just galloped along and was never let down. TRUE CHARM moved up fast and held on well. LITTLE ARGO, away slowly, worked his way up and finished very fast in the middle of the track. LADY LAURA ran a good race. TUDOR QUEEN had no mishap.

SECOND RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $700. For 2-year-old maiden fillies. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:58½. Off at 3:03½. Winner, W. H. Gallagher's br. f. (2), by Zev—Daunt. MISS GINBAR ran a smart race. She was carried wide entering stretch, but closed gamely and was going away right at end. STARBOROUGH slipped through on the inside entering stretch, but weakened suddenly in last 20 yards. MASKED GAL was taken very wide on turn, came with a rush, and might have won but for being carried out. GAY MINETTA, away fast, showed speed, but stopped. HIGH TREASON suffered early interference.

THIRD RACE—One mile. Purse, $700. Claiming price, $1,050. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:38½. Off at 3:40½. Winner, Miss A. Lyons' b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHUFFLE ON—$11.00, $6.60, $4.20; MORNING FAIR, $75.20, $19.00; GUIDING LIGHT, $3.10.

SHUFFLE ON was much the best. He moved up fast on outside, took lead turning out of back stretch, drew away, and won nicely in hand. MORNING FAIR went up with a rush on inside, saved ground, and ran a good race. GUIDING LIGHT, away slowly, had to overcome a lot of interference, came around field and finished fast. VILLAGE VAMP finished gamely. CHAUMONT quit badly. SAND RUNNER ran well for seven furlongs, then quit.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $700. Claiming prices, $1,500 to $1,200. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:14. Off at 4:19½. Winner, R. W. Collins' b. f. (3), by Lee O. Cotner—Ruby. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:48 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JANEY LEE, $7.70, $5.00, $3.80; BROKEN UP, $4.60, $4.60; SHALOT, $4.00.

JANEY LEE broke fast, was rated off the fast early pace, ran into lead at top of stretch, and drew away in last sixteenth. BROKEN UP, a stout factor from the start, made a game effort. SHALOT was allowed to drop far out of it in early part and closed very fast. DOUBLE R. displayed excellent speed and is sure to win soon. JEANNE S. had no mishap. ARAKAY lacked speed and was never a contender.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. The Ocoee. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:52. Off at 4:54½. Winner, F. Spatola's blk. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WISE PRINCE, $3.30, $2.50, $2.40; BRANNON, $3.50, $3.20; ABNER, $4.50.

FURFIBER was much the best. He was well ridden, moved up very fast on the outside, came around field entering stretch and appeared clear of his field, and won going away, but was disqualified for a foul. It was a very unjust ruling. WISE PRINCE, away fast, rushed into lead, but swerved out entering stretch, bothering Brannon, and held on gamely. BRANNON followed pace closely, and was well beaten as the field turned into stretch. ABNER had speed for a half-mile. BE MINE was outrun.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $700. Claiming prices, $1,500 to $1,250. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:26½. Off at 5:29. FLOWERY LADY moved up gamely on inside, stood long drive, and just lasted to win. HERMIE ROY, showing small improvement over recent race, came with a rush and was second in final stride. SALUT D'AMOUR, running back to his previous good race, ran into lead, showed speed, and held on well. FLAXEN moved up very fast around turn, but weakened suddenly in stretch. CAERLEON slipped through on inside in run down back stretch and stood long drive gamely. CABOCHON ran into lead, but tired suddenly in last few strides. LOTUS BUD broke fast, but was crowded back going into first turn, and closed gamely. ST. OMER ran a good race. MAREVE quit. JETON bolted around turn, went through the fence and was apparently hurt.

Sholl's Enters A. A. U. Semifinals, Defeating J. C. C. Team 38-19

Second Half Rally Nets Victory

Heurich Trims Saints; Young Men's Clubm, Sherwood Win.

AFTER being given a stubborn and close battle for 20 minutes, Sholl's smooth-working basket ball machine cut loose with its vaunted passing and shooting attack last night in the closing session to eliminate Jewish CommunityCenter, 38 to 19, in The Post's District A. A. U. tournament at Tech High's gym.

The victory, which was a comparatively easy one after the long and short boys on Sholl's team struck their stride, sent the 1932-33 unlimited A. A. U. champions into the semifinal round. Thus Sholl's stands ready to meet the winner of the Stewart's Pharmacy-Company F game for the right to enter the finals.

Sleuths Face Winner.

Bureau of Investigation, already in the semifinals by virtue of a 2-point triumph over Maryland A. C. Wednesday night, will face the winner of the Olmsted rill-Mount Vernon scrap. And if the dope runs true to form, Sholl's and Investigation, the two deadly rivals, will meet in the finals.

Into the semifinals stepped the high-powered Sherwood girls' team, which crushed Garfield, 44-17.

J. C. C. Five Score.

Showing plenty of fight and team work in the first half, J. C. C. looked like a winner against Sholl's. Sholl's led, 6 to 1, after six minutes of play, and was ahead, 13 to 6, seven minutes later. Milt Genderson got a foul goal for the Hebrew entry, and Heilman, center, knocked in three field goals as J. C. C. tied the score for the first time.

Two minutes before the half ended, Bobby Lucas plunked in a long shot and Bernie Jones added a free throw, as Sholl's took a 16-to-13 lead at half time.

It was all Sholl's when the two teams resumed play, Lucas, Ollie Tipton and the rest of the Cafe boys started potting shots from all angles and distances and with half of the period gone Sholl's was commanding a 28 to 17 advantage.

So airtight was the Sholl's defense in the closing period that J. C. C. was able to garner but six points—two field goals and a foul shot.

Coach Rip Engle Has Fine Record

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., March 21.—Charles A. (Rip) Engle, former Western Maryland athlete, has produced seven championship teams in his five years as athletic director at Waynesboro High School. His teams have won the Cumberland Valley Athletic League championship thrice in football and four times in basket ball.

In football his teams won 28 games, lost 13 and tied 5, scoring 627 points to 298 for their opponents. His best year was in 1933, when ten consecutive games were won. The Tornado in those five years averaged 13.7 points per game to their opponents' 6.5 points.

Out of 101 basket ball games in five years, Engle-coached teams have won 78 games while losing 23. The Tornado scored 3,205 points to their opponents 2,158.

Father "Mac" Sees Future For G. U. Frosh Relay Team

By Lewis F. Atchison.

THE faded glory that was Georgetown's when LeGendre, Connelly, Plansky, Sullivan, Holden, Swinburne and other track immortals lorded over the collegiate domain is being restored to its pristine brilliance, and the Hoyas are marching on the heights again.

But the way back is a slow, treacherous one, and Coach Jim Mulligan, who is molding the Hoya track future, believes it will be two years before Georgetown again becomes a reigning power in the world of spikes and split-seconds.

As the nucleus for a team, Mulligan has one of the greatest freshman relay combinations ever enrolled at the Hilltop—Warder, Hogue, Hanks and Brown. It was second to Manhattan in the intercollegiate games medley relay, finishing in 7:26 after losing the baton, record-breaking time. It won the Southern Conference mile relay in 3:36—another record-shattering performance and Mulligan says it is still green.

Relay Shows Promise.

Father Vincent McDonough, or Father "Mac" as hundreds of Georgetown students and fans know him, believes this freshman team as promising as any that Georgetown ever has harbored. Father "Mac" recalled the greatness of the 2-mile relay team of Marsters, Sullivan, Holden and Swinburne, a champion and world-record holder in its day, and the 1-mile combination of Kinnaly, Asher, Hurlihey and Burgess, another champion and record-holder and said that this rookie quartet looks to be as good as either.

The kindly priest with the clear, blue eyes, who is as much a part of Georgetown as Old North Hall, yesterday called to mind the 2-mile combine hung up a world indoor mark of 7:41.6, and went on to lower the outdoor record to 7:42 flat, lopping four seconds from the previous figure in the Penn relays. Father "Mac" believes that if Georgetown had had any competition in the latter race it would have negotiated the distance in 7:38—a figure that might never have been equaled.

He also likes to tell how the late Bob LeGendre, whom he calls the greatest all-round athlete to sport the Blue and Gray, won six firsts in a dual meet with Penn State, and how he won five firsts in a triangular meet with Catholic University and Maryland. He was a track team in himself.

Connelly Is Recalled.

Father "Mac" can talk for hours about other Hilltop immortals whose deeds still live. Of Jimmy Connelly, the great miler; of Dorsey Griffith, a sprinter now coaching at Catholic University. He delights to tell how Tony Plansky and Emory Norton finished one-two for two consecutive years in the decathlon at the Penn Relays. That was after LeGendre had won the pentathlon three consecutive years—a feat that never may be equaled.

He can regale you with stories of all the old-timers, of thrilling finishes, heart-breaking victories and defeats, but, like Coach Jim Mulligan, he firmly believes that this freshman team will be as good as any of its predecessors. And the records seem to bear the pair of them out.

knuckler, plump Freddy Fitzsimmons, and the rubber-armed youngsters who have everything it takes, Leroy Parmelee and Harold Schumacher.

If Parmelee hadn't been out with appendicitis the early part of last season, there's no telling what sort of a lead the Cards would have had to overcome in September.

Clyde Castleman, big, young righthander from Montreal; ancient Dolfo Luque, whose years get lighter each spring, though they number 44 now, and Stout and Chagnon make the Giants' pitching situation a manager's delight.

The infield is something to behold. Bartell, at short, a lively, hitting, sure-fielding scrapper, is the perfect tonic for the veterans—Travis Jackson, on third; Hughie Critz, on second, and Terry himself, on first.

Terry, though he's grooming Joe Malay to take his place some day, still is a graceful fielder and .350 hitter. Bartell goes around .310, Critz and Jackson haven't broken .300 lately, but their fielding sureness and balance make up for all that.

Terry will have plenty of punch in the outfield again with Mel Ott, who smacked some runs and batting upward of .325, in right, and Joe Moore, a .331 hitter who was an absolute plague to pitchers last season, in left. The sole question is who will play in between them.

There isn't a weak spot on the club. Gus Mancuso isn't the most agile catcher in the league, nor the heaviest hitter, but he's a master hand with the boxmen, and he gets able support, when he needs to rest, from Paul Richards and Harry Danning.

Terry Is Powerful.

Fighting Davis, regular centerfield with the champions in 1933, is big Hank Leiber, who hits a long ball. There's Phil Weintraub, fine hitter but uncertain fielder on low balls, who might be the answer to the Polo Grounds multi-year search for a Jewish star. Leiber probably will start, but the competition is going to be mighty swift.

Oakland, Calif., March 21 (AP).—Chicago's Cubs bludgeoned out a 9-to-0 win over Oakland in an exhibition game here today that saw two National League hurlers hold the Oaks to six scattered hits.

The Coast League batsmen were helpless before the offerings of Southpaw Larry French and Lon Warneke.

The Cubs' slugging brigade was led by Billy Herman, second baseman, who donned a uniform after a week's illness and pounded out a double and three singles. Catcher Gabby Hartnett hit three for three, including a double.

for the whole exhibition route to 150,000. This may be conservative. The club has single games scheduled in Washington, D. C., and Newark, N. J., April 7 and 9, and then three games with the rival Red Sox in Boston, April 12, 13 and 14. On the way north, an additional stop-over has been arranged at Fayetteville, N. C., where the Babe first trained in the South with the Baltimore Orioles.

The spring pay-off probably will be sufficient to cover most, if not all, of Ruth's $25,000 salary, as well as pay the club's entire training expenses. The Babe has a personal "cut" in the exhibition profits in addition to the percentage he will get—as second vice president and assistant manager—during the regular season.

Ruth to Profit on Games.

Altogether it may prove one of the most successful financial ventures in the slugger's long career, depending upon how much he stimulates popular interest by his activities on the field.

The proof seems conclusive that Ruth will "draw" as long as he can take his place in the regular line-up. It is also evident the Babe is determined on a hitting comeback which may mean a fresh crop of home runs. He is conditioning himself slowly, but already getting his eye on the ball and giving it some long rides.

The crowd of 6,500 that saw Dean hold Ruth hitless was the biggest that has ever seen a major league exhibition game in Florida. It was the second record-breaker within five days at the Braves' grounds. More than 4,700 watched the first game of the series with the Yankees last Saturday. Record crowds also have turned out at Bradenton and Lakeland, the camps of the Cardinals and Tigers.

Westvaco A. A. Quintet Evens Series for Title

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Piedmont, W. Va., March 21.—The Westvaco A. A. basketeers evened up accounts with the Keyser Golden Knights in their five-game series for the championship of the Inter-State League by winning the second contest here, 34 to 30, before a capacity crowd at the K. of P. Armory.

Coach "Eck" Miers' dribblers actually won the game in the first quarter, when they ran up a six-point lead ten minutes after the opening whistle.

Prim Is Traded By Nats for Coppola

Harris Revises Estimate of Griffith's Protege After Game.

By a Staff Correspondent.

BILOXI, Miss., March 21.—The latest and most significant chapter in the brief baseball history of Henry Coppola was written today when the short swart right-handed pitcher was purchased outright by the Washington Club.

Coppola became the property of the Nats when Owner Clark Griffith traded 28-year-old Ray Prim, southpaw hurler, to the Albany Club, which had title to Coppola. Prim, purchased from Albany two years ago for $10,000, was receiving his second trial with the Nats in Biloxi.

Coppola is Griffith's own protege. After he had been recommended to the Nats by Joe Cambria, Albany owner, the 20-year-old Italian youth came to Washington last fall and worked out daily at Griffith Stadium during the football season while Griffith, himself, supervised his training and altered his pitching style.

Revised Estimate.

During the first two weeks at Biloxi, however, Coppola did not impress Manager Bucky Harris in the same degree that did other Washington rookies, but Harris quickly revised his estimate after the Italian boy's first test under fire.

In that game, against Albany, Coppola displayed a smoking fast ball that he was able to keep around the batter's knees with excellent control, and Harris since has held him in high esteem.

Coppola's organized baseball experience has been brief. After a few weeks with Hartford in the New England League, he joined the Albany Club near the end of the 1934 season, lost his only league start, 1 to 0, and allowed but one hit in an exhibition game after the close of the season.

Maryland Race Rules Facing Slight Changes

Baltimore, March 21 (AP).—Jervus Spencer, jr., chairman of the Maryland Racing Commission, disclosed today that the commission has been working on a revision of the rules governing horse racing in the State. The new regulations are expected before spring racing starts April 2.

Spencer said no drastic changes will be made. The most important one was the elimination of the rule saying: "When the added money exceeds $1,000, the top weight in all handicaps except claiming handicaps shall not be less than 126 pounds for 3-year-olds and upward, nor less than 122 pounds for 2-year-olds."

Middies May Vie In Poughkeepsie

Crews to Open on April 20 Against Columbia.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., March 21.—The United States Naval Academy today reserved its decision on entering the Poughkeepsie Regatta in announcing its crew schedule for this spring. After the intercollegiate classic was the notation: "Possible participation."

Navy opens its rowing program against Columbia University in New York April 20, with probably three events listed for varsity, junior varsity and plebe crews. Four races—varsity, junior varsity, freshmen and 150-pounders—will be held here on April 27 in the meet with Cornell.

The varsity, junior varsity and plebe boats will compete with Harvard and Pennsylvania in the Adams Cup races here May 25, while the 150-pound crew will be in the Henley Regatta at Philadelphia on the same day.

Club at Norfolk Suspended in Ring Quiz

Two Fighters 'Grounded,' and Another Fined Following Bout.

By the Associated Press.

NORFOLK, Va., March 21.—The Virginia State Boxing and Wrestling Commission last night suspended two fighters, fined one and put the Olympic A. C., of Norfolk, on the inactive status for 30 days.

The hearing was called as a result of a bout here March 13 in which Eddie Marks, of New York, lost to Spider Hewitt, and Frank O'Carroll was beaten by Freddie Wallmyer. The bouts were promoted by Joe Klein, of the Olympic Athletic Club.

Marks was suspended for one year and fined $75 because the commission held he "failed to put forth his best effort in his bout with Hewitt on March 13, 1935."

Out for 60 Days.

O'Carroll was suspended for 60 days for not being in condition when he fought Wallmyer. It was stated at the hearing that O'Carroll was not signed to fight on the thirteenth until 7:55 o'clock on he night of the bouts. He substituted for Pete Bevan, originally scheduled to fight Wallmyer.

The license of the Olympic A. C. was suspended for 30 days from March 13 "for the reason that the club promoter failed to give proper notice to the public through the press or otherwise of the substitutions in the fights, of March 13, 1935," in the words of the commission.

Chairman Ralph Daughton presided over the commission hearing.

Picard's 68-69 Leads Field By 2 Shots

Cooper Is 2d With 72-67; Chandler Harper Has Total of 141.

By the Associated Press.

CHARLESTON, S. C., March 21. Henry Picard today cracked 70 for the second successive day and moved into a two-stroke lead over the field in the $3,000 Charleston open golf tournament.

The Hershey, Pa., professional played flawless golf for a 69, which, with his opening 68, gave him a total of 137 and a two-stroke advantage over Harry Cooper, Chicago, who stepped into the chaser's position with a scintillating 67 after his first-round 72.

Johnny Revolta, Milwaukee, who matched Picard's round on the opening day, found trouble on the greens and slipped to a 73.

McSpaden Is Third.

Harold McSpaden, Kansas City, fired his second 70 and moved into third place with a total of 140, as Wiffy Cox, Brooklyn, who opened with a 69, slid to a 78.

Men's Team Fight to Feature A. A. U. Swim Opening Tonight

G. W. Facing Three Title Threats

Groff May Not Enter; Girls' Events Also in Limelight.

By John R. Vosburgh.

WITH a four-cornered fight for the men's team title giving the program the keenest kind of an edge, the annual District A. A. U. indoor swimming championships will open tonight at the Shoreham Pool amid a wave of froth, foam and the aspirations of some 120 men and women amphibians.

From the start of the opening heat until the finish of the final race tomorrow night, the battle of the George Washington University team against three tough rivals in defense of its title promises to occupy the high spot of the two-day fiesta. Rated on a par with the collegians, the Y. M. C. A., Central High School and the Shoreham Men's Club all figure to match the defending champions point for point with little or nothing to choose among them.

While the Shoreham will, in all probability, enter the scramble minus the services of its free-style flash, George Groff, of Penn, its strength in the high diving and in the free-style relay is conceded sufficient to keep it well in the van. Bob Knight, defending diving champion; Johnnie Broaddus, outdoor champion, and Buddy Hodgson, former South Atlantic interscholastic champ, rate 1, 2, 3 in their specialty, while the 200-yard relay quarter made up of Hodgson, Joe La Salle, former Central High sprinter; Ed Hickey, former Brown University star, and Alex MacMillan, one-time Naval Academy merman, stands as the team to beat in that event.

Titles Face Default.

Should Goff, who has sent word that he will probably have to compete in a collegiate meet, swim in the local event, the Shoreham automatically will become the favorite in the team fight. Groff's 50 and 100 yard individual championships also face default.

The Y. M. C. A., led by Bill Marmion, perennial back-stroke champ, packs a powerful punch. Such sure point winners as Ernie Boggs, Paul Wilson, James Orme and others round out the team.

The big squad entered by Coach Fred Brunner, of Central, holding the South Atlantic interscholastic and high school championships, has replaced the "Y" as the slight favorite during the past few days, however. With Bob Jordan, 220-yard champion, defending his championship, Central, having unusual strength in both the medley and free style relays, is conceding the title to no one.

George Washington has a sure title winner in Dyer Ghormley, its Eastern intercollegiate championship breast-stroker, and a serious contender for the 220-yard title in Beverley Carter, former Duke University Southern intercollegiate champion. The college's relay teams complete a field in which all the clubs entered rate about on a par.

The Colonials have held the championship for the last two years. The Ambassador pool squad won it in 1932 and Central in 1931 and 1930.

First Opposition.

The women's events will see the Shoreham facing team opposition for the first time in two years. Coached by Bob Varella, former college swimmer at Duke and Syracuse, Emma Shelton, Frances Campbell and Betty Flathers appear slated to bring Western High School its first points won by a girls' team in the free style races, while Betty Coman is a distinct threat in the back stroke. Helen Richardson will be the first woman swimmer ever to represent Maryland Club Gardens. She is holder of the 100-yard breast stroke championship.

Of the champions defending their titles, only Marion Ghormley, breast stroke champ, and Marie Duvall, women's diving champion, appear sure repeaters. Knight faces tough opposition in the dive in Broaddus. Jordan must stave off Carter and Ernie Boggs, of the "Y," in the 220; Betty O'Toole, individual women's medley and breast stroke champion, faces the serious challenge of Miss Richardson and Leonora Taube, not to speak of Louisa Robert, former Olympic swimmer, who possibly may compete.

Rita Augusterfer is a slight favorite to retain her 220-yard title against the threat of Annabelle Whaler and Ann Bono, but hardly rates high in defending her 100-yard championship. Miss Taube faces hard going in defense of her back stroke title against Miss Richardson and Miss Coman.. The 50-yard free style, in which Caroline Cox will not defend her title, appears a wide-open race.

The Picture That Started Threats of a Boycott

Rivers Banking On Beating Sarron

Buys $12 Boxing Shoes as Evidence of Faith He Has in Himself.

ALL the world, or that small portion of it which patronizes local boxing shows, may think that California Joe Rivers hasn't a chance against Pete Sarron at the Auditorium Monday night, but the California Mexican is banking heavily on beating the Syrian Sazerac. So heavily, in fact, that he has bought a new pair of shoes.

If California Joe had bought a new pair of street shoes, that wouldn't be news, but the Mexican featherweight has bought a brand new pair of boxing shoes, for which he paid $12.

"Lissen," Joe will tell you if asked, even if not asked, "I'm a nice, thrifty young feller. I don't squander my pennies. So, do you think I'd buy a new pair of boxin' shoes if I thought Sarron was gonna put me outta commission? Ha! He won't even beat me, an' that's that."

Greb Forced Out.

A change in the preliminary card was made necessary yesterday when Joey Greb, New York lightweight, was forced out of his scheduled six-rounder against Roddy Davis by a cut eye. Greb's spot on the bill will be taken by Eddie Marks, another New Yorker.

In another six-rounder Ray (Kid) Ingram will meet Tin Can Rovelli, a New York club fighter. An additional six and four round opener are in the process of arrangement.

Prince Wilhelm Can Take It; Wins 'Verdict' Over Hamas

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, March 21.—Steve Hamas, who fights for a living, and former Crown Prince Wilhelm, to whom boxing is a hobby, engaged in a bout today—the former to show he has recovered from his beating by Max Schmeling, the latter to prove he can take it.

Perhaps a boxing match never before has been staged under such circumstances. It was held in a beautiful palace, ornate with porcelains, rich with tapestries, on Berlin's famous boulevard, Unter den Linden. The palace now serves the Hohenzollern scion as an official residence.

Steve, hesitant in gait, but otherwise apparently entirely recovered after ten days' rest in a sanitarium outside Berlin, spoke of his meeting with the former crown prince and their boxing bout as "corking."

The royal sportsman welcomed the Americans in the lobby of his sumptuous dwelling. His first remark after greeting his visitors was to compliment Mrs. Hamas on her attire—her dress was in two tones of brown, with brown hat and coat. The prince inquired solicitously about Steve's health and was given a reassuring reply.

Then followed hours of conversation with Hamas about boxing and sport in general. This led to more direct action.

The prince jumped up, rolled up his sleeves to show his biceps, then hurled a challenge in ringing tones:

"Punch me there," he said, pointing to the solar plexus.

Steve obliged.

Hamas, relating the episode afterward, asserted he had given the prince "my hardest punch, right in the belly."

"Of course, it wasn't as hard as some of those I gave Sehmeling," the American added. "You see, I'm not in training now."

The prince, Hamas said, seemed satisfied with the demonstration.

2 Sixes to Support Buffalo-Mollis Bout

Twin sixes to support the Gene Buffalo-Tommy Mollis featured all-colored boxing show at the Lincoln Colonnade next Wednesday, were arranged yesterday. In them, Sammy Williams, of Washington, will meet John Freeman, of Scranton, and Sammy Elmore, of Trenton, will square off against Lambertine Williams, of Baltimore. Additional supporting bouts will be announced later.

Brown, Louis Signed After 'Pressure' with the Kingfish's sister-manager, Leaping Lena Levinsky, through Dave Barry, the famous "14-count" referee, Lena allowed as how she'd let someone else play around with the tough Washington contender.

Joe Gould, manager of James J. Braddock, who meets Art Lasky in Madison Square Garden tonight, passed up Natie without giving a reason. Gould did hint, however, that Natie was the one man in the ring who might upset the plans he had mapped out for James J.

Maurice Lasky, manager of Art Lasky, told Jules Beck, Pittsburgh promoter, and Lew Raymond, another Smoky City promoter, that meeting Natie Brown was taking too much of a chance.

Walter A. Taylor, a Cleveland promoter, wasted much energy trying to persuade Johnny Risko or Patsy Perroni to meet Brown. Risko was so soundly trounced by Brown here that he wanted no more of him, and he must have passed the word along to Perroni.

Then Came Louis.

Then came Louis, blazing across the fistic horizon in much the same manner that Jack Dempsey was blazing in 1918. As he bowled over opponent after opponent, his stock on the fistic exchange zoomed to unprecedented heights. Here was just the opponent Brown needed to gain the place in the sun he and McCarney both felt was rightfully his.

Jules Beck, Pittsburgh; Walter A. Taylor, Cleveland, and Nate Lewis, the Chicago promoter, who is doing much of Louis' business, all were unable to coax the Detroit Destroyer into the ring with Brown. Louis himself seemed to have no objections to Brown as an opponent, but Jack Blackburne, a one-time fighter, who now is training Louis, emitted such a beller of indignation at the mere mention of Brown, that the colored boy passed him up.

Finally, under cover of great secrecy, "pressure" was brought to bear on the Louis entourage. The "pressure" was exerted by certain gentlemen who make a business of exerting "pressure" in many occupations besides the prize ring. In all fairness, it must be said that the "pressure" was exerted not at the behest of Manager McCarney, but merely because the group of gentlemen were impelled by a great curiosity as to the respective abilities of the Messrs. Brown and Louis.

Articles Are Signed.

With everyone being consulted but Blackburn, the articles finally were signed. Louis' colored trainer learned of the impending bout from the newspapers—and not from any of the others in Louis' entourage. So, if Brown should do what many are expecting him to do—decision the Negro sensation, Blackburne can find some solace in the customary "I told you so's."

McCarney is very optimistic over Brown's chances, but not unduly so.

"While meeting Joe Louis is a tough assignment for Natie after being on the sidelines since last October," admits Will, "nevertheless, it is a golden opportunity for him. It is just such an opening as I got for Luther McCarthy when Carl Morris was beating everyone and was the real sensation white hope in 1912. McCarthy, an unknown that I was hiding out in Springfield, Mo., knocked out Morris in the sixth round and became world famous. While I could not get McCarthy a date anywhere before that fight, I was flooded with offers immediately after his victory."

New York in Uproar At Jacobs' 'Heil Hitler'

Special Dispatch to The Post.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Threats of a Jewish boycott against Max Schmeling were revived today as the German boxer's American manager, Joe (Heil Hitler!) Jacobs, returned from abroad to arrange a Schmeling-Baer fight in Madison Square Garden's Long Island City Bowl this June.

The publication of photographs that showed Joe giving the Nazi salute in a Hamburg prize ring after Schmeling stopped Steve Hamas there ten days ago stirred up this ill feeling against Jacobs and his Teutonic protege.

Jewish language newspapers denounced Joe and Max in bitter editorials. Jacobs' gesture of obeisance to Hitler made him the talk of the town. Down in the remodeled Ghetto, groups gathered on street corners and were harrangued by orators who urged them to give back-sliding Joey and his Nazi meal ticket the bum's rush when they try to do business here. Jewish trade has meant thousands of turnstile clicks in New York fight-gate history, and such a boycott would be a potent weapon.

Up in the Bronx the good burghers agreed that Jacobs (Yussel, the Muscle), the little man with the big cigar, was no credit to their creed and should be handed plenty of prairie, both professionally and socially.

Along Bashed Beezer boulevard, fight managers—Jews and Gentiles alike—put the blast on their colleague and in the Broadway delicatessens and nighteries where playboy Jacobs is a familiar figure, the waiters were conspiring to put Mickey Finns in his herring.

A few years ago the Jews started to boycott Schmeling in reprisal for Hitler's persecutions of their countrymen in Germany. But Jacobs called off this campaign when he procured letters from several rabbis, declaring that Joe was a fine fellow and deserved their support. It was reported that these clerics, after they glimpsed the pictures of Joe rendering the Nazi stiff arm salaam, wished they could recover these testimonials.

Meanwhile, the pint-size pug pilot, unmindful of his plight, was closeted in conference with Col. John Kilpatrick, Garden prexy, and Jimmy Johnston, match-maker of the Eighth avenue haunted house. These sterling sportsmen who went down the bay to greet Jacobs aboard the incoming S. S. Manhattan made it evident by this gesture that they regard their current heavyweights' elimination tourney as so much phooey.

Lasky to Face Braddock in Garden

Schmeling gave Steve Hamas such a beating that the young man who holds a decision over Lasky likewise had to go to bed under the care of doctors and nurses, and recuperate.

Now, these are deeds of great brutality, but heavyweight fighting isn't supposed to be a Y. M. C. A. gymnasium bout, and men who are able to work violence upon the persons of their opponents grip the imagination, and more readily complete the picture one has in one's mind when one talks of the heavyweight champion of the world. Quite the opposite, there were the two giants, more than a quarter of a ton of flesh who flailed away at one another for a half hour last week in the Garden ring without so much as inflicting a bloody nose or a black eye on one another.

The customers who will be paying $15 for a private pew at the heavyweight championship fight are entitled to ask that both parties be capable of inflicting some kind of bodily harm upon one another. It is insufficient for a heavyweight merely to raise a healthy glow upon his opponent's flank, or merely humiliate him by making him miss and stabbing him daintily in the features. When you buy into a fight, you are entitled to something brutal.

Odds on Golden Miller In Chase Drop to 7 to 2

London, March 21 (AP).—With J. B. Snow's Delaneige, one of the six American-owned eligibles, a doubtful starter, the odds on Dorothy Paget's Golden Miller to repeat his 1934 triumph in the Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree March 29 today were slashed to 7 to 2. He previously had been held at 4 to 1.

Delaneige, second to Golden Miller last year and held at 20 to 1 in today's call over of the betting odds at the Victoria Club, was reported by Trainer Beeby to be off his feed. A second veterinarian was called in to look over the big jumper, but Beeby said that unless his charge picked up quickly, he would not go to the post.

game of their two-game series here.

Earl Whitehill and Bobby Burke, equally left-handed and both designated among the four pitchers Harris hopes to rotate in order this season, will oppose the Indians. After Cleveland's 7-to-6 defeat by the Nats today, Manager Walter Johnson announced that Clint Brown, Thorton Lee and Ralph Winegarner would be on the mound for the Indians tomorrow.

The fate of Biloxi as the Nats' training camp in future years will be known tomorrow, it was said today by Anthony V. Ragusin, secretary of the Biloxi Chamber of Commerce.

Refusing to amplify his declaration, Ragusin said that an announcement of whether Washington will or will not return to Biloxi in the future will be made. This city's selection as the 1936 training camp has been jeopardized, it is believed, by the week of steady rains.

Red Barry Tamed at Last, Seeks Title, Says Manager

By Jack Cuddy.

United Press Staff Writer.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Edward (Mushky) Jackson, ace lexicographer and mastermind of the fight game's goofiest team, returned today to his native ballwick, the Bronx, jingling Pacific Coast gold and reporting that wild Red Barry is tamed at last.

"Red sees the arrows of his ways," said medium-sized, sallow-faced Mushky, referring to the milky-blond Washington heavyweight with the cream-puff punch and pinkish wool, who is Mr. Jackson's entire stable of fighters.

"We're moochin' along now steller'n a guy and his moll," he continued. "Red ain't pullin' no more walkouts or causin' distoibances. An' I don't haveta send keepers wid him when he fights. Things is just lulu, and we're makin' plentya scratch."

Mushky smiled until the corners of his mouth almost half-mooned into his ears. He was cocked back in a chair with his feet on the desk in Joe Jacobs' office. His hat slanted back on the sparsely-haired head and his teeth gripped a big cigar—just like Joe. Mushky is Joe's assistant, but Barry is Mushky's own fighter. Jackson arrived from California today, just a few hours before Jacobs returned from the Schmeling fight in Germany. Barry is in Washington.

Jackson's name seldom appears in the papers. He is one of the game's unsung heroes; but it is hard to find a more thoroughly dyed-in-the-wool boxing man than Mushky. At 38, he speaks a purer pugilese than any fight character who ever stalked across a magazine page or movie screen. Uninitiated listeners think Mushky is kidding when he opens up in his lingo of the larrupers. But it is the only language he knows.

For 18 years Mushky has been behind the scenes in boxing—swamper, rubber, trainer and general utility man in hundreds of fight camps. With Bob Martin, Floyd Johnson, Mike McTigue, Jock Malone, Billy Defoe, Johnny Dundee, Joe Glick, Frankie Genaro, Andre Routis, Max Schmeling, etc. And always during those long [illegible] on parties," Mushky prayed for the day when he might manage a heavyweight.

The opportunity came three years ago. He was tipped off to a flamingo-headed, whirlwind boxing down Washington way. Mushky hastened to the Capital, saw Barry fight at Laurel, Md., and signed him up.

With that flourish of the pen, Mushky took on plenty of trouble. Barry was a wild youngster in the ring and out. After several disheartening escapades, Mushky, confined to Jacobs' office then, was forced to send bodyguards along with his fighter with instructions to "bust any guy on da beezer, or any dame either, who come monkeyin' around tryin' to get Red on parties."

Then, last summer, Mushky was heart-broken. Barry walked out on him and went to California alone. Enemies had whispered to Red that he was just wasting his time letting a small-time like Jackson handle his affairs. But poor Red nearly starved under other managers. He came back to Jackson and was forgiven.

Mushky immediately got busier than a snare drummer among hornets and arranged a Pacific Coast campaign. Red received a total of $2,240 for suffering technical knockouts from Joe Louis and Tiger Jack Fox.

"An' he acted like a poifect gent all da time; an' now we're goin' after da title," Jackson concluded.

Utilities Lead Stock Market In Brisk Rise

Rails Also Improve, With Union Pacific Up 2 Points.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 21.—The worm turned with a vengeance today as the much-abused utilities led a smart general rally in the stock market. A flock of rumors accounted for the better action of the power shares, but confirmation of most of them was lacking. One report, subsequently definitely denied by Mayor LaGuardia, had it that New York City was withdrawing its application for Federal funds to construct a municipal power plant.

Another, which brought no immediate reply from Administration headquarters, predicted that none of the $4,880,000,000 work relief money being sought from Congress would be used for power-plant construction in competition with the private utility companies.

Next to the utilities, rails gave about the best market performance. Gains of fractions to a point or so were the rule in the low and medium priced groups, and some of the higher valued issues, such as Union Pacific at 87⅞, were around 2 points better.

The volume of transactions, at 889,615 shares, was substantially accelerated on the brisk upturn, and the stock tape got a minute or two behind the market for a time. The Associated Press average for 60 stocks lifted .7 of a point to 36.0, the best level in nearly two weeks.

Possible Break-Up of European Gold Bloc Propounds Vital Questions in Connection With U. S. Trade and Currency Problems.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, March 21.—The imposition of rigid foreign exchange restrictions and a modified gold embargo by the Belgian government forecasts the possible defection of that country from the gold bloc within the near future. Should Belgium actually devalue her currency or join the sterling group, the maintenance of the gold standard in at least some of the remaining countries that adhere to it would be seriously threatened. Accordingly, the likely repercussions of a break-up of the gold bloc on the United States at this time again constitute a vital and pressing question.

The immediate effect of further monetary difficulties in Europe will almost certainly be a substantial movement of funds from the disturbed countries to the United States. The calling of almost $2,000,000,000 of first Liberty bonds has been widely interpreted as an indication that any intention to devalue the dollar further has at least been shelved for the time being. Hence, as between keeping funds in a gold bloc country and shifting them to the United States, which has already devalued her currency, the latter course now appears the wiser to many. In fact, a renewal of heavy gold exports from France and other gold countries to the United States would already have taken place by now, the financial district is convinced, were it not for the intervention in the market of the exchange stabilization fund to support the franc and prevent such a movement. The stabilization fund has thus acquired an additional amount of gold in Paris, it is believed, and may bring this metal back to this country through special shipments before long.

Capital Flow From Europe Would Not Affect U. S.

Such a renewed flow of capital from Europe to the United States would merely add to the plethora of funds available in this country, however, and would not affect our own situation materially. Excess reserves of the bonds are already so large that further increases in their size are of only nominal significance.

A second likely repercussion of a breakdown of the gold bloc will be renewed pressure on the Administration to devalue the dollar further. This will be the case especially if the pound sterling should depreciate in terms of the dollar after the gold currencies decline, as is believed to be the British desire. The effects of further dollar devaluation on commodity and security markets are difficult to gauge in advance, in view of the disappointment of speculators with the effects of the devaluation of the dollar in 1933-34.

On the other hand, if depreciation of the gold bloc currencies does not lead to further devaluation of the dollar, the price level in the United States should not be materially affected. There are comparatively few commodities entering into international trade on a substantial scale whose prices are determined to any important degree in the markets of the gold bloc countries. Great Britain and the other countries in the sterling area are very much more important economically than the gold bloc, so that further depreciation of sterling would have a far greater deflationary effect upon commodity prices here than would devaluation in gold bloc countries.

Gold Bloc Nations Take 10.5 Per Cent of Our Exports.

A breakdown of the gold bloc might also have some effect on the foreign trade of this country, it is felt in business circles. Devaluation would obviously strengthen the competitive position in foreign markets of the gold bloc nations, while at the same time it would tend to curtail their imports. These effects, in fact, constitute one of the principal arguments advanced internally in favor of devaluation. As far as the United States is concerned, however, the repercussion on our foreign trade would be quite limited. The four leading gold bloc countries absorbed only 10.5 per cent of our exports in 1934, and these countries are not important competitors of ours in most foreign markets. Here again, depreciation of sterling would be very much more serious in its effect on us.

In the meanwhile, the highly erratic currency fluctuations of recent weeks caused by fears of a collapse of the gold bloc are having an unsettling effect on foreign trade everywhere. A general desire to avoid making new commitments as far as possible until the outlook clarifies is reported spreading.

Cotton Spinning Maintains Pace Above Capacity

By the Associated Press.

The cotton spinning industry was reported yesterday by the Census Bureau to have operated during February at 100.2 per cent of capacity, on a single shift basis, compared with 102.6 per cent for January this year, and 101.5 per cent for February last year.

Spinning spindles in place February 28 totaled 30,851,018, of which 24,925,168 were active at some time during the month, compared with 30,825,944 and 23,145,694 for January this year, and 30,992,496 and 26,355,498 for February last year.

Active spindle hours for February totaled 6,375,356,524, or an average of 213 hours per spindle in place, compared with 7,510,017,095 and 244 for January this year, and 6,692,120,918 and 216 for February last year.

Aluminum Gains New High Place

Transportation Is Now Largest Consumer.

New York, March 21.—"With continued rise in the importance of the secondary aluminum industry and with an ever-present possibility of new and cheaper methods of extracting aluminum, it seems likely that the price of the metal must gradually decline to a point where the heavy industries can afford to use more and more," says Clyde L. Rogers in an article on "The Future of Aluminum: Its Increasing consumption by the Heavy Industries," in the Annalist tomorrow.

"The perfection of hard aluminum," says the author, "has had the effect of changing the sources of demand. No longer does the kitchen utensil industry rank first in importance; the transportation industry has succeeded to first place. Consumption of architectural aluminum has also rise from 25,000 pounds in 1927 to nearly 5,000,000 pounds in 1932. The electrical industry has become an important source of demand. Although the consumption of aluminum in the so-called "specialty" industries has continued to increase, its use in the heavy industries has increased much more rapidly. The metal itself is now definitely out of the specialty class."

Reserve Member Bank Balances Decline $227,000,000 in Week

Drop Is Due to Withdrawal of Excess Treasury Funds; Redeposit in Regional Reserve Institution Makes Comparable Gain.

By the Associated Press.

A transfer of Government funds reduced member bank reserve balances $227,000,000 during the week ended March 20 to a total of $4,361,000,000, the weekly condition statement of Reserve banks disclosed.

The depletion, Reserve Board officials said, meant simply that the Treasury had withdrawn its excess funds from member banks, and had redeposited them with the Reserve institution. As a result of this transaction, Treasury cash and deposits with the regional institution gained $211,000,000 during the period.

The condition statement said:

"The daily average volume of Federal Reserve Bank credit outstanding during the week ended March 20 was $2,461,000,000, a decrease of $2,000,000 compared with the preceding week and of $60,000,000 compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

"On March 20 total Reserve Bank credit amounted to $2,455,000,000, a decrease of $5,000,000 for the week. This decrease corresponds with increases of $211,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve Banks and $12,000,000 in nonmember deposit and other Federal Reserve accounts and a decrease of $4,000,000 in Treasury and national bank currency offset in part by a decrease of $227,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and an increase of $3,000,000 in monetary gold stock.

"Relatively small changes were reported in holdings of discounted and purchased bills and of industrial advances. A decrease of $2,000,000 in holdings of Treasury bills was offset by an increase of $2,000,000 in United States bonds."

Changes in the amount of Reserve Bank credit outstanding and in related items during the week and the same week last year were as follows in millions of dollars:

Argentine Grain Reloaded Because Of Slump in Price

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, March 21.—A slump in prices here is forcing the reloading and transhipment of a 150,000-bushel cargo of Argentine grain recently brought to this port.

Agents for the shippers said that the grain would be taken to a Gulf port, where they believed, because of rail rate differentials, it could be disposed of at a more attractive figure in one of the Southern or Southwestern markets.

The price drop has generally slowed down local grain imports, which during the winter promised to reach large proportions.

China's Rice Imports to Rise

Foreign Purchases May Reach 1,333,000 Tons This Year.

China will probably import more than 1,333,000 short tons of cleaned rice in comparison with average imports of about 1,076,000 short tons annually during the ten years 1922-31, according to a report to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics from Assistant Agricultural Commissioner F. J. Rossiter, at Shanghai. The need for increased imports this season is said to be the result of drought damage to the crop during the summer of 1934.

The 1934-35 crop is estimated at 38,640,000 short tons of cleaned rice, or about 20 per cent less than the 1933-34 crop and 15 per cent less than the average crop. During the 1933-34 season, when the crop amounted to 46,940,000 short tons of cleaned rice, imports (from October 1, 1933, to September 30, 1934) amounted to 885,000 short tons. In 1931-32, when China had a crop of only 38,530,000 short tons, imports amounted to 1,403,000 short tons.

New York, March 21.—Fox Film Corporation earned a profit of $1,273,069 last year, in spite of an operating loss in the final quarter, the annual report, issued today, disclosed. The reported net income was equivalent to 52 cents a share on the combined class A and class B stocks outstanding.

In 1933 the company had a net loss of $857,122 for the 13 weeks ended April 1, which was prior to reorganization, and a profit of $1,410,793, without tax deduction, for the 39 weeks ended December 30.

Schenley Distillers Corporation reports for 1934 net profit of $6,970,960, equivalent to $6.63 a share on the capital stock. The previous statement covering operations from July 11, to December 31, 1933, showed net profit of $3,522,307, or $3.35 a share.

Allied Chemical & Dye Corporation reports for 1934 net income, after all charges of $17,548,353, equal after preferred dividends to $6.83 a share on the common stock. This compares with $14,595,521, or $5.50 a share in the previous year.

International Telephone & Telegraph Corporation and associated companies reported a net income of $2,079,570 in 1934 compared with a net of $694,126 in 1933, both after deduction of charges. Postal Telegraph and Cable Corporation and associated companies, a subsidiary, reported a loss for the year of $1,590,540, against a loss in 1933 of $1,866,978, after fixed charges.

Pacific Lighting Corporation has reduced the dividend on its common stock from a $3 annual basis to $2.40. Directors declared a quarterly dividend of 60 cents a share, payable May 15 to stockholders of record April 20. It was the first dividend cut since 1899. The directors stated they considered it better policy, in the face of general business conditions "and oppressive legislation, enacted and proposed," to conserve the corporation's resources.

American Maize-Products Co has declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 a share on the company's preferred stock and 25 cents a share on the common. Both dividends are payable March 30 to stockholders of record March 27.

The Ford Motor Co. of Great Britain, Ltd., today announced a dividend of 5 per cent for the past year on £8,669,000 ($43,250,000) of ordinary shares of capital. No distribution had been made for the previous three years.

Bond Prices Follow Stocks ToHigherPlane

Foreign Issues Except Belgians Register Lower Quotations.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 21.—A vigorous rally in utilities snapped the bond market out of its drowsiness in the final hour of trading today.

Gains of 1 to around 3 points were made by obligations of American Water Works, Columbia Gas & Electric, Federal Light & Traction, North American Edison, Postal Telegraph and Utah Power & Light.

Other divisions of the market were a bit spotty. United States Government bonds were from 4-32 to 6-32 higher and isolated cases of strength developed among industrials. Weakness cropped out in some of the rails, however, and several foreign issues were acutely depressed. An advance of around 4 points in two Studebaker issues was the highlight of the industrial division.

Bonds of all the foreign countries currently engaged in digging each other in the ribs over armaments were notable soft spots. Losses of from 1 to 3 or more points were recorded for some of the German, French, Italian and Polish government and private bonds. Belgium 6s were around 1½ points higher.

Transfers aggregated $11,349,000 par value, compared with $9,867,000 on Wednesday.

Curb Advances; Volume Higher

Utility Shares Contribute Strength to List in Active Session.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 21.—Strength in the utility shares bolstered the curb list today and advances of fractions to around a point were well distributed at the close. Volume increased quite substantially in the late dealings, transfers approximating 147,000 shares, compared with 101,000 yesterday.

American Gas & Electric rose a point, while Electric Bond & Share gained 1⅛. Other issues pushing up around a point or so included Montgomery Ward "A," Northern States Power "A," Sherwin-Williams, A. O. Smith, Aluminum Co. of America, and Greyhound Corporation. Fractional improvement was recorded by Newmont Mining, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, International Petroleum, Creole Petroleum and Lake Shore.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—The continental political situation restricted business on the stock exchange yesterday. Prices sagged under the lead of gilt-edged securities on lack of support. Iron and steel shares firmed on the increase in import duties on those products. Gold mining and aircraft stocks met with support. The market closed dull.

Paris—Reflecting uneasiness regarding the Franco-German situation trading on the bourse was sluggish and prices heavy. Slight opening gains in rentes were soon lost. The closing was weak.

Berlin—After a weaker opening prices on the boerse were later stimulated by the German rejection of the French note. The closing was firm.

Dried Fruits Steady.

New York, March 21 (AP).—Dried fruits steady, unchanged.

Wheat Higher; Corn Declines

Cotton Rallies After Initial Drop of $1.25 Per Bale.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 21.—Wheat prices finished strong today despite removal of acreage restrictions on the 1935 domestic spring crop and notwithstanding some moisture relief for winter wheat in the Southwest. Another wheat shortage was threatened by continued drought conditions. It also was asserted that the possible increase of domestic spring wheat crop volume would hardly represent more than 25,000,000 bushels, and would be considerably smaller unless swift action was taken in supplying seed for the crop as well as feed for work animals.

After unusually numerous changes, wheat closed firm at ⅛ to ⅝ net advance; May, 94@94⅛; corn ½ to 1¼ down; May, 78@78⅛; oats, ½ off to ¼ up, and provisions varying from 20 cents decline to a rise of 17 cents.

Cotton Market.

New York, March 21 (AP).—Cotton declined sharply today, but the market came back in the late trading and closed very steady net unchanged to 6 points lower. From slightly higher levels at the start, values were pulled down about $1.25 a bale by a renewal of liquidation coupled with some scattered selling from local and New Orleans sources.

Corn developed weakness owing to selling believed to be against import purchases of Argentine corn. Reported improvement of domestic pasturage taken as a whole was a bearish factor both as to corn and oats. Provisions were unsettled by downturns of the cotton market.

If Wishes Were Horses.

As Jemima washes dishes, which she does throughout the year, she is filled with burning wishes for a high and brave career. She is tired of washing saucers, washing knives and forks and spoons, like the other total-lossers, like the other sad gossoons. She is tired of dirty water, she grew tired of it long since, and she'd like to be the daughter of a baron or a prince. She would like to be a singer, charming hundreds every night, and she thus would be the bringer of much comfort and delight. She's another Galli-Curci, winning triumphs right along, and her rivals beg for mercy, they can't equal her in song. Once I knew a famous singer who was known from pole to pole, every warble was the bringer of a large and gaudy roll. As a queen of music reigning, she was still in evil case; she was all the time complaining of the evils she must face. An attempt she must be making to provide a sweet refrain when her weary head was aching so she scarce could stand the strain. She must make a tiresome journey over six or seven States, with her manager-attorney, to fill up some stuffy dates. All her duties were depressing and she often longed to make an escape from things distressing and to jump into the lake. Every one is glad to tell you of the troubles he must bear; everyone is glad to sell you specimens of rich hot air.

Wife of Bruno Hunts 'Living' Kidnaped Baby

Mrs. Hauptmann in Detroit Checking Letter Asserting Husband Guiltless.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, March 21.—Mrs. Anna Hauptmann began a search through police and welfare home records today in an effort to corroborate an unsigned letter which declared Bruno Richard Hauptmann was not guilty of the kidnaping of Charles A. Lindbergh, jr., and described a "living Lindbergh baby" in Detroit.

The letter described in detail the "plot" and listed the kidnapers. It also stated that the body identified by Col. Lindbergh as that of his son, had been exhumed from a Bronx cemetery, clothed in the Lindbergh baby's clothing and left near Hopewell "to throw a scare into Lindy, who was known to have marked the ransom money."

New Jersey officials who examined the letter, received by a New York newspaperman who covered the Hauptmann trial, said they were inclined to discount it. "Further," one official said, "there is no doubt the body found in New Jersey is that of the Lindbergh baby. I witnessed the identification myself."

Pope Tells of Information.

At Trenton, N. J., Frederick A. Pope, associate counsel for Hauptmann, said he recently received a letter from Detroit which contained "information" about the kidnaping, and which he regarded as "highly important," because he felt it might support Hauptmann's declaration of innocence.

Mrs. Hauptmann came to Detroit by plane Wednesday to start a tour of 13 cities to raise funds for her husband's appeal from the death sentence.

The search started first in Welfare Department records in an effort to trace the baby who, the letter said, told officers when he was found that his name was "Johnny."

A "Johnny" Is Traced.

A check of records of abandoned children showed a boy whose only name was given as "Johnny" was found by police in Cadillac Square July 16, 1933. At the Children's Home, where he was placed, it was said he is now out for adoption.

The letter explained that the Lindbergh baby had been taken from Hopewell on the night of the kidnaping, March 1, to Brooklyn, and from there to Petros, Tenn.

The baby was brought to Detroit in an automobile trailer, the letter related, and abandoned in a theater.

The letter mentioned a member of the notorious "Purple Gang," of Detroit, as the purchaser of the information from one of the kidnapers, on the agreement that the information would not be used until after the kidnaper's death.

Newspaper files revealed that a man, identified with the "Purple Gang," whose name was similar to that used in the letter, disappeared in December of last year. The letter stated he had been "taken for a ride" December 24, 1934.

Fall Appeal Hearing Sought by Counsel

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, March 21.—Frederick A. Pope, one of Bruno Richard Hauptmann's attorneys, said today the defense probably would request the court of errors and appeals to delay hearing Hauptmann's appeal until its October term.

Defense counsel will appear before the court Thursday to ask that a day be fixed for hearing the appeal from Hauptmann's conviction of the Lindbergh baby killing. Ordinarily, the case would be heard at the next term, which opens May 21.

"We will ask for additional time," Pope said. "I don't see how we can be ready before September or October. We will lay the whole matter before the court and see what they decide to do."

Auto Repossession Concerns Warned

Cautioned Against Keeping Personal Property.

Assistant District Attorney David A. Hart, Police Court prosecutor, yesterday warned concerns engaged in the repossession of automobiles that they must return personal property found in the cars or face arrest.

His warning followed conviction of John F. Sleight, partner in the Washington Automobile Reference Co., 300 block of Pennsylvania avenue southeast, charged with taking property without a right. His concern, described by Hart as an "automobile snatching company," allegedly repossessed the car of Edward Robey, a Treasury Department engineer, because of a tire lien.

In the machine, it was testified, were six micrometers, property of the Robey-Deisel Engineering Co. The instruments were valued at $65. Sleight's concern, it was charged, failed to return the property to Robey.

Sleight will face sentence at a later date.

Machinery Ordered For Old Pierce Mill

The National Park Service yesterday ordered the Fitz Water Wheel Co., of Hanover, Pa., to proceed with its design for wooden machinery which will bring Rock Creek Park's historic Pierce Mill to life again after a lapse of many years.

The contract calls for the designing of a water wheel, shafting and gearing for driving three sets of buhrs. All will be made of wood. The restoration project was undertaken under a PWA allotment.

'The Best Dog Is'—A Welsh Terrier

Welsh Terrier Tough Afield, A Gentleman in the Parlor

Wendy Is Two Dogs in One, Good for the City and the Country, Too, Declares Her Mistress, Mrs. John J. Kelly.

If you want a dog that will pull the moles right out of your garden and yet act like a pampered Pekingese in a city apartment, then you want to pick out a Welsh terrier for your favored breed. That is the advice of Mrs. John J. Kelly, of Stamford, Conn., New York and Washington.

"I wanted a dog for the country and a dog for the city," Mrs. Kelly declared, "I bought a Welsh terrier from Percy Roberts, the handler, and that is what I have—two dogs in one. I wanted a dog that would act as a doorbell in the country, where one doesn't have doorbells, and Wendy here fulfills that function admirably. She is a good little watchdog, yet she is nice to the people who are admitted to the house."

A Nose for Moles.

The interview took place at 1821 Adams Mill road, where Mrs. Kelly is busy settling the estate of her mother, the late Mrs. Fred C. Bryan. Wendy of Gwyneth, as she is registered under this old Welsh name, looked impatiently out of the window. Wendy is a nice little Welsh, with the attractiveness of the airedale minus the clumsiness of the larger breed.

"We live in the country most of the time, going into New York for the worst of the winter. Wendy fits into our scheme of living very well. She has a marvelous nose and can pull moles out of the ground almost anywhere. She is a wonderful help in this way in my garden. That is one reason I like her," Mrs. Kelly declared. "Yet she is small enough and quiet enough for us to take her to the city. And the Welsh are very loyal little dogs."

As far as history goes, the Welsh terrier is generally acknowledged to be the oldest unadulterated type of terrier, a thing easily proved by old paintings and prints. The breed originated in Wales, where it was known as the black and tan wire-haired terrier, later taking the name of Welsh when the breed became popular throughout England.

True to Its Colors.

Even to this day, however, the breed has remained true to its original colors. Perhaps the great reason for the Welsh's popularity was due to the fact that the dog was a tremendous hunter of otters, foxes and badgers. And that hunting characteristic is borne out in Wendy, who is happiest, according to Mrs. Kelly, hunting woodchucks, rabbits or moles.

The Welsh terrier is a small, wiry-coated black and tan dog, standing not more than 16 inches at the shoulder and weighing about 20 pounds. He has a long head, flat skull that is narrow between the ears, but not as narrow as the fox terrier, getting slightly narrower toward the eye. The foreface should not "dish" or fall away quickly between and below the eyes. Jaws should be strong and muscular, of good punishing power and depth. The ears are V-shaped, small, not too thin, set on fairly high, carried forward and close to the cheek. The eyes are small, dark, expressive and indicate abundant keenness. D. C. 18th Per Capita In Transient Relief

The District ranked eighteenth in a tabulation of the amount spent per capita on transients in January in 32 cities of comparable size, according to a report made yesterday to the Board of Public Welfare by M. Alice Hill, director of the Public Assistance Division.

In the same month, the District stood fifteenth in the amount expended per case, Miss Hill pointed out. Of the entire amount spent for relief, only 7.5 per cent went for transients, she said.

39th Anniversary Now Going On!

—so far as we know tobacco was first used about 400 years ago

—throughout the years what one thing has given so much pleasure...so much satisfaction

Today the Governor of North Carolina says to the Governor of South Carolina—

"Have a cigarette"

TODAY people all over the world use tobacco in one form or another.

They chew it, they smoke it in pipes, they smoke cigars and cigarettes, and here is what an eminent physician said about cigarettes:

"I have been something of a student of cigarettes, and it is my belief that they offer the mildest and purest form in which tobacco is used."

Yes, nowadays the cigarette is the most popular form in which tobacco is used. A good cigarette certainly gives men and women a lot of pleasure.

Have a Chesterfield—

For another thing—they taste better.
